MISCELLANY.

THE RAINY EVENING.

BY MRS. C. LEE HENTZ.

A pleasant little group was gathered round uncle Ned's domestic hearth. He sat one side of the fire place, opposite to aunt Mary, who with her book in her hand, watched the children seated at the table, some reading, others sewing, all occupied but one, a child of larger growth, a young lady, who, being a guest of the family, was suffered to indulge in the pleasure of idleness without reproach.

"Oh, I love a rainy evening," said little Ann, looking up from her book, and meeting her mother's smiling glance, "it is so nice to sit by a good fire, and hear the rain pattering against the windows. Only I pity the poor people who have no house to cover them, to keep off the rain and cold."

"And I love a rainy evening too," cried George, a boy about twelve. "I can study so much better. My thoughts stay at home, and don't keep rambling out after the bright moon and stars. My heart feels warmer, and I really believe I love every body better than I do when the weather is fair."

Uncle Ned smiled, and gave the boy an approving pat upon the shoulder. Every one smiled but the young lady, who, with a languid, discontented air, now playing with a pair of scissors, now turning over the leaves of a book, then with an ill-suppressed yawn, leaned idly on her elbow and looked into the fire.

"And what do you think of a rainy evening Elizabeth?" asked uncle Ned. "I should like to hear your opinion also."

"I think it over dull and uninteresting indeed," answered she. "I always feel so stupid I can hardly keep myself awake—one cannot go abroad, or hope to see company at home. And one gets so tired of seeing the same faces all the time. I cannot imagine what George and Ann see to admire so much in a disagreeable rainy evening like this."

"Supposing I tell you a story to enliven you," said uncle Ned.

"O! yes, father, please tell us a story," exclaimed the children, simultaneously.

Little Ann was perched upon his knee as if by magic, and even Elizabeth moved her chair, as if excited to some degree of interest. George still held his book in hand, but his bright eyes sparkling with unusual animation, were riveted upon his uncle's face.

"I am going to tell you a story about a rainy evening," said uncle Ned.

"Oh! that will be so pretty," cried Ann, clapping her hands; but Elizabeth's countenance fell below zero. It was an ominous announcement.

"Yes," continued uncle Ned, "a rainy evening. But though clouds darker than those which now mantle the sky were lowering abroad, and the rain fell heavier and faster, the rainbow of my life was drawn most beautifully on those dark clouds, and its fair colors still shine lovely on the sight. It is no longer the bow of promise, but the realization of my fondest dreams."

George saw his uncle cast an expressive glance toward the handsome matron in the opposite corner, whose color perceptibly heightened, and he could not forbear exclaiming—

"Ah! aunt Mary is blushing. I understand uncle's metaphor. She is his rainbow, and he thinks life one long rainy day."

"Not exactly so. I meant your last conclusion. But don't interrupt me, my boy, and you shall hear a lesson which, young as you are, I trust you will never forget. When I was a young man I was thought quite handsome."

"Pa is as pretty as he can be now," interrupted little Ann, passing her hand fondly over his manly cheek.

Uncle Ned was not displeased with the compliment, for he pressed her closer to him while he continued—

"Well, when I was young, I was of a gay spirit, and a great favorite in society. The young ladies liked me for a partner in the dance, at the chess board, or in the evening walk, and I had reason to think several of them would have made no objection to me as a partner for life. Among all my young acquaintances, there was no one whose companionship was so pleasing as that of a maiden named Mary. Now, there are a great many Marys in the world, so you must not take it for granted I mean your mother or aunt. At any rate you must not look so significant, till I have finished my story. Mary was a sweet and lovely girl—with a current of cheerfulness running through her disposition, that made music as it flowed. It was an under current, however, always gentle, and kept within its legitimate channel; never overflowing into boisterous mirth or levity. She was the only daughter of her mother, and she a widow. Mrs. Carlton, such was her mother's name, was in lowly circumstances, and Mary had none of the appliances of wealth and fashion to decorate her person or gild her home. A very modest competency was all her portion, and she wished for nothing more. I have seen her, in a simple white dress, without a single ornament, unless it was a natural rose, transcend all the gauds of the world, which were sought by the attractions of dress to win the admiration of the multitude. But alas! for poor human nature! One of these dashing belles so fascinated my attention, that the gentle Mary was for a while forgotten. Theresa Vane was indeed a rare piece of moral mechanism. Her figure was the perfection of beauty, and she moved as if strung upon wires, so elastic and springing were her gestures. I never saw such lustrous hair—it was perfectly black, and shone like burnished steel, and then such ringlets! How they waved and rippled down her beautiful neck! She dressed with the most exquisite taste, delicacy and neatness, and whatever she wore assumed a peculiar grace and fitness, as if art loved to adorn what nature had made so fair. But what charmed me most, was the sunny smile that was always waiting to light up her countenance. To be sure she sometimes laughed a little too loud, but then her laugh was so musical, and her teeth so white, it was impossible to believe her guilty of rudeness or want of grace. Often, when I saw her in the social circle, so brilliant and smiling, the life and charm of every thing around her, I thought how happy the constant companionship of such a being would make me—what brightness she would impart to the fireside of home, what light, what joy, to the darkest scenes of existence!"

"Oh, uncle," interrupted George, laughing, "if I were aunt Mary, I would not let you praise any other lady so warmly. You are so taken up with her beauty, you have forgotten all about the rainy evening."

Aunt Mary smiled, but it is more than probable that George really touched one of the hidden springs of her woman's heart, for she looked down and said nothing.

"Don't be impatient," said uncle Ned, "and you shall not be cheated out of your story. I began it for Elizabeth's sake, rather than your's—and I see she is wide awake. She thinks I was by this time more than half in love with Theresa Vane, and she is more than half right. There had been a great many parties of pleasure, riding parties, sailing parties, and talking parties; and summer slipped by almost unconsciously. At length the autumnal equinox approached, and gathering clouds, north-east gales, and drizzling rains succeeded to the soft breezes, mellow skies, and glowing sunsets, peculiar to that beautiful season. For two or three days I was confined within doors by the continuous rains, and I am sorry to confess it, but the blue devils actually got possession of me—one strided upon my nose, another danced on the top of my head; one pinched my ear, and another turned somersets on my chin. You laugh, little Fanny, but they are terrible creatures these blue gentlemen. I could not endure them any longer. So the third rainy evening I put on my over-coat, buttoned it up to my chin, and taking my umbrella in my hand, set out in the direction of Mrs. Vane's."

"Here," thought I, as my fingers pressed the latch, "I shall find the moonlight smile that will illumine the darkness of night, the dull vapors will disperse before her radiant glance, and this interminable equinoctial storm transformed into a mere vernal shower, melting away in sunbeams in her presence." My gentle knock not being apparently heard, I stepped into the ante-room, set down my umbrella, took off my drenched overcoat, arranged my hair in the most graceful manner, and claiming a privilege to which perhaps I had no legitimate right, opened the door of the family sitting room, and found myself in the presence of the beautiful Theresa.

Here uncle Ned made a provoking pause. "Pray go on," "How was she dressed?"—

"And was she glad to see you?" assailed him on every side.

"How was she dressed?" repeated he, "I am not very well skilled in the technicalities of a lady's wardrobe, but I can give you the general impression of her personal appearance. In the first place there was a jumping up and off sliding step toward an opposite door, as I entered; but a disobliging chair was in the way, and I was making my lowest bow, before she found an opportunity of disappearing. Confused and mortified, she scarcely returned my salutation, while Mrs. Vane offered me a chair, and expressed in somewhat dubious terms, their gratification at such an unexpected pleasure. I have no doubt Theresa wished me at the bottom of the freezing ocean, if I might judge by the freezing glances shot at me through her long lashes. She sat uneasily in her chair, trying to conceal her slipshod shoes—and furtively arranging her dress about the shoulders and waist. It was a most rebellious subject, for the body and skirt were at open warfare, refusing to have any communication with each other.

Where was the graceful shape I had so much admired! In vain I sought its exquisite outlines in the loose slovenly robe. Where were those glistening ringlets and burnished locks that had so lately rivalled the tresses of Medusa? Her hair was put in tangled bunches behind her ears, and tucked up behind in a kind of Gordian knot, which would have required the sword of an Alexander to untie. Her frock was a soiled and dingy silk, with trimmings of sallow blonde, and a faded fancy handkerchief was thrown over one shoulder.

"You have caught me entirely en dishabille," said she, recovering partially from her embarrassment; "but the evening was so rainy, and no one but mother and myself, I never dreamed of such an exhibition of gallantry as this."

"She could not disguise her vexation, with all her efforts to conceal it, and Mrs. Vane evidently shared her daughter's chagrin. I was wicked enough to enjoy their confusion, and never appeared more at ease, or played the agreeable with more success. My goddess had fallen from the pedestal on which my imagination had enthroned her, despoiled of the beautiful drapery which had imparted to her such ideal loveliness. I knew I was a favorite in the family, for I was wealthy and independent, and perhaps of all Theresa's admirers, what the world would call the best match. I maliciously asked her to play on the piano; but she made a thousand excuses, studiously keeping back the true reason, her disordered attire. I asked her to play a game of chess, but "she had a headache; she never could do any thing on a rainy evening."

"At length I took my leave, inwardly blessing the moving spirit which had led me abroad that night that the spell which had so long enthralled my senses might be broken. Theresa called on one of her lambent smiles as I bade her adieu.

"Never call again on a rainy evening," said she, sportively: "I am always so wretchedly dull. I believe I was born to live among the sunbeams, the moonlight, and the stars. Clouds will never do for me."

"Amen," I silently responded, as I closed the door. While I was putting on my coat, I overheard without the smallest intention of listening, a passionate exclamation from Theresa.

"Good heavens, mother! wasthere ever any thing so unlucky? I never thought of seeing my neighbor's dog to-night! If I have not been completely caught!"

"I hope you will mind my advice next time," replied her mother in a pained tone. "I told you not to set down in that slovenly dress. I have no doubt you have lost him forever."

"Here I made good my retreat, not wishing to enter the penetralia of family secrets.

"The rain still continued unabated, but my social feelings were far from being damped. I had the curiosity to make another experiment. The evening was not very far advanced, and as I turned from Mrs. Vane's fashionable mansion, I saw a modest light glimmering in the distance, and I halted it as the shipwrecked mariner hails the star that guides him o'er the ocean's foam to the home he has left behind. Though I was young and gay, and a passionate admirer of beauty, I had a very exalted idea of domestic felicity. I knew that there was many a rainy day in life, and I thought that the companion who was born alone for sunbeams and moonlight would not aid me to dissipate their gloom. I had, moreover, a shrewd suspicion that the daughter who thought it a sufficient excuse for shameful personal neglect, that there was no one present but her mother, would as a wife, be equally regardless of a husband's presence. While I pursued these reflections, my feet involuntarily drew nearer and more near to the light that had been the lodestone of my opening manhood. I had continued to meet Mary in the gay circles I frequented, but I had lately become almost a stranger to her house.

"Shall I be a welcome guest?" said I to myself as I crossed the threshold. Shall I find her en dishabille likewise, and discover that feminine beauty and feminine grace are incompatible with a rainy evening? I heard a sweet voice reading aloud as I opened the door, and I knew that it was the voice that was once music to my ears. Mary rose at my entrance, laying her book quietly on the table and greeting me with a modest grace and self-possession peculiar to herself. She looked surprised and a little embarrassed, but very far from being displeased. She made no allusion to my estrangement or neglect; expressed no astonishment at my untimely visit, nor once hinted that being alone with her mother and not anticipating visitors, she thought it unnecessary to wear the habiliments of a lady. Never in my life had I seen her look so lovely. Her dress was perfectly plain, but every fold was arranged by the graces. Her dark brown hair, which had a natural wave in it, now uncurled by the dampness, was put back in smooth ringlets from her brow, revealing a face which did not consider its beauty wasted because a mother's eye alone rested upon its bloom. A beautiful cluster of autumnal roses placed in a glass on the table, perfumed the apartment, and a bright blaze on the hearth diffused a spirit of cheerfulness around, while it relieved the atmosphere of its excessive moisture. Mrs. Carlton was an invalid and suffered from an inflammation of the eyes. Mary had been reading aloud to her from her favorite book. What do you think it was? No other than the Bible. Mary was not ashamed to have such a fashionable young gentleman as I then was, see what her occupation had been. What a contrast to the scene I had just quitted! How I loathed myself for the infatuation which had led me to prefer the artificial graces of a belle to this pure child of nature. I drew my chair to the table, and entreated that they would not look upon me as a stranger, but as a friend, anxious to be restored to the forfeited privileges of an old acquaintance. I was understood in a moment, and without a single reproach was admitted again to confidence and familiarity. The hours I had spent with Theresa seemed a kind of mesmeric slumber, a blank in my existence, or at least a feverish dream. "What do you think of a rainy evening, Mary?" asked I before I left her.

"I love it of all things," replied she with animation. "There is something so home-drawing, so heart-knitting in its influence. The dependencies which bind us to the world seem withdrawn, and retiring within ourselves, we learn more of the deep mysteries of our own being."

"Mary's soul beamed from her eyes, as they turned with a transient obliquity towards the heavens. She paused, as if fearful of unsealing the fountains of her heart. I said that Mrs. Carlton was an invalid, and consequently retired early to her chamber; but I lingered till a late hour, nor did I go till I had made a full confession of my folly, repentance, and awakened love, and as Mary did not shut the door in my face, you may imagine she was not sorely displeased.

"Ah! I know who Mary was, I knew all the time," exclaimed George, looking archly at aunt Mary. A bright tear which at that moment fell into her lap, showed that though a silent, she was not an uninterested auditor.

"You haven't done, father," said little Ann, in a disappointed tone, "I thought you were going to tell us a story. You have been talking about yourself all the time."

"I have been something of an egotist, my little girl, but I wanted to show my dear young friend here how much might depend upon a rainy evening. Life is not made all of sunshine. The happiest and most prosperous must have their seasons of gloom and darkness, and we be to those from whose souls no rays of light emanate to gild those darkened hours. I bless the God of the rain as well as of the sunshine. I can read His mercy and love, as well in the tempest, whose winds obscure the visible glory of His creation, as in the splendor of the rising sun, or the soft dews that descend after his setting radiance. I began with a metaphor. I said a rainbow was drawn on the clouds, that lowered on that eventful day, and that it still continued to shine with undiminished beauty. Woman, my children, was sent by God to be the rainbow of man's darker destiny. From the glowing red, emblematic of that love which warms and gladdens his existence to the violet melting in the blue of heaven, symbolical of the faith which links him to a purer world, her blending virtues mingling with each other in beautiful harmony, earnest of future blessings in those regions where no rainy evenings ever come to obscure the brightness of eternal day."

DANGER OF COMETS. Concerning the danger to be apprehended from the these erratic bodies, Professor Olmstead, in a lecture recently delivered at New Haven, (Conn.) remarked as follows:

"Every thing in nature is so nicely adjusted, that the universe has nothing in itself to prevent it from standing forever, till the fiat of Jehovah, who created it brings it to an end. Even if comets should come in the place of the earth's orbit, which they seldom do, hundreds of thousands of them might pass without touching the earth. If the train should strike the earth it could not penetrate our atmosphere, being much lighter than the air. But would float at a great distance above us, like wood upon the water. It might cause something like the shooting stars, but could produce no greater harm than perhaps a storm or a visitation of the air."

The quantity of matter in comets is exceedingly small. Even in the nucleus the matter must be of the extreme tenuity. One comet came among the satellites of Jupiter, and though its orbit was entirely changed, it had no perceptible influence on the planet of Jupiter. It was like the influence of a feather on the earth; though the feather attracts the earth as much as the earth attracts the feather, yet the influence in one case is much more apparent than in the other.

"It is pretty generally believed that comets shine by reflected light, and not per se. The train is supposed to be particles carried off from the comet by the sun's rays infringing on the body. Newton supposed that it might be vapor arising from heat.

"The present comet has passed its perihelion, and is now receding from us, perhaps never to return. It is one of the most splendid sights which man has ever been permitted to see."

A SYSTEMATIC GIRL. A gentleman, in a lecture at the Farmer and Mechanic Jubilee at Bridgewater, (Mass.) humorously illustrated the advantages of method and order, by giving an account of some domestics of his hiring. He once hired a very smart girl; she was ever on the go from early dawn to bed-time. After a few years the girl, as girls often will, found a husband, and quitted earning wages, and he was obliged to hire another. But she was so methodical and apparently so slow, his wife was of the opinion she did not earn her wages. True, she did all the work and had spare time, but she did not seem to be doing much. He one day watched her progress and found that every movement was like clock-work—no missteps were taken. After the fire was made every kettle was properly adjusted, and every dish was ready at the proper time. The table was set while dinner was cooking—every thing had its place, and there was no lacking article at dinner. There was no bustling, and hurrying, and fretting, and skipping, to show out activity; but every thing was quietly performed in order and in season. On noticing accurately her mode of doing business, the gentleman and his wife were both of the opinion this was the most valuable help he had hired. This led him to see how some farmers lost time. They would hurry to a distant field, and soon find they had left some important tool behind; a boy must be sent for it, and the men must sit and wait.

PAUPERISM. Ever since the organization of temperance societies in the State of Massachusetts, say some five years ago, pauperism has been on a decline. In 1838, the Bay State was saddled with the support of no less than thirteen thousand six hundred and eighty-eight paupers, more than half of which number—say seven thousand one hundred and fifty-four were reduced to the most abject want in consequence of intemperance alone. At present, State papers only number five thousand two hundred and fifty-one, including two thousand eight hundred and five foreigners. The largest number of these wretches have been reduced to poverty, not by liquor, but through the bad state of the times—the majority of them never having acquired any trade or profession, and depending merely upon the labor of their hands for daily sustenance. These facts speak volumes for the temperance cause.

MILK. The New York Express says that six thousand quarts of milk a day, are now brought by the Erie Railroad to New York; and that contracts are made for supplying twenty thousand quarts a day next year. This milk, pure and sweet, has been retailed through the year, at four cents a quart, at which price it pays a handsome profit to those engaged in the business. This low price has regulated that of all other milk coming to the city. A saving has thus been made to the citizens of at least half a million of dollars a year. The farmers of Orange County, in that State, make more money by selling milk at two cents a quart, than by making and selling butter at thirty-one cents a pound. Milk, in Boston, is still sold at the old price of six cents a quart, except to some persons who use large quantities, and obtain it for five cents.

CANAL ACROSS THE ISTHMUS OF PANAMA. A Texan paper says, that the canal company chartered by the government of New Grenada, have commenced excavating the grand canal across the Isthmus of Panama. The country through which the canal will pass, has a mean elevation of only thirty-seven feet above the level of the sea. The entire length of the canal will be about forty-nine miles; but only twelve and a half miles will be excavated, the rivers Chagres and Grande will be rendered navigable the remaining distance. There will be sufficient depth of water for ships of fourteen hundred tons. The work, it is believed will be completed in five years, and the astonishing spectacle will be presented of the navies of the old world sailing from ocean to ocean, through the dis severed chain of the Andes and Cordilleras, between the two mighty continents of North and South America!

NEWSPAPERS. A newspaper is a school in a family worth ten dollars a year. Even the most barren paper, brings something new. Children read or hear the contents, intelligence of the affairs of the world, and acquire useful knowledge of more importance to them in life, than a present of fifty acres of land. Parents are not aware of the vast importance of a newspaper in a family of children. Take two families of children equally smart and both going to the same school, let one of them have the free use of a newspaper, and let the other be deprived of the use of it, and it would excite astonishment to mark the difference between them. Full one half, and an important half, of education is derived from newspapers. What parent would not wish his children respectable? Who would be willing to have his neighbors' children more intelligent than his own? and yet how trifling is the sum a paper costs! It is even in these hard times absolutely contemptible in amount, and no man ever felt it, except in its beneficial consequences, who paid the subscription regularly once a year.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, April 6th, 1843.

It is understood, that mechanics are likely to be soon employed in this city, and at good wages for their labour. "We have been informed," says the Evening Bulletin, by a contractor, that there will soon be a demand for all the unemployed masons, carpenters, and other mechanics, as contracts have been completed for erecting something like one hundred buildings in this city during the next six months." This is certainly encouraging to the worthy stone dealers in your town. No decent building goes up now-a-days here, without containing more or less of your Quincy granite.

I have endeavored to see, in vain, the Act relative to the Neponset Bridge Corporation, but I learn its features are substantially these,—the Corporation are allowed to take tolls, so that six per cent yearly interest shall be allowed on their whole capital stock of $35,000, clear of all expenses. Returns to be made yearly, and the whole subject to a revision by any future Legislature. On the supposition that $2,000 yearly will be expended for repairs, $2,100 for dividends, and the tolls be $200 per annum, the reduction would be one third the present rates. Already have the stockholders received six times $35,000. Has our Legislature not done gross injustice to your town and others, by continuing on them a burden, that of right, of justice, and in equity, they ought to have been free from in 1843. Comment is unnecessary. Where was the voice of your democratic representative on the final action of this miserable bill in the House.

QUINCY LYCEUM. The concluding lecture before this institution the present season, was delivered by Rev. Thomas M. Clark, an Episcopal clergyman of Boston. His subject was American Institutions. This lecture is ranked by intelligent persons, who listened with admiration to the gifted speaker, as one among the very few excellent addresses with which the Lyceum has been favored during the season that has just terminated. Unforseen events alone prevented us from listening to the lecturer, whom we have always heard mentioned as one of interest and talent.

TREMONT THEATRE, BOSTON. At a large meeting of the proprietors, it was voted not to accept the offer from Rev. Mr. Kirk's society of fifty thousand dollars for the Tremont Theatre and land, the society paying one thousand dollars per annum to the Federal street theatre. By the existing agreement all shareholders in the Federal street theatre are entitled to free admission to all performances at the Tremont; and it was intimated to the purchasers that an indemnity would be claimed for the loss of this privilege, if the Tremont were sold and converted into a church.

DEATH FROM A DUEL. New Orleans papers bring intelligence of the death of Hon. George A. Waggaman, from a wound received in a duel with Dennis Prieur, Esq. He suffered the amputation of his leg, but this was unavailing. He had been a resident of Louisiana for the last thirty years, and has filled various public stations, such as District Judge, Secretary of State, member of the House of Representatives, and of the State Senate. At a time of high party excitement, he was sent to the United States Senate. He bore a very high character, and was a near connexion of President Tyler by marriage.

CONNECTICUT. The annual election in this State took place on Monday last. Roger F. Baldwin was the Whig candidate for Governor; Chauncey F. Cleveland, the present incumbent, was the democratic candidate. By returns from the whole State, except a few towns, Cleveland comes near an election by the people; and if he fails there, he will be chosen by the Legislature, both branches of which will be democratic.

For members of Congress, three of the democratic candidates are ascertained to be elected, while from the other parts of the State no returns have as yet been received. Connecticut is entitled to six members.

THE MERCER TRIAL. The trial of this individual, who is arraigned for the murder of the seducer of his sister, is still going on in New Jersey. The ground of defence, for which the evidence is all in, was the violent insanity of the prisoner, and a great deal of testimony was taken concerning the outrage offered to his sister by Heberton, in order to account for this insanity. The Attorney General had made the argument on the part of the Commonwealth taking the ground that the character of the deceased had been unjustly aspersed, that the prisoner was of a violent temper instead of the peaceable disposition that had been claimed for him; and that he was not insane at the time he committed the act.

FATAL OCCURRENCE. Melzar Gardner, formerly of Hingham, (Mass.), and editor of the Portsmouth (Va.) Chronicle, was recently, shot in a scuffle with Mordecai Cook, at Norfolk, (Va.) Gardner had drawn a pistol to shoot Cook, who seized it, and in the strife it was fired, and the contents lodged in the body of Gardner. He died in about fifteen minutes. An investigation into the matter has resulted in the acquittal of Cook.

RHODE ISLAND. The first election in this State, under the new constitution, took place on Wednesday last, and much excitement prevailed in every part of the State. Fenner, the candidate for Governor of the present State Administration, has been elected over Carpenter the nominee of the Suffrage party. The vote stood for Fenner, 8956; Carpenter, 7110. In the Senate there are twenty four Fenner and seven Dorr men; and in the House, forty nine Fenner and nineteen Dorr men.

REVOLTING MURDER. The New Orleans Picayune contains an account of a most horrible murder, which seems too outrageous to have been perpetrated by any human being. A man, at Cypress Bend, (Ark.) being robbed of a negro, as he supposed, by a wood chopper, swore that "his dogs should eat the first wood chopper that ventured upon his ground." Soon after one called and requested a night's lodging, which he granted; and, barring the doors, let in upon him a number of young dogs, which, however, the stranger kept at bay.—He then turned in a parcel of full grown dogs; and finding that they, too, were foiled in the attack, he got a gun and shot the man, leaving his corpse there to be devoured by the dogs. A reward of one thousand dollars has been offered by the Governor for his apprehension.

A NOBLE ACT. Robert Seaver, Esq. of Jamaica Plain, has voluntarily relinquished the sale of intoxicating drinks at his store, in that village. This act was something of a pecuniary sacrifice on his part, but being convinced of the evil which the trade engendered among his neighbors and friends, he has come out like a man and joined the Washingtonians. From his letter to the Washingtonian Society, announcing the fact, the following extract is made:—

"The cause of Total Abstinence is a noble and a glorious cause, it is the cause of God; and therefore it appears to me as a brother of the same family, of which God is the Heavenly Father, it devolves upon us as children and brothers to sustain the good cause; and glad I am that the time has arrived in which I have given up the sale and use of the worst of deadly friends."

BOSTON WEEKLY BULLETIN. It affords us gratification to notice this new hebdomad, not only from its neat mechanical execution, but from the tact, talent and judgment which is so apparent in its editorial department. Its editor, Charles H. Peabody, Esq. deserves a generous patronage, and his assiduity to please and entertain his patrons cannot go unrewarded. The most abundant success to our friend in his efforts.

BETTER TIMES COMING. Nathan Appleton, Esq. of Boston, a gentleman of large experience and sound judgment, in a communication to the Secretary of the Treasury, in reply to certain inquiries, relating to commerce, made by that officer, gives it as his opinion that the present depressed state of things, growing out of the wild overtrade of 1835 and 1836, and the consequent derangement of the currency in 1837, is drawing to a close. He says,—it is inevitable that a very considerable improvement in trade should take place during the first half of the year 1843.

NARROW ESCAPE. We learn from the Boston Times, that on Tuesday afternoon last, as Jonathan Wheeler, of Dorchester, was at work at the bottom of a well twenty five feet deep, the foundation of a chimney situated within a few feet of the well gave way, and a large mass of brick and rubbish was precipitated into the well, covering him to the depth of ten or twelve feet. He remained in that situation over an hour, and what is most remarkable, he was taken out without sustaining the least injury.

LATER FROM TEXAS. The Galveston (Texas) Times intimates that the British Government is offering to mediate between Texas and Mexico, and procure the acknowledgement of the independence of the former, on the condition that slavery be abolished in the Republic. Gen. Felix Houston has recently expressed an intention to aid in conducting an expedition against Mexico.

COLD AND STORM AT TEXAS. Houston (Texas) papers of a late date have been received at New Orleans. The storm and severe cold which were experienced at New Orleans on the 15th and 16th ult., extended also to Galveston, and a man, who was fishing for oysters in the bay, was frozen to death. It is stated that the bay shore was literally strewn with frozen fish!

PHILADELPHIA SATURDAY MUSEUM. This is certainly a valuable family newspaper, and the last number was laden with its usual excellent variety of reading. Subscription per year, two dollars.

ELECTIONARY OLIO. We have no doubt that the entertainment offered by Mr. Stark, who will be assisted by the admired and celebrated Mr. Murdoch, will more than remunerate those who attend for the small amount expended for admission, by the knowledge which they will receive.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS. Full, and in others only partial, returns, have been received of the election of members of Congress in the second, third, fifth, sixth and seventh districts in this State. In the fifth, Hon. Charles Hudson, (whig), has undoubtedly been re-elected. The other districts have failed to elect.

The Legislature of Maryland have given the sporting gentlemen a pretty severe dose, in a gaming law, which they have just passed. It makes the offence of keeping a gaming table a misdemeanor, and fines the person keeping it one thousand dollars for each offence. Door keepers, waiters, and those in any way aiding or assisting, shall be fined twenty dollars for each offence. Betters at such tables are held guilty of misdemeanor, and are to be fined twenty dollars.

It is said that a Senator in Maine, on arriving at Augusta, by mistake went to the arsenal instead of the State House, and on demanding his seat, was required to sign the books of the establishment, when he found himself enlisted in the army for seven years.

A rumor has been extensively circulated, of a mutiny on board the United States ship John Adams, in which it was said that five of the supposed mutineers were summarily shot down on the deck by the officers. It is ascertained that the rumor is groundless.

The collection of the Taxes was bid off by Capt. Lewis Bass, for two cents and two mills on the dollar, and he was accordingly elected to that office. The meeting was then dissolved.

Agreeably to a warrant, the inhabitants re-assembled at four o'clock, and chose Mr. William Seaver, Moderator.

Resolved—That the report of the Selectmen for straightening the road near Alphens Spear's be accepted, and that the improvement be completed within one year.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

Two prisoners, confined in the New Bedford jail, lately knocked the turnkey down, and made their escape.

The Directors of the Village Bank of Danvers, (Mass.) have voted to wind up its concerns.

The rumor of a collision between the Secretaries of the Navy and of the Treasury, proves to be entirely destitute of truth.

The Hon. Samuel McRoberts, Senator in Congress from Illinois, lately died in Cincinnati, (Ohio) aged about forty years, after a short illness, resulting from a cold taken in crossing the mountains, on his way home from the session which has recently closed.

By an arrival at New Orleans from Tampico, the report of the escape of the Texans captured at Mier is fully confirmed. They rose upon their guards, succeeded in taking their arms, killed a great proportion of them, and made a hasty retreat towards Texas. It is stated that four or five thousand Mexicans had been dispatched in pursuit of the Texans. At the latest accounts they had not overtaken them. The Mexicans were ordered, in case they should recapture the prisoners, to put every man to death.

The Legislature of Virginia, the evening preceding its adjournment, passed an income tax for the support of the State government.

The County Commissioners of Middlesex County, have determined not to grant any licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Messrs. Thomas Whitmore and David Crosby argued the case against licenses, and Messrs. J. E. Buttrick and J. A. Nelson in favor. The decision of the Court was made after a full hearing of both sides.

An Irish Repeal Association has been recently formed at Roxbury, (Mass.) of three hundred members, and Hon. Isaac H. Wright elected President.

Passed Assistant Surgeon Richard W. Leacock, late of the United States Brig Somers, killed himself by shooting through the head with a pistol.—He was partially deranged from the effects of a severe attack of yellow fever on the Coast of Africa. He was twenty eight years of age and a native of Norfolk, (Va.)

The snow in the woods in the vicinity of Bangor, (Me.) is now nearly or quite four feet deep. Several deer have been taken alive and brought into that city. The teamsters up the river occasionally catch a deer, secure him upon their loads, and budge home with him.

James C. Sprigg, the member of Congress from Kentucky, whose ear was recently bitten off in a drunken affray in a grog shop, in Washington, has announced himself as a candidate for re-election!

General Winfield Scott says he shall never be in the field as a candidate for the Presidency, unless placed there by a regular nomination.

They write from Utica, (N. Y.) and beyond, that the snow is four feet deep. The woods are quite impenetrable.

It appears by the late census that the four States of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, contain nearly eight million of swine.

The month of March has been colder than in any year since 1833, when it was about the same.

The charter Elections will be held in New York city on the 11th inst. The mayor, the members of both boards of the common council, and many inferior officers will then be chosen.

The grand jury of Portland, (Me.) at their late session, found sixty bills of indictment, of which forty four were for violations of the license law, and one for a LIBEL upon a run-seller!

The abolitionists of Michigan lately assembled in State council, and nominated James G. Birney for Governor, and Luther F. Stevens for Lieutenant Governor.

The Western Railroad Company has expended thirty five thousand dollars the past winter in clearing the track of snow. The charge for this work, on all the railroads, has been very heavy, owing to the great quantity of snow which has fallen.

The substance of the late Treaty with Mexico as published in the National Intelligencer, provides for the payment, in five years, in quarterly instalments, in the City of Mexico, of the awards under the Convention of the 11th of April, 1839.

The Legislature of Maine has refused to receive that State's proportion of the proceeds of the sales of public lands, awarded to it under the distribution act, amounting to seventeen thousand dollars.

The NORFOLK COUNTY ABOLITION SOCIETY will hold their annual meeting at East Medway, on WEDNESDAY, April 19th, at ten o'clock, A. M., in the Parish Hall, near Rev. Sewall Harding's Meeting House.

Persons are invited from every part of the county, whether associated in societies or not, and all who are interested in the noble cause of abolition, are earnestly solicited to attend the meeting.

Societies should send a large number of delegates, that we may have a full representation from every part of the county.

Several distinguished gentlemen are expected to be present from abroad; yet each delegate should come prepared to add something to the interest of the meeting.

LYMAN B. LARKIN, Cor. Sec'y.

EVERY HUMAN HAIR IS A PERFECT TUBE, with innumerable ramifications of the arteries branch along its inner surface. Through these vessels the blood, which imparts vitality to the hair, circulates, and when from obstructions in the pores of the scalp, the supply of blood and moisture is cut off, the hair loses its gloss, becomes dry and harsh, and falls off.

Now it is obvious that unless the pores of the scalp be opened, the capillary action of the blood restored, and the seurf and dandruff proceeding from suppressed perspiration removed, baldness must speedily ensue. JAYNE'S HAIR TONIC will produce all these effects—may more, it will re-clothe the bald places with vigorous and luxuriant tresses, and ensure a healthy and redundant growth of hair, as long as it is used in conformity with the printed directions which accompany each bottle, and to which are appended numerous testimonials of its efficacy, from some of our most distinguished clergymen, and physicians.

POETRY.

I WILL PRAY.

I will rise and pray while the dews of morn
Like gems are scattered o'er tree and thorn,
Ere the sun comes up, in his glorious bower,
To waken the bird and open the flower;
I will turn from earth to Heaven aspiring
With faith unshaken, hope uniting,
And for strength to walk through the weary day,
To the God of love will I kneel and pray.

I will at noon, when the fervid glow
Of the sultry sun is upon my brow;
When the flocks have sought the shading trees;
When the stream is silent, and hushed the breeze;
And praise the doings of Nature's God,
Then closing my eyes on the glorious day,
To the God of love will I kneel and pray.

I will pray at eve when the crimson light
Is passing away from the mountain's height,
When the holy, solemn twilight hour,
Is hushing the bird and closing the flower;
When all is rest, and the stars come forth,
To keep their watch o'er the sleeping earth,
To him who hath kept, and blessed through the day,
To the God of love will I kneel and pray.

Thus will I pray, for I find it sweet,
To be often found at my Maker's feet,
I will always pray—the heavenly road,
I never shall faint while I lean on my God!
I shall gather strength for my upward flight,
My path will be as the shining light,
It shall lighten to perfect, eternal day,
Therefore to God will I always pray.

THE WISH.

Mine be a cot beside a hill;
A beehive's hum shall soothe mine ear,
A willow brook that turns a mill,
With many a fall shall linger near.
The swallow oft beneath my thatch,
Shall twitter from her clay-built nest;
Oft shall the pilgrim lift the latch,
To share my meal, a welcome guest.

Around my ivied porch shall spring
Each fragrant flower that drinks the dew;
And Mary, at her wheel shall sing,
In russet gown and apron blue.
The village church, amid the trees
Where first our marriage vows were given,
With merry peals shall swell the breeze,
And point with taper spire to Heaven!

WASHINGTON.

The mountain pyramids of Egypt stand,
Dim relics of old longings after name;
Stupendous piles up in the desert sand,
The monuments of folly, not of fame.

Deeds, deeds are more enduring e'en than stone,
As gives the Western world conclusive proof,
While soars the name of Washington alone,
In freedom's air, above the mountain cone,
Born upon eagle's pinions far aloof,
O, wide and high has the eagle flown
Shall be the Father of his Nation known,
Asking no marble for sepulchral roof,
The first in war, the first in peace, and first
In everlasting recollection nurse!

ANECDOTES.

A negro boy, who got a strapping once in a while, received a sound one for being suspected of stealing onions; but he was innocent. An honest son of Erin put his head into a lawyer's office and asked the inmate, "and what do you sell here?" "Blackheads," replied the limb of the law. "Och! then to be sure," said Pat, "it must be a good trade; for I see that there's but one left."

A sailor having attempted to kiss a lass he met on shore, she bridled up and declared he had insulted her; whereupon Jack exclaimed, "Well, that beats all! I've been to sea these twenty years, and never knew a salute called an insult afore!"

A colored servant, sweeping out a bachelor's room, found a sixpence on the carpet, which he carried to the owner. "You may keep it for your honesty," said he. A short time afterwards he missed his gold pencil-case, and on inquiring of the servant if he had seen it, "Yes, sir," was the reply. "And what did you do with it?" "Kept it for my honesty, sir!" The old bachelor mizzled.

A Sabbath school teacher gave out the following question to her class: "What proof can you assign that the Bible was written by good men?" A little girl four years old, rose and replied, "Dad men would not have written so much against themselves."

A robust countryman meeting a physician, ran to hide behind a wall; being asked the cause, he replied—"It is so long since I have been sick, that I am ashamed to look the physician in the face."

The Newport (R. I.) Mercury is eighty-two years old! The venerable old patriarch must sometimes wonder at the change in those of his race since his youthful days.

A select committee of the Legislature of New York reported in favor of appropriating three thousand dollars for the purchase of a number of the celebrated engravings of the Pathology of Drunkenness, to be posted up in sailing vessels of all kinds, whether in sea, lake, or river, in order to counteract the temptation of intemperance.

In the last thirteen years, seven hundred and forty thousand persons have emigrated from Great Britain and Ireland to the United States. During that period it is supposed that two hundred and fifty thousand have gone from those islands to the Indies, the Cape of Good Hope, and Australia.

An insane inmate of the Ipswich, (Mass.) almshouse, perfectly quiet and harmless, has been accidentally discovered by his parents and brothers, who reside in the City of New York. He wandered from home twenty-three years ago, since which they had obtained no trace of him, although he has been in Ipswich twenty years.

A nest of counterfeiters has been discovered at Warsaw, (N. Y.) It consisted of some six or eight individuals, who have heretofore been considered respectable. A large quantity of dies, plates, paper, and counterfeit bills, were taken.

No one is permitted to preside over the columns of a public journal in Greece, unless he have a diploma of full education in some University.

Fifteen or twenty persons—a regular gang—have been arrested in Philadelphia, charged with passing or having attempted to pass, counterfeit five and ten dollar notes, on different banking institutions in that vicinity.

From the Ladies' Wreath.

MY COUSIN KATE.

Intimately interwoven with the fibres of the human heart are the chords which bind each individual to his race, and mighty is the influence that woman exerts upon the destinies of individuals and nations. Her smile and her tear have been, from the earliest period to the present hour, all potent to soften the asperities of man's rougher nature, awakening him to the performance of the loftiest deeds, inciting within him the noblest virtues, and unloosing his soul from the thral

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, April 13th, 1843.

The pleasant weather we have realized the past few days, has thronged our principal streets, not only with business men, but also with the beauty and fashion of the city. Business is slowly improving, and prices on many articles advancing. Money is very abundant, and bids fair to command very soon on loans but four to five per cent interest. It is already at this low stand in New York.

Our Post Office and the Banks here, in New York, and in Philadelphia, refuse to take Spanish money for more than twenty three cents for the quarter dollar, ten cents for the dime, and five cents for the four pence half penny. This depreciation in this kind of money has been and is a serious loss to all classes of the community, as a large portion of the silver money in circulation throughout the United States is Spanish coin. The review of the Boston Market the past week exhibits an evident business improvement. The prices of West India goods, however, continue the same with the exception of molasses; this article is in good demand, and has gone up a few cents on the gallon. The arrivals in flour have been very small, and the supply now is almost wholly in the hands of the regular dealers who are realizing $4 7-8 to $5 1-8 for Ohio and similar grades, from their stores, and $5 1-2 to $5 5-8 for Genesee common, and $5 3-4 to $6 1-3 per barrel for fancy brands. I have no doubt the prices of flour will fall again in a few days.

The Banks generally in Massachusetts declared last week a semi-annual dividend of nearly three per cent, while some of our Insurance Companies declared a semi-annual dividend of ten per cent. Some of the Railroad Stock in Massachusetts, stood last week in price as follows: Boston and Worcester, ten per cent. advance; Providence 15 7-8 per share, or nearly par value; Western Railroad, $44 per share or $6 below par; Boston and Lowell, 19 7-8 per cent. advance; Eastern Railroad, $89 1-2 per share. Bank Stock ranges at about $80 per share, par value $100.

The Brighton Market on Monday last was better than usual. The prices of beef cattle averaged nearly $5.00 per hundred. So much for prices, etc.

Tidings of the New York City Election has just reached us by the morning's mail. The democratic candidate for Mayor is elected by six thousand votes majority, and both branches of the city government are largely democratic. The Albany Municipal election has resulted in favor of the whigs. The foreign intelligence of the past week is not of a very pacific character. By the latest advices from China (December 10), we learn that "treason, stratagem and spoils" were the order of the day in Canton.

More border troubles are brewing on the Canada lines. An American citizen has recently been arrested and abducted on the American side, by authority of British Magistrates in New Brunswick. This fact has been officially communicated at Washington. An important correspondence has been recently going on between Hon. Daniel Webster, Secretary of State, and the Hon. Edward Everett, our Minister to England, occasioned by the recent discussion in the British Parliament, endeavoring to set up the distinction in our late Treaty, between the right of visiting, and the right of search, of our vessels on the high seas, and in foreign ports. The Madisonian of Wednesday last, has the following remarks on this subject, which are presumed to be semi-official:

"The Despatch from the Government of the United States to our Minister in London, is a matter for grave consideration, inasmuch as the consequences which may spring from the correspondence to ensue, would be likely to affect the whole American People, and perhaps the whole world."

It cannot be disguised that the position assumed in the Despatch, as directed by the head of our Government, is nothing less than a second Declaration of Independence. That former Presidents may not have admitted or disavowed any supremacy of the seas claimed by Great Britain, may easily be attributed to the fact that, although that power may have really entertained such pretensions, they were never so boldly and distinctly asserted as has recently been done by Lord Aberdeen and Sir Robert Peel.

The question is now brought up, by both Governments, prominently before the bar of the world, for an inevitable final decision. No ingenuity of Diplomats can hide the substance and the merits of the question from the eyes of the People of both hemispheres. The positions of both Governments are broadly defined, and we regret to say it, but it is obvious to all, the grounds assumed are widely assunder.

The British Government has undertaken to make a distinction between the right of search and the right of visitation. The exercise of the former is disclaimed in time of peace. The latter is claimed at all times, in the most emphatic terms.

The American Government denies that any distinction exists between the two alleged rights, and declares, even if it does exist, that the latter shall not, as a right, be exercised on American vessels in time of peace. TRI-MOUNTAIN.

An entire residence of iron, has been constructed in England, for an African King; and a London journal states that the application of iron to home architecture, is daily becoming more general.

The County Commissioners of Berkshire have resolved to grant no licenses for the sale of ardent spirits during the ensuing year.

The recent London Bankers' Circular estimates that before the month of May ensuing, at least a million and a half pounds sterling in gold and silver will be shipped to America.

Ivory H. Dana, machinist, of Canton, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, and then hanging himself with a clothes line, in his own room, at his boarding house. An inquest was held on the body, by Maj. Gay of Stoughton. Verdict, partial insanity.

A dwelling-house, in Dedham, owned by Mr. Francis Guild, and occupied by several persons, took fire the present week, on the roof, and before the fire could be extinguished the upper part of the building was destroyed. Loss about five hundred dollars.

Every enlisted man of the garrison of Ontario, Oswego, (N. Y.) is a member of the total abstinence society.

At a meeting of the Employment Society in Boston, a resolve passed requesting country papers to urge mechanics not to visit the city to obtain work, as the number now there out of employ is larger than it has been for years, and that every arrival but adds to the distress.

The New York city fathers have at length responded to the universal wish of the citizens, and are about to erect free hydrants through the city, for the Croton water.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. Some one has sent us the fourth number (April, 1843,) of the first volume of this excellent monthly publication. Among the different juvenile works, none we have seen appears to be so well executed to the purpose intended, or so richly laden with choice and judicious reading matter, adapted to the younger portion of the community, as the Boy's and Girl's Magazine. Among the regular contributors to the work, we notice the names of several gentlemen and ladies, whose previous efforts in behalf of this class of readers have been admired for the knowledge imparted, the morality inculcated, and their peculiar adaptation.

T. Harrington Carter & Co., 118 1-2 Washington Street, Boston, are the publishers, to whom orders should be addressed. Subscriptions $1.25 per year, or 12 1-2 cents for each number.

GIPSEY OF THE HIGHLANDS. Redding & Co., No. 8 State Street, Boston, have placed upon our table, an interesting story, entitled—"The Gipsy of the Highlands; or, the Jew and the Heir: being the Adventures of Duncan Powell and Paul Tarnall." It is sufficient to state, that it is written by Prof. J. H. Ingraham, and is one of his very best efforts. Our feeble praise could not possibly excite the public to a greater interest for every work which emanates from this prolific writer, or a more due appreciation of the author's brilliant talents.

RECENT ELECTIONS. The democratic candidate has been re-elected Mayor of New York by the overwhelming majority of almost six thousand, which is the largest democratic majority ever given in that city. Nearly fifty thousand votes were polled.—Both branches of the legislative department of the city will have decided democratic majorities—last year, the Whigs held the balance of power.

In Albany, the whigs have triumphed in the several branches of the City government, and have elected their candidate for Mayor over the democratic incumbent. A year ago, the democrats gained the victory—six months since, the whigs elected a large majority.

In Brooklyn, (N. Y.) the democrats have succeeded in the election of Mayor, while the whigs have carried the other branches of the government.

A COWARDLY ATTACK. It is stated in some of the Boston papers, that Col. William P. Winchester, said to be wealthy, and whom we have heard highly spoken of as a gentleman, entered the office of Charles H. Peabody, Esq., the editor of the Evening Bulletin, and inflicted a severe flogging on that gentleman. The offence consisted in some articles in recent numbers of the Bulletin on the subject of a "Marriage in High Life." Col. Winchester has certainly, by this act, inflicted a stain upon his reputation. Such a step is not justified by any just rule of conduct among civilized beings.—It is more characteristic of the savage or the despised and illiterate in the world.

THE MURDER IN VIRGINIA. We mentioned in our paper of last week, the assassination of Mr. Gardner, formerly of Hingham, by the hands of a being in human shape, named Cook. The excitement continues without much abatement at Portsmouth, (Va.) the scene of the murder, at which place some two thousand dollars have been raised for the poor widow and children. A most unfortunate occurrence, however, has grown out of this business. In consequence of a threat of the mob to pull down the house of the murderer, his wife was so dreadfully alarmed that she died of fright.

BRUTAL FRACAS. A disgraceful scene took place in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives on Saturday last week. The editor of the State Capitol Gazette, was assaulted by Mr. McGowan, one of the members, on account of an article which appeared in his paper, and in the course of the affray he was stabbed with a dirk. Fortunately, the weapon struck the shoulder-blade, and thus the editor was not dangerously wounded. A committee was appointed by the House to investigate the matter, and the assailant was arrested and bound over in bonds of one thousand dollars to appear at the next Court of Sessions at Harrisburg.

CHANGE OF NAMES. By an Act of the late Legislature of this State, the following persons had leave to change their names as they desired. Hannah Foster of Dorchester, may take the name of Anna Elizabeth Foster; Eliza Clapp Thayer of Dorchester, may take the name of Eliza Thayer Clapp; Charles Bates of Dorchester, may take the name of Charles Bates Pierce; Benjamin Prescott Spaulding of Randolph, may take the name of Benjamin Prescott Spaulding; Sarah Howard Wales Curtis of Stoughton, may take the name of Martha Mary Worcester Curtis; George Washington Bull may take the name of George Washington Webster; his wife, Hannah Leach Bull, may take the name of Hannah Leach Webster; Francis Ann Bull may take the name of Francis Ann Webster; George Henry Bull may take the name of George Henry Webster; Charlotte Louisa Bull may take the name of Charlotte Louisa Webster—all of Roxbury; James Henry Hodgkins of Weymouth, may take the name of George Brooks; Albert Stoddard of Weymouth, may take the name of Albert Austin Stoddard—all of the County of Norfolk.

Joseph Warren Maglathlin of Pembroke, may take the name of Joseph Warren Way; Calvin Shaw, 2d, of Abington, may take the name of Calvin Holmes Shaw; Brackley Shaw, 4th, of Abington, may take the name of Brackley White Shaw; Betsey Dyer of Abington, may take the name of Elizabeth Lavina Dyer; Mary Ann Hollis of Halifax, may take the name of Eliza Jane Waterman—all of the County of Plymouth.

FROM TEXAS. Galveston papers to the 30th ult. have been received at New Orleans. The most important item of news is that of the arrival of Judge Robinson, with overtures from Mexico. He was among the prisoners captured under General Wall, at San Antonio, and was released for the purpose of hearing the proposal of Mexico to the government of Texas. The heads of the proposals are as follows:—That Texas should acknowledge the sovereignty of Mexico; a general amnesty to be passed for past acts in Texas; Texas to form an independent department of Mexico; to be represented in general Congress; to institute or originate all local laws, rules and regulations, and no Mexican troops, under any pretext whatever, to be stationed in Texas. It is not likely that these propositions will be received with much favor in Texas.

CONCERT. The attention of the reader is called to Prof. McGaughey's Card, in our advertising columns of to-day, in which he announces his intention to repeat the Concert he gave a short time since, and which owing to the unpleasant weather, was thinly attended. True merit and good music should be encouraged; therefore give him and the Band, a worthy association of deserving citizens, a full house.

IMPORTANT FROM HAYTI. By a late arrival at Boston from Gonaives, 20th ult. reports that President Boyer, (a colored ruler), abdicated and fled on board a British corvette on the 13th, and sailed for Jamaica on the 15th. The revolutionary movements were such in the southern and western parts of the island, that commercial operations were entirely suspended. The Patriots took possession of Gonaives, but were unable to hold it, except conditionally.

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE. Mr. Solomon Perkins of Bridgewater, left his home on the third inst. for Boston, on business; was seen in Boston by several persons on that day, but has not since been heard from. His friends are exceedingly anxious to hear of him. He is a stout man, fifty three years old, and is blind of one eye.

THE MUTINY CASE. The Court Martial, in the Mackenzie case, occasioned by the mutiny on board of the brig Somers, rendered its verdict that the three charges against him were not proved, and that the nine specifications under these charges were not proved. This is a triumphant acquittal, and the President has approved the verdict of the Court.

THE ASCENDING EXPRESS AGENT. Shipman, whom we have mentioned in other portions of our paper of to-day, as having absconded with a large sum of money which was entrusted to his custody, is now supposed to have been deranged, as we learn by late accounts he has returned a large amount of money to the rightful owners. His wife was unconscious of his departure, and was left in very distressing circumstances.

GREAT RIOT AND FIRE IN CHINA. By an arrival in New York, Canton papers have been received to Dec. 12th, and Hong Kong to the 15th. An alarming riot took place in Canton, on the 7th of December, the foreign factories were set on fire, and much damage done. The factories were defended as long as possible, but were finally destroyed and pillaged. The merchants applied to the Governor, through his subordinate, for permission to let the soldiers fire upon the mob, as being the only available means of dispersing it and saving the property; but he would not give his consent. The soldiers, of course, then fired in the air; this only served to encourage the mob, which pressed on, burning and pillaging every thing in their way.—Much money was carried off, and the fire continued all that day and the succeeding one. After a while the mob dispersed, and some of the factories escaped fire and pillage. At the last accounts, the square was in the possession of the Chinese soldiers, who much feared a fresh attack. The back streets are much crowded, and foreigners cannot walk therein. The people, it is said, have petitioned the Governor to stand firm, and they will aid him in carrying on the war with the British. Parties were still shipping off teas. The day after the disturbance, two of the rioters were executed in the square, and more have been captured, and are expected to share the same fate.

NEW JUDGE. Pliny Merriek, Esq., of Worcester, at present one of the State District Attorneys, has been appointed Associate Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, being the additional place on the bench created by a late law abolishing the Municipal Court of Boston.

QUINCY BRIGADE BANE. We extract from Boston papers, the two following notices of the Band in this place, and its talented leader, Prof. McGaughey. They attended the recent celebration of St. Patrick's Day, in Boston, having been engaged by one of the societies connected with that celebration.

The festivities of the night were in a high degree enhanced by the performances of the Quincy Brigade Band, who executed some of the popular plaintive airs of Ireland, in a style which elicited enthusiastic plaudits from the company. The solos performed by the leader, were done in an admirable manner, and with a degree of feeling and beauty greatly creditable to his musical taste and talents.—Boston Pilot.

The Quincy Brigade Band, whose sweet national music cheered us amid the rain and snow of the 17th ult., is about to publish the splendid Repeal March, composed by the talented leader, Prof. McGaughey, and performed by them at the Supper of the Mutual Relief Society. It is to be dedicated to the officers and members of the Society. Prof. McGaughey is a gentleman whose musical compositions are now performed by the various bands throughout the United States, and we can assure our readers that the forthcoming March will be a production of a high order.—New England Reporter.

ALTERED BANK NOTES. The editor of the Bay State Democrat states, that he has seen a fifty dollar bill on the Quincy Stone Bank, altered from some small denomination, but so perfectly executed as to render it difficult to tell whether they are altered from 1's or 5's. The public should be on their guard against these notes, as they have already deceived good judges of money.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

The European Packet ship, Switzerland, whose prolonged absence has caused considerable anxiety at New York, has got into Newport, (R. I.) in distress, the crew and passengers having been on short allowance for forty days, and having experienced most disastrous weather.

The difficulties of the times have given a material check to the extravagance of the people of the United States in their profuse consumption of various articles of fashion and luxury obtained from France. The Prefect of the Seine, in his recent annual expose, mentions that the exports of Paris were lessened by twenty four millions of francs, which evil he ascribes to the "American financial crisis," and the American tariff.

The Quebec Gazette states, that the collector of customs and the deputy postmaster general in that city have received instructions against the introduction into Canada of re-prints in the United States of British publications, for which copyright exists, and that steps will be taken and rigidly acted upon accordingly.

By abolishing the Board of Bank Commissioners in this State, it is supposed by some that all actions instituted under its authority die with it, and on this ground, suits have been commenced by some creditors of the Phoenix Bank, Charlestown, and the funds in the hands of the Receivers attached to the amount of sixty thousand dollars.

It is stated in the Boston Trumpet, that a new Universalist Meeting House is to be erected in Foxboro' the present year.

EVERY HUMAN HAIR IS A PERFECT TUBE, with innumerable ramifications of the arteries branching its inner surface. Through these pass the blood, which imparts vitality to the hair, circulates, and when from obstructions in pores of the scalp, the supply of blood and moisture is cut off, the hair loses its gloss, becomes dry and harsh, and falls out. Now it is obvious that unless the pores of the scalp be opened, the capillary action of the blood restored, and the scalp and dandruff proceeding from suppressed perspiration removed, baldness must speedily ensue. JAYNE'S HAIR TONIC will produce all these effects—may more, it will re-clothe the bald places with vigorous and luxuriant tresses, and ensure a healthy and abundant growth of hair, as long as it is used in conformity with the printed directions which accompany each bottle, and to which are appended numerous testimonials of its efficacy, from some of our most distinguished clergymen, and physicians.

WILLIAM GORDAK.

hind the cabin to listen to their discourse, and there, Gavino, I heard the foulest, the blackest scheme of treachery and slaughter unfolded, that ever mortal man gave ear to. The vile rascals proved to be the faithful associates of Captain Banardo, whom Castillo has employed to navigate the ship to Bermuda; and who, as I have discovered, is no less a personage than the pirate Captain Anglose, the same who was hung, as all supposed, at Cartagena five years ago, for piracy, with all his associates. He escaped himself from death by some unknown stratagem of the executioner, while all his comrades suffered the penalty of their crimes, and left swarming on the gibbet.

GA. What! massa Deavilo, Gavino tink he smell brimstone. He is de very debil himself!

DE. You know Castillo's motive for leaving Spain is to wed my Lucilla to a Spanish nobleman; and these vile wretches, Gavino, have proved themselves to be the hirelings of this same yet unknown nobleman, to assassinate Castillo and every soul of his companions on the passage, save Lucilla, that he may enjoy the whole alone—daughter, fortune, and a secret revenge.

GA. By de lor! De debil is let loose and on de air, dats a fac! [Enter Rosalvo, C. unperceived and conceals himself.]

DE. Castillo has preferred to bestow my Lucilla on a stranger—a heartless fiend! than on me, the poor Deavilo, who was once caressed by every land in Barcelona.

GA. Poor! by the debil and kingdom come, if old Gavino's face was as black as de very debil himself, it would be whiter den massa Juan's heart; for, as I hab told you afore, I hab seen dat will in Juan's hands myself.

DE. I doubt not a word you utter, Gavino, yet, though truth beamed from every word, before the tribunals of Spain, they are of no avail. [Aside.] Hist! Should it prove that this same uncle Don Juan Gerald, is the primitive projector of these bloody schemes?—no, no, I must forbear, and disbelieve that he has a heart so inhuman and so abject!

GA. Did they den discover you and make you join dem?

DE. Discover me! I heard no more, but hastened up the pier, where I met the peasant, in custody of the police, accused of theft by Banardo. I swore to his innocence, obtained his freedom, and, by his own proposition, concealed him in the steerage, unbeknown to a soul.

GA. And yourself?

DE. Me!—Good fortune mark the hour!—I dashed off and met Castillo, who was in the mountains on his way to the ship, and revealed to him my discovery of the plot; but ere I could dismount my dying steed, he gave me the lie! and swore it was a well schemed plot of my fiery headed associates, to rob him and clove with his dagger; and left me alone—a statue, in amazement! Soon I recovered my energy; but all hope of regaining the ship was blighted; a horrid vision flashed before me; I saw the wreaking swords, the lifeless corse, Lucilla in agony, and was about to yield myself up to despair, when I espied a mounted monk descending an adjacent pass. I rushed to him, offered him gold, and told him my tale and wish; he refused me aid! I seized him thus, Gavino, and, with one effort, whirled him to the ground, then mounted his horse, and flew for the shore. There I met a fisherman from whom I demanded—for my purse—his shore garments for the disguise I now wear; and he rowed me to the ship. I sprung to the main-top—but you know the rest, I have come to do or die!

GA. 'Tis to die! [Rushing from concealment and making a pass at Deavilo—Gavino wards off the blow.]

DE. Then black, accursed viper of a black, accursed race, though the next minute were my last, you die! [Deavilo takes sword—Rosalvo rushes towards Gavino.]

DE. (to Ro.) Hold! Dare strike him but one blow, though fiend, and I will cleave thee to the deck.

GA. Ha, ha! these are bold words for a victim with a halberd o'er his head. But no parley now—quarter—here is at you. [They combat—after a struggle—Deavilo throws Rosalvo.]

DE. Your life is in my power or mine in yours. Swear by all thy hopes hereafter, that you will befriend me; by all thy most sacred ties, that you will not betray me; or, with this blade I will pin thee to the deck, and, with your own, cut out your heartless heart!

GA. I swear!

DE. Enough. Rosalvo, arise, and know that you have Don Deavilo Gerald on board of your ship, and know to all your wily, crafty schemes of Gavino, by hence—hold! Should one hour pass without your seeing me, go to the steerage and order my companions to secure Banardo and despatch the crew without delay or mercy—they will obey (aside) should they not—banish horrid thought! [Rosalvo treacherously attacks Deavilo again—Gavino wards off the blow. Deavilo and Rosalvo combat furiously till Captain Banardo, with part of the crew, enter gangway—Gavino cut unseemly—Banardo draws his sword and strikes those of the combatants.]

BA. Hold! How dare you, sirs, lift a weapon on board of my ship without orders?

RO. Captain—

DE. One word from your treacherous throat, and had you ten thousand lives, I would strike you dead!

BA. How! Mutiny! Ho there, seize that man.

DE. For your lives, stand off, I tell you! Captain Banardo, there is no person on board of your ship who is more averse to mutiny than your humble servant Antonio. I was defending my life from the rash vengeance of Rosalvo. When I first came on board of your ship, I was like a maniac; who I am or what I was, it matters not; I am here, and sink or swim, live or die, I am bound heart and soul to do my duty, and if you will receive me as one of your confederates, and reveal to me your profoundest secrets, you will find me true to the cause I espouse; and as for dexterity and skill, I here challenge either two of your bravos to stand forth while I pass the ordeal of bravery.

BA. You are frank and bold young lad, but you know not with whom you have to contend.

DE. Well do I know, most valiant Captain, if all are like you trembling coward—one of your bravos and most skillful—him have I fought and conquered—

RO. Captain—

BA. Hold! Rosalvo, say no more. Young Antonio, our time will permit no parley; in one word, you are one of our confederates. But mark me: one treacherous act, one ill suspicious look, will cost you your life. Go where you will, you cannot escape our vigilance; we will hang upon your path like your own shadow and know no rest till you have satisfied our vengeance.

DE. Captain Banardo, fear me not—

BA. I have unbounded confidence in you—that you will prove true in trust and fearless in danger, hereafter as heretofore. But, before I make known our designs, know this: the letters supposed, by Castillo, to have been written in Bermuda, are, forgeries!—written in Spain by a Spanish nobleman, who is our generous patron, and whose designs are these: he has, most successfully, by stratagem and intrepidity, concentrated all of his most superfluous friends, and avaricious kindred, into this one ship, for us to navigate—not to Bermuda—but to death! save Castillo's daughter, who is to be carried to Bermuda where he will be to receive her for his bride, provided we are faithful to him. That splendid bark moored in the harbour of Cadiz belongs to him, and he was to have set sail the day we departed. If he did, and encountered the late gale, we need trouble ourselves no more about him, for his craft has gone to pieces and himself to the bottom of the sea. Though had he escaped and we proved faithful to him, he would have met a speedy and ignominious death, for his young dainty stripping of a nephew—ha! the dog, I know him—the old fellow's worst foe, not liking the accommodations of our ship—so says Castillo—briefly concluded to remain in Cadiz, unbeknown to his affectionate uncle. The Spanish noble's name is—

RO. Captain—

BA. Audacious reptile! Legone! How dare you, sir, interrupt my words?

DE. By Heavens! if you utter one word more, I will plunge this to the hilt in thy cowardly heart though shielded in a thousand daggers! Captain Banardo, how can I crave your clemency for this rashness? so interested was I in the schemes of this foolish nobleman, that I forgot myself, and spoke as though he were your foe.

BA. Ha! quick in speech and arms to defend your captain!—by our cause, you are a valuable acquisition to our ship! From this time, henceforth, you are second officer of the fore-castle—Rosalvo, beware!

DE. The noble's name?

BA. Don Juan Gerald.

RO. (aside.)—All is lost!

DE. Don Juan! (aside)—Deavilo do time of, and betray not thysself!—And your designs?

BA. Are such that not one soul within that cabin, man, woman nor child, will ever see the land again; nor one dollar of their peerless treasure the light of the sun, till we have crossed the Equator: to-morrow night, when all is finished, and our decks are clear, we hoist the black flag, and bear away for the Spanish Main; and then, never trust the indomitable heart of Banardo Anglose, if the world does not see a second edition of Captain Kidd's exploits!

DE. And your plan of attack?

BA. Shall be revealed hereafter.

DE. (aside)—Confusion!

BA. Now, my valiant lads, for our wine and song, and then to your posts for the night—(arranged around the table, C.)

DE. (solus, R. S. C.)—First a maniac; then a confederate; now an officer!—surely the hand of Omnipotence is with me! I feel within my inmost soul that I shall be successful, though not without one hard and desperate struggle!

BA. Antonio—(calling.)

DE. I—forgive my negligence, Captain; I was in deep thought.

BA. Will you not join us?

DE. Most cheerfully—(taking a glass.) Here is to the success of our enterprise.

BA. To the death of the whole race afloat, and all our foes on shore.

RO. And death to the most dangerous of all—Don Deavilo Gerald!—all drink and sing the following:—

PIRATE'S GLEE.

Then merry let us be;
Wine sparkling and bright, we'll drink and delight,
While the wine cup passes free:
For once more we are on the sea,
The land has sunk from our view,
And on the blue sea, we will ever be
With our true and valiant crew;
With our true and valiant crew, my boys,
Then merry let us be,
And here we will roam, in our floating home,
And be lords upon the sea!

Now swiftly we merrily glide,
On the free unbounded wave,
Where we all can revel, in majestic pride,
And the foaming billows brave,
And the foaming billows brave, my boys,
Then merry let us be,
And should wild waves dash, and the lightning flash,
We will drink and sing our glee.

For like an ocean bird we've come,
Far out on the ocean's breast,
And here on its foam, we have found our home,
As the sea bird finds its nest;
As the sea bird finds its nest, my boys,
Then merry let us be,
And many a sail, that's weathered the gale,
Of our pirate fleet shall be.

Then to the Spanish Main we'll steer,
Away through the flashing brine,
And have naught to fear, but of good cheer,
As we drink our sparkling wine;
As we drink our sparkling wine, my boys,
Then merry let us be,
For our noble land, shall ne'er see the land,
But be buried in the sea!

Then wine sparkling and bright, we'll drink and delight,
While the wine cup passes free!

[END, ACT FIRST.]

For the Quincy Patriot.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

The past week brings an evident improvement in business, if not an advance in prices. Our "dull times" are fast disappearing—rents are high here, and real estate, more especially in the central parts of Boston, stands about as well as in 1836. The railways are destined to make Boston equal to New York, in wealth, population and business.

The Steamer Britannia arrived on Wednesday last, in a little more than fourteen days passage from Liverpool. Commodore Porter, United States minister at Constantinople, died there on the 3d ult. The President's last message, on the Ashburton Treaty, has created much excitement, and the London papers handle it severely. But the most important and cheering news is the great reaction in business. This is admitted on all sides. We think it reasonable to indulge the hope that the dark cloud which has for so long a period rested upon the once flourishing commerce of England, is fast disappearing before the bright gleams of the sunshine of returning prosperity. The decided improvement which has lately manifested itself in the trade of this country, will be received with satisfaction by our American friends, etc. Such is the language of Wilmer's News Letter, of April 4th.

Such intelligence cannot fail soon to have a good effect on American Trade. News of the Manchester markets in England is cheering. A large and healthy business is going on there. So much for foreign news.

You perceive by the papers, that Ezra Wilkinson, Esq., of Dedham, is soon to be the District Attorney for Norfolk and Worcester Counties, in the place of Hon. Pliny Morick. On this office devolves the administration of the criminal law, and it is an important station. The District Attorneys (for number) hold their office for the term of five years, unless sooner removed by the Governor and Council. Salary until the past winter, (if not now), is one thousand dollars per annum. The office does not prevent them practising as attorneys in all our courts of law. Mr. Wilkinson is favorably known as one of the best read lawyers in your county, sound to the core, and worthy of the high trust just placed in his hands. He is a native of Wrentham, (Mass.) and I believe a graduate of Brown University. By his industry and application to his profession, and his amiable and upright deportment as a man, he has acquired, in a few brief years, that high reputation which he so deservedly sustains, though still a young man.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

John A. Green, Editor.

ANOTHER POLITICAL PARTY. Agreeably to public notice, quite a large assembly of the Catholics of Boston, and other friends of indemnity for the Convention outrage, recently convened at the Masonic Temple, which was organized by the choice of Dr. H. B. C. Greene, one of the Representatives to the General Court from Boston, as chairman of the meeting. Speeches were made by Hon. James Savage, a member of the Executive Council at the time of the burning of the Convention, Hon. Isaac H. Wright, of the State Senate, Messrs. George T. Curtis, Walter J. Walsh, and other distinguished gentlemen.

From the statements made, it appears that the object of this movement, is, to organize for the purpose of concentrating the strength of the friends of indemnity and bringing it to bear upon the election of State officers. The speakers maintained, that for nine years, indemnification had been asked of the Legislature, and in vain,—that petition after petition had been neglected, or had been treated with open contempt by each successive Legislature of this State—that the action of the late Legislature, refusing even an inquiry into the circumstances of the loss of the Convent, was sufficient to convince any reasonable men, that indemnification could never be obtained in the ordinary way, but that stronger and more decided measures must be taken by the organization of a party to speak through the ballot box. They averred that their friends, as a party, would hold themselves separate and distinct from either of the great political parties in the State, until it could be ascertained which of the two was in deed and truth favorable to their claims; and then would only vote for such persons as representatives to the General Court, as would support indemnification. They contended not for the money, but for the principle involved in the case.

It was voted that a State Central Committee be appointed for the further organization of the party, and for the naturalization of the friends of this movement.

SPANISH COIN. The subjoined table, taken from the Boston Times, shows the value of Spanish small coin, according to the United States Mint assay, and the rates at which they are taken by the banks:—

Pieces.	Dates.	Wgt.	Fine.	Real	Taken at
		grs.		c. m.	cts.
1-4 dol.	1772 1821	37	898	23	5
1-8 "	1772 1821	46	808	11	10
1-16 "	1772 1821	21	898	5	1

As the mint value is higher than that allowed by the Banks, the Spanish coin will probably find its way into the Mint and there be received into American pieces.

We will take the above coin at their face for yearly subscriptions in advance for our paper.

COMPLETION OF THE BUNKER HILL MONUMENT. The work on and about the monument is to be completed by the first of June; and on the seventeenth of that month, a public celebration is to take place, at which Hon. Daniel Webster has consented to deliver an oration. Amongst the distinguished personages invited to be present on the occasion, is, his Excellency, the President of the United States. The occasion will be one of extraordinary interest.

NORTH EASTERN BOUNDARY. An old map has been discovered among the papers of the late Peter A. Jay, of New York, whose father, John Jay, was one of the negotiators of the treaty of peace in 1782-83, with the boundary as claimed by the United States distinctly marked upon it. This important relic would have materially changed, perhaps, the boundary question previous to its late settlement, if it had been discovered in season.

GOVERNOR'S AIDS. William T. Hawes of New Bedford, Asa H. Waters of Milbury, Josiah G. Abbott of Lowell, and George Willis of Pittsfield, have been appointed Aids-de-camp to the Commander-in-chief.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL. This body, after a session of three days, adjourned to the 25th of the present month. There are several acts and resolves requiring the action of the governor and council, and especially the resolve relating to commissioners concerning the grants of lands in Maine, that do not take effect until thirty days after the adjournment of the Legislature, which rendered a meeting of the Council so soon after its adjournment highly necessary.

GOON NEWS. The Boston Transcript states that the number of new houses about to be erected this season, particularly such as are of the first class, is greater than in any previous year for a long period. It indicates a change in the aspect of business affairs.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, NEW YORK. This establishment, which has not for some time past paid the interest of the claims upon it, has been sold under an execution, for five thousand six hundred dollars over the amount of the incumbrances upon it. The indebtedness of the company is $920,528 27.

THE BUCCANIER. We publish, to-day, the first part of a dramatic tale in three acts, by a writer who has largely contributed to our columns, as well as to several other publications of value and eminence. He has promised to become a weekly correspondent, and his letters will unquestionably be interesting and valuable to our readers. "The Buccaneier" has been pronounced, by critics who have examined the manuscript, to be worthy of a place with similar efforts of distinguished writers. Of its merits, the reader can judge, when it is all published.

WORTHY OBJECT. It will be seen on reference to the "Notices" in to-day's paper, that the ladies connected with Christ Church, in this town, desire to contribute towards the completion of the "Parsonage House," which has just been erected. The citizens of this town should aid in this laudable undertaking, and we trust their benevolence on this occasion will speak their regard for this ancient society, and the good will which they entertain for the present pious and affable pastor.

THE CONCERT. We have been requested to state, that Prof. M'Gaughey's Concert is again postponed on account of the Town Hall having been previously engaged. Notice of the Concert will be given hereafter.

TEMPERANCE HOUSE. The Phoenix Hotel, at Dedham, the "mine host" of which is Mr. James Clark, has been changed to a temperance house; and all that can intoxicate banished from its premises.

DISBANDMENT. The Hingham Rifle Company and the Dorchester Rifle Company have been disbanded; consequently, says the editor of the Hingham Patriot, the second Regiment, first Brigade, no longer exists.

VACANCIES. The Governor and Council of this State, have appointed Monday, the fifth of June next, as the day whereon elections will be held to fill the vacancies in the Congressional delegation.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

An inhuman father has been sentenced at Norwich, (Conn.) to the State Prison for life, for a rape committed last fall on his illegitimate daughter, only eight years old.

The member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, who assaulted an editor on the floor of the House, resigned his seat while a motion to expel him was under consideration. The motion would undoubtedly have prevailed.

The proposition to remove the public buildings in Berkshire County, from Lenox to Pittsfield, has been negatived by the people, by a majority of 3,786 votes.

Congressional elections have taken place in ten States for members of the twenty-eighth Congress, which show the following result: fifty six democrats and seventeen whigs. In the last Congress, from the same States, there were thirty nine democrats, and forty three whigs.

A bill has passed its second reading in the Louisiana Senate, by a majority of two, to transfer the seat of government from New Orleans to Donaldville.

The Legislature of Maine, at its recent session, passed a law declaring that every person of good moral character, might practice law in that State.

The County Commissioners of Worcester County have refused to grant any licences.

By the last arrivals from Canton, it appears that the Emperor of China has given orders for the construction of ships of war, after the American model, and for immediate use, to purchase those which the "barbarians" will sell.

The citizens of Pittsburg, (Penn.) lately held a meeting to concert measures for the construction of a railroad from that place to Cumberland, (Md.) to intersect the railroad now in operation between the latter place and Baltimore, with a view to give increased facilities for the western trade to reach Baltimore by that route.

It is stated that quantities of pork, bacon, and lard, to the value of five hundred thousand dollars have been put up at Cincinnati this winter for the English and French markets, now for the first time opened to this description of American produce.

The last number of the "Signs of the Times," a Millerite paper, contains an editorial article, in which it is assumed that the very day of the end of the world, and of the second coming of Christ, is known, and that the twenty third of May is that day!

The fare on the Western Rail Road has been reduced to four dollars from Boston to Albany. The way fare is to remain as usual, that is, about three cents per mile.

An engine has been manufactured at Philadelphia, to be run on the Western Rail Road, which it is calculated can draw eight hundred tons on a dead level.

The Asylum Journal, published at Brattleboro', (Vt.) states that fifteen Miller lunatics are there confined.

Within three or four days, more than eight hundred persons have received their certificates of naturalization, in the City of New York.

A bed of anthracite coal, said to be fully equal to the famous Lehigh, has been found in the parish of Claiborne, (La.)

At a recent meeting of the democratic members of the Legislature of New York, held at the Capitol, in Albany, Martin Van Buren was unanimously proposed as the democratic candidate for the office of President of the United States.

The old Bank of Pennsylvania, in the City of Philadelphia, which institution suspended payment some time since, has given public notice that it will resume regular business operations.

The recent examination on the rivers, bays, inlets and nooks of the Isle of Pines, by the boats of the United States ship Vincennes, resulted in no discovery of any piracy.

Eliphalet Greely, (whig,) has been elected Mayor of the City of Portland, in joint convention of the Aldermen and Common Council, by a majority of four votes over John Anderson, (dem.) the late incumbent, who lacked but twenty eight votes of a choice by the people.

Montreal is to be the seat of Government of Canada. The necessary government officers and a parliament house will be commenced as soon as the plans can be prepared. Quebec will be the military head quarters.

The Legislature of Louisiana have agreed to a districting law dividing the State into Congressional Districts, which will ensure the election of one whig and one democrat, leaving the other two somewhat doubtful.

The Legislature of Louisiana has declared its intention to refund out of the State Treasury, the one thousand dollars fine imposed upon General Jackson, for contempt of Court, if Congress fails to pay it at the approaching session.

Of the Governors of the twenty six States of the Union, at the present time, eighteen are democrats and eight are whigs.

Hon Robert H. Morris, the newly elected Mayor of New York city, has subscribed to the pledge of total abstinence; giving as a reason for not having done so before, that political motives might not be suspected as the cause of an act of conscientious duty.

A late number of the New England Reporter contains a letter to the editor, from the great Irish Apostle of Temperance, Father Matthew, in which this distinguished personage avows his intention of visiting this country at no distant date.

There is now being made at Fort Richmond, near Philadelphia, a rope for the inclined plane at Schuylkill, which when completed, will be two thousand yards long, nine inches in circumference, and will weigh upwards of nine tons. This rope is said to be of a superior quality.

The "Marquis" remarked on swearing, that an oath from a woman's lips was unnatural and incredible,—that he would as soon expect a bullet from a rosebud.

A man, who stole a horse in Canada, was lately sentenced to the State prison for three years; another who stole a pair of boots was sentenced for the same term. So it is as cheap for a rogue to go on horseback as on foot in that country.

"IS THIS MEDICINE?" we exclaimed the other day, on tasting some of JAY'S TONIC VERMIFUGE. It really has none of the nauseous flavor which one so associates with the idea of physic. Children consider it quite a treat, and in taking it their palates are gratified, and their health restored at the same time. JAY'S TONIC VERMIFUGE, not only destroys worms, but cures off the mucus in which they are imbedded, and effects a radical and permanent cure. Every mother knows the prominent symptoms of worms, such as variety, leanness, febrile breath, grinding of the teeth during sleep, painfulness of the lips, itching of the nose, etc., but there are other indications not so generally recognised. A dry cough, dull eyes, enlargement of the abdomen, and many other symptoms, common to other diseases, frequently denote the presence of worms. If their existence is even suspected, the Vermifuge should be administered, because it can do no harm in any case, and may do incalculable good.

POETRY.

THE FARMER.

Those who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God, whose breasts he has made his peculiar deposit for substantial and genuine virtue.—JERFORD.

Drive on, thou sturdy farmer,
Drive cheerily o'er the field:
The pleasures of a farmer's life
No other life can yield.

Thou risest with the morning sun,
To till the fruitful earth;
And when thy daily task is done,
Thou seek'st thy peaceful rest.

Thou lovest not the gaudy town,
With its tumultuous roar;
Plenty and Peace thy fireside crown,
And thou dost ask no more.

Monarchs, with robes in crimson dyed,
Are low compared with thee;
They are the pampered sons of pride,
Thou 'rt God's nobility.

Go on, thou sturdy farmer,
Tread proudly on the sod,
Thy proud and godly heritage,
Thou chosen man of God.

EARTHLY BEAUTY.

There was an angel loved the flowers,
Who brought them dew from sainted springs;
And came with heaven's own glowing hours
Upon her white and sparkling wings;
Then sat enamored all the morn,
Lone gazing on her bowers of bliss;
For, oh! she thought Love's self was born,
In some sweet paradise like this.

And all her fond affections grew
In beauty round her flow'ry bands,
That seem'd almost as if they knew
Their buds were fed by angel hands.
And thus she half forgot the sky,
Such feeling warmed her spirit fair;
Till one by one the flowers did die,
And left the angel weeping there.

Alas, she mourn'd, who love could place,
Or let the heart's affections rest;
On fads that have such heavenly grace,
Yet fade away when loved the best.
Alas that beauty such as thine
Should die, O Earth, and love deplore!
From thee I wing my way divine,
Where beauty blooms for evermore.

THE OLD BLUE COAT.

I love it—I love it—who'd be such a blout
As to chide me for loving that old blue coat?
I've treasured it long, though its gloss is fled—
I've stitched it with silk, and I've darned it with thread,
'Tis mended a thousand times—or less,
Yet still to my back the old coat I press,
Do you ask me why? 'Tis my only one—
And what shall I do when that is gone?

I've worn it, and worn it, for many a day,
While the collar grew brown, and the seams grew gray;
And I almost swore, as the people would smile,
And turn from the coats that were made in the style,
Years rolled on, and I wore it still,
But to make it hang on needed all my skill,
And I found how much the heart can bear,
When an envious nail did my old coat tear.

'Tis patched—'tis patched—but I wear it the more,
And if none saw the place where the cruel nail tore;
'Twas I brushed it, and sponged it, and spread Blue ink on the spots that began to fade
Say it is shabby and deem it cheap,
While my elbows through its crevices peep;
But I love it—I love it—the day is far remote
When I ever can get such another old coat.

ANECDOTES.

A boy who had been brought up in a log house in Ohio, was one day sent on an errand to one of the neighbors' houses, where several articles of furniture had just been received from the eastward, and among other things a looking-glass. The boy had never before seen his face, and when, on entering the house, the first thing that presented itself was a dirty face surrounded by long and shaggy hair, he was so affrighted that he ran home as fast as his legs would carry him, exclaiming, 'Daddy, daddy, I've seen the devil!'

For stopping a man's mouth when he openly tells disagreeable truths, there is no gag like gold. Complaint having been made to a certain bishop that a vicar in his diocese was always preaching against pluralities in spite of repeated admonitions to the contrary, 'Tush!' exclaimed the right reverend dignitary; 'I will silence him for ever in less than a week.' And so he did, by giving him an additional benefice.

'Father, what makes your face so red?' asked a little boy of his parent. 'I have been riding in the wind,' replied the father rather peevishly. 'Well, mother has been riding in the wind too, and hers isn't as red as yours, what makes the difference?' 'Here, Mary, take John to bed; these Washingtonians will ruin our children. The boy is getting very impudent.'

A countryman sowing his ground, two smart fellows came riding along that way, when one of them called to him with an insolent air. 'Well, and how goes the seed, it is your business to sow, but we reap the fruits of your hard labor.' To which the countryman replied, 'It is very likely you may, for I am sowing hemp.'

A young dandy who supported an enormous mustache asked a lady what she thought of his looks. 'Why,' said she, 'you look as if you had swallowed a pony, and left the tail sticking out of your mouth.'

A little girl called at a temperance grocery and asked for two cents worth of flour. As she held up the corners of her apron to take the flour, the dealer observed a bottle. 'How much liquor have you bought this morning?' said he. 'Six cents worth,' was the answer. 'This explained why she had no shoes, stockings, or bonnet, and why her parents lived in a wretched habitation.'

A drunken husband came home one night and having reached the centre of the room, when down he came. 'Wife,' said he, 'what do you think of the floor-to-night for? you have made it so slippery I can't stand on my feet.'

Have you ever tried it?

MISCELLANY.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS; OR, WHO'S THE LADY?

All was bustle and confusion among the fashionable of a quiet little town, in one of the western tiers of counties of our State, on the day preceding the evening for a select ball. The ladies became great pedestrians, and were on foot for hours together, while husbands and fathers were at home, waiting in awful suspense for their return with the shop keeper's bill. The shop keepers were more polite than usual, inasmuch as gauze, lace and ribbons were the only articles in demand, and were bought without the irritating query, "can't you take less?" and not a milliner could complain at night of want of custom, and a full purse. Evening advanced and the bustle increased. Beaux just from the bandbox might be seen with a glove in one hand, and courage in the other, tapping at the door of the wealthy, and tipping and bowing as if made of vibratory material, with as much cash in their pockets as brains in their nodules, and more brass in their face than ether.

One of these mushroom gentry, who had the faculty of talking nonsense, had captivated the charming Melitable Clarissa Adelia Bacon, third daughter of the wealthy Capt. Jacobus Bacon, of the invincible volunteer company of heroes vulgarly called "bare foots," who with remarkable valor during the late war effected a bloodless (not a madness) retreat through a swamp two miles wide with the enemy at their heels. At the appointed hour, and according to promise, this sprig of the beau monde alluded to, pulled the bell at the door of the redoubtable Captain, which was answered by her female servant, who among the rest was preparing for the ball, and in her "best bib and tucker," made a polite bow and invited the young coxcomb in. Twilight deceived his already defective vision (defective, for it is sometimes said that love, like wine, will make men see double, especially if they run against a lamp post) and he mistook the servant for Miss Melitable. Duffing his hat and describing with his body all the figures of Euclid, such as circles, squares, and triangles, he at last completed his bow a la mode and lisped the fact that he had "the onnaw of being in readiness to ethort her to the Assembly Room."

"I am engaged, sir," said the kitchen belle.

"Engaged!" exclaimed the youth, chopfallen; "Mith Bacon engaged?"

"Oh! it's Miss Bacon you wish to see, then," replied the girl.

"Why, yeth—I am miltaken—faith—the death!—bowing and talking to a thervant girl! Wherthy mistress?"

"Walk into the parlor, sir," answered the insulted girl, "I will call her."

Reader, wouldst thou know who this servant girl might be, of whom we have been chatting? Well, listen and I'll tell thee. Dids thou ever hear of William K—, once a very wealthy shipping merchant of New York, who, through multiplied losses, was exiled from the dominion of wealth, and consequently fashion, and for many years dwelt obscurely in a country village, with the only remnant of a once large family, a charming daughter?

This was the very child. At the age of ten she became an orphan, but not friendless. The gentlemanly character of her father, even in poverty, had won the esteem of all, and this last survivor of his accumulated misfortunes found a home and a friend with a wealthy country gentleman. She grew up to womanhood, beautiful and accomplished, and beloved by all the family, as a sister and a child. But death claimed her adopted mother as his and her prospects changed. The woman who supplied her place a few months afterwards was her antipodes, and Amanda K. stepped forth into the wide world dependent upon physical strength alone for subsistence. But the good wishes of her adopted family went with her, and a situation in the family of Capt. Bacon was secured to her, at which place the reader will recollect he or she found her. But I will resume my story.

At an early hour the ball room was filled with a truly brilliant assemblage. There were red cheeks in profusion, some painted by nature, others by art; bright eyes in abundance, some sparkling with intelligence, others with joyous excitement, and among the rougher sex, many with wine. Mirth and hilarity bore regal sway, until a discovery was made—a discovery considered by that assembly of equal importance with Hershel's lunar observations. The dance was suspended, notwithstanding Sambo still sawed his catgut, and a whisper ran through the crowd. The purse-proud, vinegar-faced Mrs. Z— had the honor of making the discovery—a discovery in which was involved the reputation of all present. It was nothing less than the lamentable fact that Amanda K., the servant girl of Capt. Bacon, had impertinently intruded herself into the company of her betters, and actually danced two cotillions with them, before the degraded truth was known.

"Did you ever see such impertinence?" says one.

"What a brazen thing!" said another.

"Why, see how she's dressed!" said a third.

"Such a character!" whispered a fourth. They say—but never mind now!

"A pot-slew in our company—the wench," chimed in Mrs. Z—, with that elegance of expression which characterized her; and turning up her nose, advised the ladies to leave the room, and no longer be insulted with her presence. This advice was assented to by the intelligent company, and the poor, but infinitely superior girl was left alone—abashed, confused and almost overcome with emotion. He who invited her thither was the son of her adopted father, who united with intelligence a graceful and gentlemanly deportment, and the command of extensive possessions in one of the most fertile portions of our State. He was absent when the revolution in the ball room took place, but returned just as it was evacuated by the ladies. Astonished at the change and perceiving Amanda standing with face suffused with blushes, he hastily inquired the cause. A friend drew him aside, and communicated the facts as I have penned them. The young man was enraged, and with an emphasis adequate to his just excitement, exclaimed, "What's that purse-proud fool, that ignorant parrot of fashion, worth, who scorns virtue because it is coupled with poverty?"

"Ten thousand dollars," answered his friend.

"Ten thousand, eh! Well, Amanda is worth that sum and the haughty fool in the bargain. Ten thousand dollars? and that forsooth, balanced against virtuous respectability. Here, Amanda, my girl," said he, taking her by the hand, and bowing respectfully to the gentleman present, "let us leave this place where haughty pride pampered and fed with the crumbs of wealth, exercises an influence superior to the dictates of good sense, when virtue is endangered."

So saying they left the place and returned home.

The next morning after the ball, Amanda K., the poor, the slighted, abused girl, who was denied the boon of mixing in society because she wore the russet mantle of poverty received from the hands of the indignant young man, an instrument of writing, securing to her possession the full amount of ten thousand dollars. The gift and the motives which prompted it, were soon made known to the haughty Mrs. Z., and revenge, more painful than disdain, took the place of the latter. Nor was the cup of bitterness yet full. With all the solicitude of a mother, she had laid snares to entrap the young man in question, as a husband for her own grey-eyed daughter, and fondly imagined that his urbanity was evidence that she had caught him in her meshes. But alas! how soon do the most towering expectations fall from high stations. Ere two months had elapsed, the humble Amanda became the wife of the wealthy Edgar N.

Time rolled on in its silent course, bearing upon its tide sweet flowers, and beaming sunshine, and every ingredient of happiness for the youthful pair, and those who turned their backs upon Captain Bacon's servant girl, became the courtiers, the fawning sycophants of Mrs. N., who in her new station, was no more worthy of esteem, no more beloved by the truly good. Twenty summers have since scattered their blossoms around her quiet mansion, and the slight touches of the frost of age gathered upon the temples of her fond husband. Yet, love, pure and holy, still warms the domestic circle, wherein the altar of true benevolence is reared. The good things of life are poured into her lap in abundance, while she distributes with a prodigal hand her blessings among the children of cheerless poverty, and it may be truly said that "her children rise up and called her blessed, her husband, also, and he praiseth her."

What an instructive moral may be gleaned from incidents of this kind—incidents which occur almost daily in the great mass of society. The simple tale I have told is not the flimsy work of fancy, wrought up from the tinsel material of fiction, but based upon fact. How often are such facts exhibited to our view, to the great discredit of intellectual worth.

Virtue, beauty, intelligence, moral worth, the highest attributes of intelligent creatures, are often forced to bow before the gilded shrine of Mammon, whose altars are often built up amid the mouldering ruins of Genius, and whose sacrificial rites consist in the utter prostration and destruction of all that is great and noble in nature, all that is bright and lovely in humanity.

ODD SCRAPS.

It is poor economy to buy vinegar by the gallon. Buy a barrel, or half a barrel, of really strong vinegar, when you begin house-keeping. As you use it, fill the barrel with old cider, sour beer, or wine settlings, etc. Care must be taken not to add these things in too large quantities, or too often: if the vinegar once gets weak, it is difficult to restore it. If possible, it is well to keep such slops as I have mentioned in a different keg, and draw them off once in three or four weeks in such a quantity as you think the vinegar will bear. If by any carelessness you do weaken it, a few white beans dropped in, or white paper dipped in molasses, is said to be useful.

Barley straw is best for beds or mattresses, dry corn husks, slit into shreds, are far better than straw.

Straw beds are much better for being boxed at the sides; in the same manner upholsters prepare ticks for feathers.

Brass andirons should be cleansed, done up in papers, and put in a dry place, during the summer season.

Paper brings a cent a pound, and if you have a plenty of room, it is well to save it. "A penny saved is a penny got."

Always have plenty of dish-water, and have it hot. There is no need of asking the character of a domestic, if you have ever seen her wash dishes in a little greasy water.

When molasses is used in cooking, it is a prodigious improvement to boil and skim it before you use it. It takes out the unpleasant raw taste, and makes it almost as good as sugar. When molasses is used much for cooking, it is well to prepare one or two gallons in this way at a time.

In winter, always set the handle of your pump as high as possible, before you go to bed. Except in very rigid weather, this keeps the handle from freezing. When there is reason to apprehend extreme cold, do not forget to throw a rug or horse blanket over your pump; a frozen pump is a comfortless preparation for a winter's breakfast.

Never allow ashes to be taken up in wood, or put into wood. Always have your tinder-box and lantern ready for use, in case of sudden alarm. Have important papers put together, where you can lay your hand on them at once, in case of fire.

Keep an old blanket and sheet on purpose for ironing, and on no account suffer any other to be used. Have plenty of holders always made, that your towels may not be used and burned out in such service.

Keep a coarse broom for the cellar stairs, and wood-shed, yard, etc. No good housekeeper allows her carpet broom to be used for such things.

There should always be a heavy stone on the top of your pork, to keep it down. This stone is an excellent place to keep a bit of fresh meat on in the summer, when you are afraid of its spoiling.

Have all the good bits of vegetables and meat collected after dinner, and minced before they are set away; that they may be in readiness to make a little savory mince meat for supper or breakfast. Take skins off your potatoes before they grow cold.

Vials, which have been used for medicine, should be put into cold ashes and water, boiled and suffered to cool before they are rinsed.

If you live in the city, where it is always easy to procure provisions, be careful and not buy too much for your daily wants while the weather is warm.

Never leave out your clothes line over night, and see that your clothes-pins are all gathered into a basket.

Have plenty of crash towels in the kitchen; never let your white napkins be used there.

Instead of covering up your glasses and pictures with muslin, cover the frames only with cheap yellow cambric, neatly put on, and as near the color of the gilt as you can procure it. This looks better; leaves the glasses open for use, and the pictures for ornament; and is an effectual barrier to dust as well as flies. It can easily be colored with saffron tea, when it is faded.

A JOLLY RED NOSE. A capital story is told of a man, of a most resplendent and fiery proboscis, who went to Albany, (N. Y.) for the purpose of asking an office of the Governor of New York. Being cautioned not to appear before the Governor (who is a strong temperance man) in THAT nose, he, by the advice of a wagish physician, applied a flaxseed poultice to it before going to bed, the night previous to the intended call on the Governor. The next morning he appeared at the breakfast table of the hotel, with his nose bleached and parboiled, looking for all the world like a washerwoman's thumb. The doctor, himself an applicant for office, living in the same hotel, had advised the poultice only in joke, but when he found the man had actually applied it, he let the cat out of the bag. The boarders were accordingly on the lookout for the patient in the morning, and when the nose appeared there was such a roar of laughter at the table, that the poor fellow had to change his lodgings, before calling upon the temperance Governor.

END OF THE WORLD.

The following letter from the noted William Miller, who predicts the second coming of Christ and the destruction of the world, will not be devoid of interest to our readers.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14th, 1843.

DEAR BROTHER HINES—At the request of numerous friends, I here transmit to them, through you, a brief statement of facts relative to many stories with which the public are humbugged, by the pulpit, press, and bar-room declamations, concerning the principles I advocate, and the management of my worldly concerns.

My principles in brief, are, that Jesus Christ will come again to the earth—cleanse, purify, and take possession of the same, with all his Saints, sometime between March 21st, 1843, and March 21st, 1844. I have never, for the space of more than twenty three years, had any other time preached or published by me, I have never fixed on any month, day or hour, between that time. I have never found any mistake in reckoning, summing up, or miscalculation. I have made no provisions for any other time. I am perfectly satisfied that the Bible is true, and is the Word of God; and I am confident I rely wholly on that blessed book for my faith in this matter. I am not sent to prophecy, but to read, believe and publish, what God has required the ancient prophets to administer unto us, in the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments. These have been, and now are, my principles; and I hope I shall never be ashamed of them.

As to worldly cares, I have had but very few for twelve years past. I have a wife and eight children; I have great reason to believe they are all the children of God and believers in the same doctrine with myself. I own a small farm in Low Hampton, (N. Y.) My family support themselves upon it, and I believe they are esteemed frugal, temperate and industrious. They use hospitality without grudging, and never turn a pilgrim from the house nor the needy from their door. I bless God my family are benevolent and kind to all men who need their sympathy or aid. I have no cares to manage, except my own individual wants. I have no funds or debts due me of any amount. "I owe no man any thing." I have expended more than two thousand dollars of my property in twelve years, besides what God has given me through the dear friends in the cause.

Yours, respectfully,

WILLIAM MILLER.

HORRIBLE MURDER BY RUM. The Lyons, (N. Y.) Argus gives the details of a horrid murder, which took place a few miles from that place. It appears that the husband returned to his family intoxicated—that with him dwelt a brother—and that soon after the husband's return, he commenced abusing his wife, when this brother interfered, and protested against such ill treatment of the wife.

At this, the husband became enraged, and commenced a fight with his brother, in which he got worsted, owing to his intoxication. At length the husband succeeding in getting out his knife, which he always carried open in his pocket when drunk, and stabbed his brother in the stomach sufficiently to let out his intestines. The alarm was immediately given, and a physician employed to dress the wound, but notwithstanding all exertions to save him, he expired in the greatest agony.

This is the second attempt this fiend in human shape has made to take the life of his fellow man. He has now accomplished his hellish purpose.

When the body of his brother was about to be interred, it was taken to the jail for the murderer to look at in his sober moments. On approaching it, he exclaimed to those present—"Gentlemen, look at the effects of liquor!" "Oh, that I were in that coffin in place of my dear brother!"

With the stain of a brother's blood upon his hands, and the demon intoxication staring him in the face, he took a long and farewell look at the corpse, and returned to his cell weeping bitterly—and regretting the hour he first drank a drop of liquor.

What a comment on intoxication! What a warning to youth to avoid the first drop of poison!—lest they may at some period of their lives exclaim,—"behold the effect."

PIN MANUFACTORY. At Stafford, (Conn.) there is a factory for manufacturing pins, the greatest invention of modern days, and the only one of the kind known in this country or Europe. The machine takes the wire, cuts it off the right length, puts on the head, point, etc., completely finished before it leaves the machine, one makes about thirty six thousand a day; there is also a machine connected, for sticking them into the papers—the pins are put into a hopper, which drops them down to the paper which is carried around a cylinder; it sticks on four dozen at a hitch, and makes about fifty hitches a minute.

TREASURE TROVE. An old French lady lately died of general debility. A few minutes before she breathed her last, she told her children, who hung over her bed, that many years ago she had buried fourteen thousand dollars on the spot where the corn barn stood. As soon as she was buried, the money was all unburied and found to be correctly counted. How fortunate for the children that she did not carry the money, or the secret, with her!

TRIUMPH OF TEETOTALISM. In a late paper from the "Far West," the fact is mentioned of the re-marriage of a Judge Smith of Ohio, to his wife, from whom he had been divorced, in consequence of his intemperate habits. In a late number of the Journal of the American Temperance Union may be found some interesting particulars of this event. The Judge came to Ohio with a good fortune, a strong constitution, and a happy family; became an active and successful merchant, accumulated three hundred thousand dollars, obtained a seat on the bench, and was most highly respected. But he fell before the power of alcohol. The sparkling champagne laid the foundation of his ruin. From being a genteel, he became a gutter drunkard, and often hid under his own hay stacks to avoid the reproving glances of his wife. Unable to endure her degradation and sufferings, she procured a divorce, and he determined to die. He drank his quart, and three pints a day, suffering all the horrors of delirium tremens. In this State he was met by a Washingtonian hero, who, in less than three days, induced the Judge to sign the pledge. He was a reformed man, and, at a mass meeting, in the presence of five thousand persons, he was happily re-united to his wife. From that moment he in turn became an agent of mercy to the poor inebriates, and in a long tour has been the means of reclaiming many from their horrid captivity, forming altogether one of the most instructive and affecting lessons in the whole history of humanity.

BRUTAL MURDER. A most fiendish murder has just been discovered, which was committed a few miles from the City of Baltimore. The person murdered was about eighteen years of age, and was married to a man whose age was about forty five. The wife mysteriously disappeared, and neither husband nor neighbors could give any account of her. The bad treatment she had received from her husband, to whom she had been married only about fifteen months, and his general moral character, excited the suspicion of the country round, and there was a growing opinion that she had been unfairly dealt with. As some gunners were passing through a ditch, near his dwelling, they were attracted by the appearance of some newly dug earth. They ran a stick into the ground until it reached something hard. They gave notice of this fact to the neighborhood, who went with them to the spot, and digging, found the body of the unfortunate woman, enclosed in a coffee bag, with the head, arms and legs cut off. On reaching his house, they found the legs and arms wrapped in a coarse cloth in a room up stairs. Further search was made for the head, but it was not found. At the time of her murder she was in a situation soon to become a mother.

PERILS OF THE AMERICAN NAVY. Within little more than a year, two fine sloops of war, the Peacock and the Concord, have been lost, the captain, purser and one seaman of the latter drowned. The Flying Fish, tender to the exploring squadron, has never been heard from. The Saratoga, a new sloop, was recently dismantled, and only saved, with all her crew, by extraordinary seamanship on the part of her officers. The Vincennes, sloop of war, has recently been ashore in the West Indies. Commodore Hull, Captain John Gallagher, and Commodore Ralph, Voorhes and Boreham, have been dropped from the roll of our little navy, by the command of him who ends all cruizes.

NAVAL ESTIMATES. The cost of the armament of a ship of the line of ninety guns, is estimated by the navy department at eighty one thousand five hundred dollars. The estimated cost of the armament of a frigate of the first class forty-two thousand dollars; that of a sloop of war, nineteen thousand seven hundred and nine; of a brig of war, five thousand two hundred dollars; and of a schooner, four thousand five hundred dollars. These estimates include nothing more than the complements of guns and carriages, shot, shell and powder, with the muskets, pistols, pikes, cutlasses, etc.

AN AMERICAN CAPTAIN SENTENCED. Capt. Cozzens of the brig Pilgrim, of Baltimore, has been tried in Gaudaloupe on charge of robbing a house at Point Peter of forty thousand dollars at the time of the earthquake there, convicted and sentenced to ten years labor in the galleys in France, whither he was to be sent. The sentence would have been much severer, but that he had rendered good service to some of the inhabitants in their distress caused by the earthquake.

THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH. As to numerical strength this is the smallest religious sect in the United States. It has twenty one bishops, one thousand one hundred and forty five preachers, and about sixty thousand communicants. In some of the States, judging from the number of ministers in them, the influence of the denomination must be very small. In Maine, seven; New Hampshire, nine; Delaware, ten; Georgia, ten; Florida, six; Mississippi, nine; Louisiana, seven; Wisconsin, nine; Iowa, three; Indian territory, two. The largest number of ministers is found in the State of New York, two hundred and ninety seven; the next largest in Pennsylvania, one hundred and six. Virginia stands next, ninety eight. North Carolina has thirty. In 1832 the number of ministers was five hundred and sixty seven, so that it has a little more than doubled in ten years.

rescued from the grasp of death! Truly, some benign power guides our destiny!

Gos. Thanks, thanks, my friends, for your timely aid.

Luc. Oh, Gonsalvo.

Gos. Softly, softly, Lucilla—all are pirates—savage, bloody pirates—I suspected them, and while keeping watch, I was surrounded, and struck to the deck, and then cast into the sea,—providentially, I caught a rope—but oh! I bleed—Castillo, some water—(Lucilla brings water.)

DEA. Gonsalvo, look up, 'tis not Castillo; but thine own friend and companion, Deavilo!

Gos. Deavilo! mysterious powers! and here! ha, ha, ha!—(embraces.) That one word sent life and energy through every vein. Deavilo! oh, do I again behold these living?—but—I am very weak again.

DEA. Gonsalvo, arouse! the hand of heaven has directed you to us this night, to do a noble deed.

Gos. Oh, Deavilo, then thou knowest all?

DEA. Aye, and more than thou dar'st suspect.

Gos. And couldst thou not have saved one of them?

DEA. Aye, and did, as I now save thee—our companions, every soul, is alive and safe!

Gos. Safe! safe!—ha, ha, ha!—(swoons, and falls into Deavilo's arms.)

DEA. Poor soul!—his weak, exhausted frame, cannot sustain what his strong mind and brave heart would be proud to bear!—(places Gonsalvo on a couch when a knock is heard from L. door.)

What knock is that?—(draws his sword, and takes that of Rosalvo.)

Luc. Oh at this late hour!—it must be Banardo, or—Lucifer!

DEA. Well, 'tis prepared for either—let them come! With these two trusty sword, and heaven to nerve my arms, I'll have pasture with these wretched murderers! Ha! 'tis Gavino—(Enter Gavino.)

Gav. Wha! massa Deavilo here?—but go—go quick, or all his lost.

Gos. I saw nothin, but go; or by de debbil you die. Massa Banardo comes this way in search of Rosalvo—

DEA. Ha! missed so soon! but look there, Gavino, and see the wretch—the object of their search; and there Gonsalvo.

Gav. By de lor!

DEA. Now, while they are in their search, I'll despatch thee, monster, to the deep; and then conceal Gonsalvo in our hiding place; and be this thy ecology: 'Thou mightest have lived an ornament, a god among men; but I'veed and died a demon unfit to live among brutes.'—(Deavilo and Gavino carry the body of Rosalvo to window, when a knock is heard on L. E. door—they quickly launch the body out of a window—Deavilo raises Gonsalvo, who has partially recovered, and conceals him behind couch with himself. Gavino with Lucilla makes their exit R. door. Enter Banardo and De Soto, followed by a squad of pirates, reconnoitre, etc.)

DEA. So all is quiet within, and calm without. He is gone; and doubtless, he died as he had lived, a brave indomitable man; one whose deeds we should be proud to imitate; but let not his demise be the harbinger of more—your understand.

Soto. Then shall we not strike to-night, captain?

DEA. Hold, thou malicious imp of distraction!—last thou not my instructions?—To-morrow, when the sun is in his zenith, the pirates will strike. Banardo and Soto, and pirates L. Deavilo rises and advances cautiously—kneels and lifts his hands in thanks to heaven, as the curtain falls.)

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, May 4th, 1843.

Quite an interest has been excited here the past week, in the result of the Virginia Election. The returns come in slowly, but it is conceded that there are 12 democrats and 3 whigs elected to the next Congress. John M. Botts, distinguished for his endeavors to head Capt. Tyler has lost his election; Henry A. Wise, an able returned to Congress. In the State Legislature, the whigs have gained strength. Should the choice of the President devolve on the next Congress, Virginia will of course give her vote for the democratic candidate.

The whigs of Massachusetts hold a State Convention, at Worcester, on the 7th of June next, for the nomination of Governor. Each town has a right to send four times the largest number of Representatives in the Legislature to which they are entitled. Among the candidates for Governor, Ex-President Adams, Hon. Daniel Webster, Ex-Gov. Davis, Hon. Leverett Saltonstall, R. C. Winthrop and Abbot Lawrence, have been named.

It is presumed that Mr. Webster will not leave the Cabinet at present; such are the latest advices from Washington.

The steamship Britannia left this port for Liverpool, on Monday last, taking in the mail nineteen thousand letters, about fifty bushels of newspapers, and sixty two passengers. Among them is the Hon. Horace Mann, the honored friend of education. Mr. Mann was married the same morning he sailed, to Miss Mary T. Peabody of this city. It is the intention of this gentleman to absent about a year; and I have no doubt he will gain much in his European travels that will favour the great and good cause of elementary education, in which he has been so ardently engaged with us for years past. The pupils of every public school in Massachusetts ought to love and respect Mr. Mann.

May day went off very well on the second day of May. Thousands of the "Cits" wandered around the bordering towns by day, of day for the sweet flowers of the field. The ladies' fair at Roxbury, was however, the attracting point. It was held at the Norfolk House, and the Hall was thronged with visitors during the whole day and evening. Speeches were made by the Hon. Jonathan Chapman, Rev. Mr. Putnam, John C. Park, Esq. and others.

The new act, passed March 22d, 1843, relative to Nonopent Bridge is divided into four sections. Section first is as follows: "The rates of toll for passing over said bridge, and the road connected therewith, shall from and after the 28th day of October, 1843, be as follows, to wit: for each horse and rider two cents; for each cart, wagon or sleigh drawn by one horse, four cents; for each coach, chariot, phaeton or other carriage, drawn by two or more beasts, twelve cents; for each sleigh drawn by more than one horse, eight cents; for each cart or wagon drawn by more than four beasts, ten cents; for each chaise or sulky drawn by one horse, six cents; for horse and neat cattle, exclusive of those in teams or ridden, one cent each; for sheep or swine per dozen, one cent; for each cart or wagon drawn by three beasts, six cents; for each cart or wagon drawn by two beasts, five cents."

Section 2. Requires annual returns to be made of receipts, expenditures, etc. after January 1, 1845. And if the net income exceed six per cent. per annum on the sum of $35,000, the Legislature may regulate the tolls in such manner that the net income shall not exceed six per centum on $35,000.

Section 3. Gives the corporation the power to reduce tolls as far and as long as they please.

Section 4. The Legislature may at any time hereafter regulate the tolls on said bridge and turnpike as they may deem expedient."

SHOOTING BIRDS. A contemporary, in an editorial article, remarks that boys of large or small growth, who feel a desire to pop away their powder and shot at the birds who make their appearance in the spring, should remember the provisions of the Statute in such cases. The laws of the Commonwealth offer an immunity to the several kinds of birds, as follows:

To partridges, or quails, from March to September, inclusive; to woodcocks, snipe, larks or robins, from March to July fourth, inclusive; to plover, curlew, dough bird, or chicken bird, from April twentieth to September first.

Every person who shall kill any of the birds upon land not belonging to himself, without liberty from the owner thereof, is liable to a fine of ten dollars in addition to the actual damages sustained by such trespass.

COUNTY WASHINGTONIAN CELEBRATION. It is in contemplation to have a large gathering of the Washingtonians in Norfolk County, on the sixteenth day of May, at the Phoenix Hotel, Dedham, to rejoice and take courage that their exertions in behalf of this great moral reformation are daily being crowned with the most abundant success; and also to cheer by their presence and patronage the noble sacrifice the "muse lost" of the Phoenix Hotel has made in order to keep a temperance house by the exclusion of "all that can intoxicate" from his premises.

GREAT FIRE AT WILMINGTON, (N. C.) A large fire occurred at Wilmington, (N. C.) on the 30th ult., about noon. At least two hundred buildings were destroyed, and an immense amount of other property. A heavy gale of wind was blowing from the south, and the flames extended rapidly from the banks of Cape Fear to the railroad Depot. Families have suffered greatly. Not a large amount of merchandise was lost. Amount of damage estimated at three hundred thousand dollars—insurance for about one hundred thousand dollars; leaving a sad deficit to be borne by the citizens in these hard times. The Railroad buildings were destroyed, including five locomotives, some cars, the bridge over the ravine, and two or three hundred yards of the road where there were several tracks.

MURDER IN NEW JERSEY. An entire family, excepting two small children, were recently murdered near Port Colden, (N. J.) The family consisted of an aged man, his brother-in-law, wife and four children. The house was completely plundered, but what was obtained is unknown. The old gentleman boasted of having a considerable quantity of specie, and plunder was undoubtedly the object of those who committed this horrid deed. Handbills are in circulation, offering in the name of the surviving relatives, one thousand dollars for the arrest and conviction of the murderers.

LIABLE FOR SECURITIES. The Lancaster, (Mass.) Bank, has recently recovered seven thousand dollars damages of James G. Carter, Esq. its late President. It appears that in 1838 the Bank discounted a draft of five thousand three hundred dollars for a house in New York. Not having been paid at maturity, the Directors sent the President to New York to collect it. While there, as appeared by the testimony, he was induced by some consideration, beneficial to himself, it is said, to grant an extension, instead of collecting the amount as it was believed he might have done. The securities he took proved inadequate, and the demand was never paid.

HEAVY VERDICT. The jury in the case of the United States vs. Jesse Hoyt, the late Collector of New York, have returned a verdict for the Government of $220,837. The United States claimed from him $225,000, and he exhibited items of charges sufficient (if allowed) to make the balance due him, $179,000. The Judge, however, charged against his claims, especially against the one of $201,000, being a commission of one per cent on all receipts and disbursements during his term of office.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. The May issue of this excellent juvenile publication reached us in due time. The present number fully sustains the high and interesting character of those which have preceded it. We notice as contributors to this number, Miss Sedgwick, Miss Gould, Mrs. Sigourney, Rev. Mr. Abbot, and other equally moral and popular writers. C. Gill, Jr. at Quincy Bookstore, is agent for the publishers. Where are the three first numbers?

ROBBERY AT CANTON. Some desperate villain, on Saturday night last, entered the ticket office of the Providence Railroad, at Canton, and took therefrom money to the amount of from sixty to seventy dollars. Several travellers' trunks were also forced open and rifled of their clothing. An unsuccessful attempt was made to burn the building, and to enter the Bank half a mile from the depot.

MILLER TABERNACLE IN BOSTON. This edifice was dedicated to the service of Almighty God with appropriate exercises on Thursday afternoon last. Long before the hour for commencing, the building was crowded to suffocation. The services were solemn and affecting.

NORFOLK WASHINGTONIAN. Warren B. Ewer, Esq. favorably known as having heretofore been connected with the public press in Norfolk County, has issued the first number of a paper with the above name, at Dedham, which is designed to be the organ of the Washingtonians of this County. It is creditable initials, editorial articles, and doubtless will be a valuable auxiliary in the glorious cause which it espouses. Success to our friend.

HUNT'S MERCHANTS' MAGAZINE. The May number of this universally popular magazine, contains many articles of sterling interest from some of the most distinguished writers in the country. Among them, in the present monthly part, we notice the names of Hon. Levi Woodbury of New Hampshire, and Prof. Tucker of Virginia. Saxton & Pierce of Boston, are the agents for the editor and proprietor, Freeman Hunt, Esq. of New York.

CURIOUS EFFECT OF ALCOHOL. By some late investigations in France, it would appear that the use of ardent spirits has the same tendency to stint the growth of the human race, that it does on the brute creation. In one section of the country, alcoholic drinks are much used, and it has been found by the measurement of persons liable to military service, that the average height of the inhabitants has been diminished about one inch in every twenty years.

ACTS AND RESOLVES. Through the attention of John A. Bolles, Esq., Secretary of the Commonwealth, we have received a copy of the Acts and Resolves passed during the last session of the Legislature.

BUNKER HILL MONUMENT. The President of the United States and his Cabinet, and the Governors of all the States in the Union, have been invited to attend the celebration of the completion of the monument on the 17th of June.

MARRIAGE EXTRAORDINARY. The Concord, (N. H.) Courier, contains the following announcement under its marriage head:

"In this town, by Dea. John B. Chandler and Miss Maria French, Dea. John B. Chandler to Mr. Maria French—two non-residents married by themselves to themselves—all on the Sabbath day at the breakfast table, calling upon God and the family present, to bear witness to the act."

QUINCY AND BOSTON STAGE. The public attention is called to the advertisement of the old line, as a change has been made in the time of its departure both from this place and the city. Two stages of this line now daily depart and return.

THE BUCCANIER. We publish to-day the second part of this dramatic tale. It affords us pleasure to learn that the first part was favorably received by our readers, and an apparent desire manifested to have it regularly continued until it is finished.

MINISTERS TO CHINA. Hon. Edward Everett has declined the honor of the mission to China, as it is stated in the authority of private letters received by the last steamer.

THE CONCERT. Go to the concert of the Misses Macomber, advertised to take place this evening, if you wish to hear good singing and receive a rich equivalent for the time and money expended. There's no mistake that you will not regret the price of a ticket. [See advertising columns.]

TO READERS. Our advertising favors this week exclude much matter, original and selected, which was intended for publication to-day. We will endeavor to repay the kindness of our readers for their indulgence.

PROF. MCGAUGHY'S CONCERT. On Wednesday evening ensuing, Prof. McGaughy's concert, which he has contemplated for some time but postponed on account of the weather, will take place at the Town Hall, at half past seven o'clock. His preparations have taxed his pocket, and the music loving portion of the public should remunerate him for his efforts to please and entertain them. He will be assisted by the Quincy Brigade Band. Tickets of admission, 2 1-2 cents.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE. At a recent meeting of the proprietors of the Tremont Theatre, it was voted to sell the Theatre for the sum of fifty thousand dollars to the Baptist Society of Christians, under the charge of the Rev. Mr. Colver, now worshipping at the hall under the Boston Museum.

A monument has been erected at Truro, on Cape Cod, in remembrance of the melancholy loss of life among the citizens of that town in the dreadful gale of Oct. 3d, 1841. It is an obelisk of Italian marble, with the names of the deceased inscribed upon it.

The bills of the Maine Bank, Portland, are refused at the Suffolk Bank, Boston, but are for the present, redeemed at the counter. The sooner they are sent home the better.

Jacob Ridgeway, aged seventy-five years, and worth six millions of dollars, died last Sunday, in Philadelphia.

The western crops of grain are said to be very promising. Fruit crops in the neighborhood of Cincinnati bid fair to be very abundant and fine.

Upwards of eight thousand laborers will be employed upon the Lachine canal, (Canada), during the approaching season. This great work will probably be finished in two or three years, when vessels of three hundred tons burthen will be able to sail from ports of the Atlantic to any of the cities on the great lakes.

The prospect of fruit this season is most gratifying, and we shall probably have an abundance of all kinds the coming season.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Express, says that the Register of the Treasury, has issued nearly four hundred thousand dollars worth of Treasury Notes before the amount authorized by the late law of Congress, before he discovered his error!

"IS THIS MEDICINE?" we exclaimed the other day, on tasting some of JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE. It certainly has none of the nauseous flavor which one associates with the idea of physic. Children consider it quite a treat, and in taking it their palates are gratified, and their health restored at the same time. JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE, not only destroys worms, but carries off the mucus in which they are imbedded, and effects a radical and permanent cure. Every mother knows the prominent symptoms of worms, such as voracity, leanness, febrile breath, grinding of the teeth during sleep, paleness of the lips, itching of the nose, etc., but there are other indications not so generally recognized. A dry cough, dull eyes, enlargement of the abdomen, and many other symptoms, common to other diseases, frequently denote the presence of worms. If their existence is even suspected, the Vermifuge should be administered, because it can do no harm in any case, and may do incalculable good.

WE are confident that if the words Elegant, Superb, Splendid, Magnificent, Rich and Fashionable, will apply to any stock of Merchandise, we could, without assurance, use them in advertising ours. The great size of our Hall, which was visited by many during the time it was occupied by the Mechanics' Association for their Fair, has induced us to adopt the "ONE PRICE" system, and all the Goods are arranged upon Counters, and labelled—otherwise it would be impossible to examine our immense stock without delay and trouble. THE ONE PRICE SYSTEM, we hope will meet with encouragement, and we are confident that it will. The Merchant, Mechanic, Farmer and Trader, whether a judge of Goods or not, will purchase alike, and without fear of imposition.

We wish it understood, that our STOCK is for EXHIBITION as well as SALE, and visitors will be shown any amount of goods, from $100 to $100,000, which in point of richness and variety, will be found inferior to none in this City.

Our aim shall be to accommodate our Customers, and to win the name of being the most honorable, best conducted, and Cheapest CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT.

POETRY.

YES OR NO.

When of a man I ask a question,
I wish he'd answer—Yes or No,
Nor stop to make some smooth evasion,
And only tell me—may be so.

I always doubt the friendly meaning
Of—well—perhaps—I do not know—
When for a favor I am suing,
I'd rather hear the answer—No.

When of a friend I wish to borrow
A little cash—to hear him say—
I'm none to day—but on to-morrow—
Is worse than if he told me nay.

Why all this need of plastering over,
What we in fact intend to show,
Why not at once, with much less labor,
Say frankly, Yes, my friend, or No?

I from my soul despise all quibbling,
I'll use it not with friend or foe—
But when they ask, without dissimbling,
I'll plainly answer, Yes, or No.

And when I ask that trembling question,
"Will you be mine, my dearest Miss?"
Then may there be no hesitation,
To say distinctly—Yes Sir, Yes.

"TO SUNDRIES."

"Debtor to sundries!" How these small amounts Creep upward into troublesome accounts!
"To sundries!" What a simple condensation
Of matters intricate or undefinable,
Or to be mentioned anyway declinable!
"To sundries" carries out a calculation
With such commercial dignity of air,
Bidding defiance to elucidation,
Of things too little for investigation,
And settling differences fair and square!
When you don't charge your memory, you may Charge "sundries," and be sure the entry's right;
As we "to sundries," now indite a lay,
And charge "To Sundries" what we so indite!

UNCERTAINTY OF EARTHLY OBJECTS.

As fall the trees upon the mountain's side,
As shoot the stars upon a cloudless night,
So pass the hopes that foster human pride,
With meteor glance, with dim disastrous flight.
How frail the faintest shoots of earthly love!
The death of fathers, children, brothers, friends,
Which afflicts, doth oft and deeply prove
The vanity of earthly joys and ends.
We lean upon a prop, that hath no strength;
We rest upon an arm, that hath no power;
We trust it long and fondly; but at length,
It falls and blasts us in an evil hour.
But time, nor tide, nor earth, nor hell, can harm
Him that doth firmly rest on God's eternal arm.

CHARITY.

Oh! blessed work of charity!—a tree Planted for love of human kind. A well,
A temple, or sweet overshadowing canopy,
Can make the heart with holy feelings swell.
The holy cot, within the holy gate—
The sacred hut beside the verdant plain—
Cheer with their pious gifts the desolate,
And light the fading beams of hope again.

WOMAN.

O, 'tis not alone with the glance of her eye,
The sound of her voice or the breath of her sigh,
The words of her love, or the clasp of her hand,
That woman o'er man holds her gentle command;
But we bend to an influence dear as the light
That beams from the stars in the silence of night,
Nor care we to question the hallowed control
That lives like divinity shined in her soul.

ANECDOTES.

There was a very respectable man in a certain neighborhood who was very fond of the "critter," but who was very unwilling to have it known. He would drink freely, but always would contrive to conceal it. One night he had been abroad, and to conceal his inebriety when he returned, he took a chair with a great flourish, and prepared to sit down upon it; but instead of placing the seat towards him he placed the back of it towards him, and when he attempted to sit down he fell sprawling upon the floor. His wife, mortified and ashamed, before his wife and family, which was a very genteel one, and at last regained his seat. He sat thoughtful for a considerable time. At last he said, "John, where is that temperance pledge which you carry about you for people to sign?" John drew it from his pocket, and his father signed it. Then drawing a bottle of brandy from his pocket, he hurled it against the back of the fire place. "There," said he, "drink that. I have done with you forever." The accident which exposed him, proved to be one of the greatest blessings.

A Frenchman being at confession accused himself of many crimes; and among other things, acknowledged that not more than an hour before he had given his wife a sound drubbing.

"Why did you do that, my son?" said the father confessor.
"Why," replied the penitent, "I did the same thing every time I come to confession, and were I once to omit it, my spirit would hardly entitle me to absolution. In conformity to the ordinations of our holy religion, I confess once every year; but my memory is so defective that I never can recollect any sin I have been guilty of unless I beat my wife, which I therefore always do on these occasions, and she in return, comes rattling like a hail storm with a full, true and particular account of every crime I have committed from the hour I married her to the day I drub her."

An old woman was asked what she thought of one of her neighbors by the name of Jones, and with a very knowing look, replied, "Why, I don't like to say any thing about my neighbors; but as to Mr. Jones, sometimes I think, and then again I don't know—but after all, I rather guess, he'll turn out to be a good deal such a sort of a man as I take him to be?"

"Ah, John," said the minister, "what is the matter with you that you've been so remiss in attending the kirk of late; is it athenism, or deism, or that sad rowdism that's the cause?" "Faith, no, sir," said John, "it's something a thousand times worse than that. 'Save us,' exclaimed the minister, 'what can it be?' 'Eh! sir,' replied John, in a spasm of agony, 'it is a rheumatism.'"

What is the fastest tea-totaller in existence? The steam-engine, which takes nothing but water, and can go sixty miles an hour.

buried ignominiously and deprived of the prayers of the church. It is forbidden to give, and more explicitly to sell, any spirituous liquors to students, workmen, servants, apprentices, and private soldiers. Whoever is observed drunk in the streets, or making a noise in a tavern, is sure to be taken to prison, and detained until sober, without, however, being on that account exempted from the fines. If the delinquent has no money, he is kept in prison until some one pays for him, or until he has worked out his enlargement. Twice a year these ordinances are read aloud from the pulpit by the clergy; and every tavern-keeper is bound, under penalty of a heavy fine, to have a copy of them hung up in the principal rooms of his house.

Two preachers of Millerism were recently mobbed in St. Louis. They were driven from the house and severely bruised by the lawless ruffians who thus evince their regard for truth.

MATTERS IN BOSTON.

Boston, May 1st, 1843.

Ma. Editor.—As it may not be uninteresting to you, and especially to your numerous readers, to know some of the events transpiring in our goodly city, I have concluded to sketch a few. You will do with them, as in your wisdom, you deem best. There are at present many indications of a revival of business in the city. The proprietors of houses and stores are fast enlarging and improving them. On every street, you will see these improvements in progress. The old mansion houses and large estates of those worthies who have long since departed this life, are fast being cut up and thrown down to gratify the avarice of their heirs. In this manner, some of the most cheerful situations and many of the trees of ancient time, are now being made to disappear; mansions and trees which in England, would be preserved for their antiquity merely, are daily being destroyed in this city. It ought not so to be, but so it is. Every thing in this Yankee land must give place to mammon, the god of this western world.

The old temperance society of Boston have commenced a series of meetings on Sabbath evenings, to wake up the citizens upon this all important subject. Moses Grant, Esq., is President of the Society, a man whom you know to be ever ready to engage in every good thing. The design of these meetings is not to interfere in the least with the movements and operations of the Washingtonians; but, on the contrary, to further their efforts in rolling forward the temperance cause. The first meeting was held last Sabbath evening, in the meeting-house of the Rev. Dr. Jenks. The meeting was addressed by that indefatigable apostle of abolitionism and temperance, Henry B. Stanton, Esq., and though the evening was rainy, yet the house was well filled. The address was truly an interesting one, though we cannot say the lecturer advanced any thing new upon the subject. He spoke of the improvements or discoveries of the present day—said our fathers felt the evils of intemperance, mourned over them, and prayed over them—but did not discover the remedy. But, the present age has discovered it, and it is simply to let alcohol alone; probably, the very simplicity of the remedy led our ancestors to overlook it. Though the illustrations were not new, yet many of them were presented in a new and truly pleasing manner. The illustration of the insidious manner in which moderate drinking creeps on, and the awful dash of the final ruin which it brings, were strikingly illustrated by the man who in his little scallop should go out upon the water below Buffalo, and suffer his boat to be moved forward by slow degrees, until by little and little, it should be wafted within the eddies and finally engulfed in the awful plunge over the falls. The lecture was calculated to do much good.

The season for lyceum lectures, learned associations, oratorical odes, and such like amusements, has about passed by for the present.

The Rev. John S. Maffitt is preaching in the Odeon to full houses, but he seems to have lost considerable of the fire and brilliancy of eloquence which he possessed, and for which he was justly famed twenty years ago. He shows marks of "Old Father Time's" gambols around his head, though even now, there is occasionally a flight upward, showing that some of his old fire still beams beneath the smouldering embers. It is said the congregation worshipping at the Odeon under the present arrangement, previous to this visit of Mr. Maffitt, have not borne a comparison in point of numbers with those who worshipped there under the ministrations of the Rev. Mr. Rogers. We are, however, hoping that Mr. Maffitt's former popularity will bring them up to their old standard of numbers.

There is considerable said at present on politics. The prevailing opinion, I think, is that Tyler is coming up—his friends are increasing, and it is true, the ultra, or Clay whigs, are somewhat venomous against him, as being the man who has frustrated their plans formed in 1840. But the more sober part of both whigs and democrats seem disposed to consider the present administration about right. The feeling of the democratic party appears to be this—whenever President Tyler has acted democratic he must be sustained.

The Irish repeal question seems to be eliciting no inconsiderable attention here. Spirited meetings are held monthly in Boylston Hall, when that large room is filled to overflowing. They are addressed by gentlemen from this city, and frequently by others from abroad. It is thought the American people will ere long take a deeper interest in the sufferings of Erin's Isle. Indeed, why should they not? They have a noble example set them in the President of the United States and in his honorable and talented son. Why should they not? The sons of Ireland struggled for them in that glorious Revolution which resulted in the independence of these United States. America owes Ireland a debt of gratitude, which, if she fails to pay, in her present struggle against oppression, she will be doubly ungrateful.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, May 11, 1843.

Revival of Business—Prosperity of Boston—Funds Exchanges—Buildings—New York—Low rate of Discounts—Reaction of business—Transatlantic news, cheering to the American people—Rich cargo of the Hibernia—Life in Boston—Theatres, Museum, Buffalo Chase—Temperance, Father Mathew's visit to the United States—Progress of Temperance in Europe.

The Olive Branch of this city, in speaking of the times, thus discourses—"business is every where times are still out of joint. In this city and neighborhood, there will be more new and valuable buildings erected than in any one year since Boston has been the centre of an immense business reaching to the ends of the earth. Her steam communication with Europe, and her iron roads to the heart of the great West, give her an enviable position, and soon Boston will be one of the greatest cities in the world. Money is plenty, indeed millions on millions of money lie wholly unemployed. It will, however, find investment, and the wheels of business move on. As to Exchanges, we never knew them so good. It costs scarcely any thing to get funds from any part of the Union. In the best days of the United States Bank exchanges were not so good as now." In one of the rides of a gentleman, over our city, a few days since, he counted one hundred and twenty four brick houses now building, and mostly on new made land.

Accounts from New York are equally as flattering. The palmy days of 1835 seem again to be revived in that great city. Commercial affairs there appear gradually to assume more stability, and confidence is returning. Business men, every where, however, are disposed to move with caution, (from sad experience well they may,) and mercantile operations are likely for some time to be confined to the legitimate wants of trade.

The Hibernia of last week from Liverpool, brings the most gratifying news of foreign trade. "Things (say correspondents in England) have not been so healthy since 1837; and what is more satisfactory, likely to continue; our merchants, manufacturers and spinners are all evidently in better spirits." The last British steamer brought about one million and a half dollars of gold to Boston—one hundred thousand pounds sterling of this amount was consigned to Messrs. Harnden & Co.

The application to the New York Banks for discounts of paper were, last week, very limited; and satisfactory notes were readily taken at five per cent. with the prospect that the rates of discount may decline still more.

I have thus alluded to the state of business, because I am aware it is a subject that deeply interests the readers of your paper, and I have collected these facts from actual observation or high authorities for veracity.

Our city continues lively, and the places of public amusement are in full operation. Enoch, the tragedian, is starring at the Tremont for a few nights. The Boston Museum is continually getting up novel and splendid attractions. There is now exhibiting two Dioramas, one of which is a grand Scriptural scene of the Deluge.

The great Buffalo Chase comes off this day, at Cambridge, at the noon course. "I shall be there to see," but it is understood that Mr. Lewis from Missouri, will be on the ground with a herd of fourteen young buffaloes from the Rocky Mountains. A man, dressed in Indian costume and mounted on a fleet horse, will give chase to, and capture one of his herd, one or more of the animals while at full speed, representing the manner that wild animals are taken in their native prairies by the Indians and Spaniards of Mexico.

The cause of temperance is still onward here, thanks to kind Heaven. I do not despair, old as I am in years, of living to see the day when not a glass of alcoholic drink will be sold in Boston as a beverage. Father Mathew, it is said, will visit the United States this season, and I trust he will put the capstone to the work of temperance before he goes home to Ireland. Let his reception be as glorious as that of La-Fayette in 1824. Let the whole Union resound with welcome. All Europe seems to be moving in aid of the Temperance Reform. In Sweden it is making wonderful progress, while the King promotes with the most active zeal. All distilleries have been suppressed, in number fifty thousand, throughout the realm. In other European countries it is rapidly prospering.

MASS MEETING OF WASHINGTONIANS. In consequence of the public-spirited and praise-worthy stand taken by Mr. James Clark, the new proprietor of the Phoenix Hotel, in Dedham, the Washingtonians of Norfolk County have determined to hold a mass meeting in that town, on the 10th inst., at Rev. Dr. Lamson's Meeting-house, at nine o'clock in the morning precisely. Samuel A. Walker will officiate as Chief Marshal.

The Church will be opened for the admittance of ladies at eight o'clock.

The following gentlemen have accepted invitations to be present and address the meeting, viz: Moses Grant, Esq.; Rev. Mr. Pierpont and Dr. Channing, Boston; Rev. Messrs. Chapin and Scudder, of Charlestown; Hon. Seth Sprague, Jr., Dedham; Mr. Van Wagner, Foughkeepsie, (N. Y.); Hon. I. H. Wright, Jamaica Plains, (Roxbury); James B. Congdon, Esq., New Bedford; Rev. Theodore Parker, West Roxbury; Daniel Kimball, Esq., Lowell; N. P. Banks, Jr., Waltham; Oliver Parsons, Esq., Salem; J. W. Goodrich, Esq., Worcester; James L. L. F. Warren, Esq., Brighton. Other distinguished advocates of the cause have also been invited, but have not yet been heard from.

The music on the occasion will be conducted by performers eminent for ability.

The order of exercises for the day will be issued as soon as the arrangements have been completed, and the entire list of speakers will be added to the programme.

The following gentlemen have been chosen a Committee of Vigilance to raise a delegation in their respective towns, and to report the number who intend to be present, to the Committee of Arrangements at Room No. 1 Phoenix Hotel, at eight o'clock, in the morning precisely:

Rev. T. W. Pierce, Dorchester; J. W. Cheney, West Roxbury; Leonard Everett, Canton; Martin Torrey, Foxboro; Philip W. Miller, Franklin; James Smith, Needham; Elias Richards, Weymouth; Charles Breck, Milton; Asa Brett, Stoughton; Richard A. Flemming, Medway; Rev. T. T. Richmond, Medfield; Pym C. Hatch, Dover; Caleb Sales, Jr., North Wrentham; Charles Ide, Sharon; Alva Morrison, Braintree; Ebenezer Dedden, Randolph; George Newcomb, Quincy; William Bacon, Wapole; Thomas Laha, Roxbury; Eliphalet Stone, Dedham, (Mill Village); Robert Seaver, Roxbury, (Jamaica Plains); Warren B. Ewer, Dedham; Caleb Hill, Neponset Village, (Dorchester); Ebenezer Bird, Dorchester.

EDGAR K. WHITAKER, Chairman Committee of Arrangements.

At an adjourned meeting in New Bedford, the whole subject of a City Charter was indefinitely postponed by a large majority.

THE PRIMARY SCHOOL READER.—Part Second.—By William D. Swan. A few weeks since we noticed the publication of "the Primary School Reader—part first," and expressed a hope that the able author would speedily produce a second part. He has done so, and in it our expectations of usefulness and excellence are fully realized.

This second work is intended for the use of Primary Schools after the scholars shall have mastered the first part, and the same theory of "prevention" is further extended and exemplified.

In his preface, Mr. Swan alludes to the systems of teaching now in use, and it needs but little reflection to perceive the justness of his remarks. "A regular system," he says—"for teaching children to read, is as necessary as it is for teaching any other art; and it is the want of system that forms the principal defect of most reading books now in use."

His strictures on the "Pictorial method" are somewhat severe, but perfectly true. We commend the following remarks to the consideration of our readers:

"The method of teaching young children to read in most Primary School books is by the aid of cuts placed opposite the word or sentence to be read. The absurdity of this may at any time be seen, by hearing a child, that has learned the names of the letters, but is unacquainted with their powers, read from one of these books. Direct his attention to the pictures. There sit a cat, a rat, a bug, and a variety of other objects. Let him 'spell the words, and pronounce them,' and the chance is equal that he will say, cat, kitten; rat, mouse; and bug, spider. The truth is, the pictures are worse than useless. They divert the attention of the child, while they render no aid in pronouncing the words. The pronunciation of words is the mechanical part. This can only be taught to children successfully by first teaching them the powers of the letters. Teaching them that words are signs of ideas is the intellectual part; and, in doing this, the words themselves should be the only pictures used."

Naming the letters before pronouncing the words, as, cat, cat, rat, rat, is of no assistance to the child in learning to read. This will be seen by comparing the sounds of the words with the names of their letters. For instance, before reading the word cat, he is directed to say see-a-t-e, and, before mat, em-a-t-e. It is obvious that the names of these letters, cat, a-t-e, give not the slightest clew to the sound of the word mat; and the child has, therefore, to learn from some other source that d-o-g spells dog, instead of dec-o-gee. The last is the only sound of the word which the learner can infer from the combination of the letters. The fallacy of this method arises from confounding the names of the letters with their powers, or elementary sounds."

The plan of beginning with a child by teaching him "to read familiar and easy words, instead of letters," meets with no more regard from our author. In favor of this system "it is urged, that it can hardly be doubted that a child would learn to pronounce any twenty six familiar words, much sooner than the twenty six letters of the Alphabet"—but, admitting this, "the question arises—what does the child acquire by this process more than the recollection of twenty six familiar words. Has any thing been learned that will enable him to pronounce the twenty seventh word?"

This volume is intended first to teach scholars to "exercise the voice upon the consonant sounds in combination;" second, to pay due regard to "inflection"—which may be termed the art of teaching children to read with the natural tones they use in speaking, and, third, to combine distinct articulation with proper inflection. We venture to predict that if children are taught upon this new and natural system, the "school-boy tone" will soon disappear from our primary schools, and never find its way—as it now does—into those of higher grade, nor need correction in our academies and colleges.

The importance of a true system of education—a system that begins right—must be our apology for this extended notice of the little work before us, and we cannot close without expressing the hope that Mr. Swan's "Primary School Readers" will soon form the basis of instruction in New England.

WEYMOUTH HOTEL. At a meeting of the Washington Society of Weymouth, May 6th, 1843, the following Resolutions were adopted; and it was also voted to have them published in the papers in Norfolk County who are friendly to the cause of temperance.

Whereas, it has been reported that our friend and brother, ASA B. WALES, the keeper and proprietor of the Weymouth Hotel, has again commenced selling intoxicating liquors, therefore,

Resolved—That this report is a base slander, designed not only to bring the Washingtonian cause into disrepute, but to injure the moral character of Mr. Wales, and to uphold and perpetuate the unrighteous business of dram selling.

Resolved—That we have unwavering confidence in the faithfulness of brother Wales to the Washingtonian cause, and that we cordially commend him to the patronage of all who love to promote temperance and good order among their fellow men.

R. K. TROTTER, Sec'y.

POLITICAL. The National Intelligencer says Daniel Webster has resigned the office of Secretary of State, and Hugh S. Legare, Attorney General of the United States, is appointed to be Acting Secretary of State for the present.

Hon. Caleb Cushing of this State, has been appointed Minister and Commissioner to China, in the place of Edward Everett, who declines the appointment. John Tyler, Jr., a son of the President, will go to China with Mr. Cushing, as Private Secretary. Fletcher Webster goes as Secretary of Legation.

Col. R. M. Johnson, late Vice President of the United States, is to make a visit to the New England States, by invitation, in the month of August.

SEVENTEENTH OF JUNE. It is said that the President of the United States will visit Boston, in June, in company with the Postmaster General, and other officers of his administration, to be present at the celebration of the completion of Bunker Hill Monument.

McGAUGHY'S CONCERT. The performances, as we learn from gentlemen who attended, were worthy of much praise and highly creditable to the efforts and talents of Professor McGaughy and the Quincy Brigade Band, who kindly assisted him. It is to be regretted that better encouragement is not extended to citizens of this town, who labor to interest and amuse, instead of the apparent disposition to sustain strangers in preference.

THE MISSES MACOMBERS' CONCERT. This entertainment was of an excellent character and attended by a large audience. Among the number present we noticed some of our old and respectable singers and citizens, who have expressed themselves in the strongest terms in regard to the musical skill and talents of these young ladies. All were highly pleased, and will greet the twin sisters again when they give another concert, which they propose to do in the month of September next.

SOUTHERN MINSTRELS. It will be seen, on reference to our advertising columns, that the Southern Minstrels will repeat their entertainments in this place. We did not witness their performances last Thursday evening, and consequently cannot speak of their claims to public favor.

PROGRESS OF TEMPERANCE. A temperance tea party was lately held in Salem, in "Deacon Giles' Distillery," which has been purchased by a temperance man for a steam saw and planing mill. This is the place about which the Rev. George B. Cheever, some few years since, "had such horrible dreams," and for the publishing of which dreams he was cowed and imprisoned. He had the pleasure of addressing the large assembly on this occasion in this famous citadel of King Alcohol. What changes in a few years!

ANNEXATION OF TEXAS. The National Intelligencer contains an Address signed by Hon. Messrs. John Quincy Adams, Seth M. Gates, William Slade, William B. Calhoun, Joshua R. Giddings, Sherlock J. Andrews, Nathaniel B. Borden, Thos. C. Chittenden, John Mattocks, Christopher Morgan, Joshua M. Howard, Victory Birdseye, and Hiland Hall, all members of the late Congress, calling on the people, without distinction of party, to oppose any scheme for the annexation of Texas to the United States, and giving divers weighty reasons for the same.

"SONNETS AND OTHER POEMS," by William L. Garrison. These Poems refer principally to liberty, that name delightful to every American ear. They are thoroughly imbued with the spirit of freedom, and cannot fail to be read with pleasure and profit by every friend to his country and believer in the equality of human rights. We have not been able to give that thorough reading which we intend to do, but from what we have already read of them, we most cordially recommend their perusal to every American citizen.

ANGLO AMERICAN MAGAZINE. The publishers of the Boston Daily Mail issue a monthly work, being a selection of all the choice articles from the European magazines, under the above appropriate cognomen. This magazine is an intellectual feast to the reader who delights in the thoughts and ideas of gifted and philosophical writers. It is an enterprise of merit, and should be generously encouraged.

THE ANGLO AMERICAN. A weekly publication of this name has just been started in New York. It is beautifully printed on good paper, and the first number gives promise that it will be an interesting hebdomad. We can judge better of its merits by the succeeding parts.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

Jacob Shipman, the defaulting messenger between New York and Philadelphia, who lately decamped with a large amount of money in gold entrusted to his care, has been apprehended in Indiana, and will be brought to Philadelphia in a few days.

The increase of crime in our large cities is attributed to the translation of vile French novels, in a cheap form, that have recently flooded the United States.

A young lady of Manchester, (N. H.) lately swallowed twenty five pins and one needle. A physician was called, and the pins were with great difficulty extracted.

Never condemn your neighbor unheard, however many the accusations that may be preferred against him; every story has two ways of being told.

A suit was recently instituted in Hagarstown, (Md.) for the recovery of seventy five cents, on account of candles, firewood, etc., used by the defendant, while courting a young lady living in the family of the plaintiff. The suit was decided in favor of the plaintiff.

Many persons are in the habit of using German silver tea and table spoons without being aware of their poisonous composition. It is stated, that some friend of humanity has announced, that German silver is composed of copper, arsenic and nickel, and that it oxidises very rapidly in contact with any acid, and that small particles are taken into the stomach, which imperceptibly act as a slow but sure poison.

The Mayor elect of St. Louis has worked for ten or twelve years at the blacksmith business. At the time of his election, he was one of the City Constables.

In Dumfries (Scotland,) there are twelve bakers' shops, and seventy nine whiskey shops.

MARRIED.

In this town, 11th inst., by Rev. Mr. Allen, Mr. GEORGE VEAZIE, 2d, to Miss MAHALA P. DUGAN formerly of Alexandria, (N. H.)

We were kindly and generously remembered by our friends on this happy event, whom we wish a rich abundance of the choicest comforts of this sublunary existence and a christian's termination of life's pilgrimage.

The Grand Temperance Jubilee to be given at Faneuil Hall, Boston, on the evening of the 18th inst., will be for the benefit of Mr. Charles Wade, Secretary of the Boston Washingtonian Society.

POETRY.

TO MY WIFE.

The following beautiful lines were written, a few years since, by the late lamented Melzar Gardner to his wife, who was at that time absent from home, on the anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Gardner, who was an editor of a popular newspaper, was killed about a month ago in Norfolk, (Va.) the details of which were published in the papers.

Thou who didst teach my youthful muse to sing—
Strung her new harp, and claimed her earliest strain;
Hover thou near me on thy spirit wing,
And I will wake its melody again!
Surely to thee its sweetest strains belong—
Thy love—thy truth—thy constancy my song.

E'en from the dawning of my spirit's life,
No soul had breathed its sympathy for me;
No kindly word had cheered me in the strife;
And I was like a kearled and blighted tree,
Which, planted firmly on the storm-god's path,
Scorns all his fury, and defies his wrath!

The world had never loved me. I—a child—
Cast on its bosom, found that bosom cold;
It spurned me, when I thought it should have smiled;
And when I offered love, it asked for—gold;
And showed me—Love, an article of trade,
And Truth and Friendship waiting to be paid!

I loathed it then; and each day nerved my soul,
As with a gear of strength, its hate to brave;
I never bowed me to its base control;
And thus my heart became a living grave
Of strong affections. Thou didst set them free,
And all its treasured wealth belongs to thee!

It is all thine! O would that it were more,
And better worth the sacrifice it cost;
Kind friend—thy pleasant home—and all the store
Of love thy life had gathered—these thou lost!
Each would have shared, and each have claimed a part
Now, thou hast love for love, and heart for heart!

A wanderer then—poor, friendless and alone—
No house—no lands—no hoarded wealth were mine;
Thou wert my all, and thou wert all my own;
Ah, I was rich to win a heart like thine!
Love that wealth buys, with poverty will fail,
But truth like thine is never kept for sale!

I've given up all I loved, for thee alone!
These were thy words which memory aye will keep;
When thou with me didst bask the cold world's frown;
And on my bosom sobbed thyself to sleep!
Best pledge of earnest truth, thy young heart's fears;
And sweetest proof of love, those bridal tears!

Well might thou doubt my poor world beaten barque,
To bear thy fortunes o'er life's stormy sea!
The tempest then was howling fierce and dark,
And its wild wrath was terrible to thee;
And but one light shone in the murky sky—
'Twas Love's bright star—our hope—our destiny!

That sad unbidden fear—'tis past—'tis past!
And though these lines still tell that threatening cloud,
No shadow on our spirits can it cast,
For there that light—'tis powerless to shroud,
Beams clearer—purer still, as years depart—
The bright continuing sunshine of the heart!

Star of our wedded life—thy brightening ray,
Hath never faded from the upper sky!
My spirit's darkness thou hast turned to day,
And thy soft beams now light that fearful eye!
For this, I thank thee, Father—who to me
Didst give that light that borroweth from Thee!

Nine circling seasons now their course have run,
Since my world frozen heart thy love did warm;
Since, when I told thee it was all thy own,
Home for life's sunshine—shelter from its storm,
Thou, gentle one, didst nestle by my side,
And to that heart I clasped thee, as my bride!

It doth not seem so long; yet time hath fled,
For there are sweet and ever blooming flowers;
Our daughters—come to tell us years have sped—
Their age, Love's only record of the hours!
And since I left thee, yet another one,
Waith his sire's first kiss—'Tis mine, my son.

I am alone—and far from them and thee—
Yet have I swift-winged Thought—'and to thy home
When evening shadows fall, I haste to see
The smile of joy that waiteth till I come,
Leaving behind all thoughts that give us pain,
To clasp my loved ones to my heart again!

God keep them, ever—and if memory's page,
When I am gone should bear my humble name,
Or with the record of the passing age
Be linked one act of mine deserving fame;
Long as that fame one heart is treasured in,
Be thine the praise, thy love inspired to win!

God keep thee, ever, dearest! May no cloud
Of sorrow cast its shadows on thy brow;
Or if it come, still bearing through its shroud,
May Love and Hope shine beautiful as now;
Till, when the tie that binds our hearts is riven,
It blendeth with the better light of Heaven!

ANECDOTES.

'What is your name?' said a New Orleans merchant to a half-breed, half-alligator sort of a fellow who applied to him for employment.

'My name is Ichabod Wing when I'm at home,' was the answer.

'Where was you born?'

'I was born no-where—but was picked out of the Mississippi, floating down stream on a raft.'

'What can you do, if I employ you?'

'I can whip twice my weight in wild cats, swim up Niagara Fall, twist a rope with three live rattlesnakes, can shovel water out of a leaking boat, and some folks say I can talk Dutch. I can drive hens to water, wait on table, when the gals go cootin, can scare crows out of a tater-field or corn-field, and climb seven trees at once.' Of course the merchant employed him right off.

'See how wrong you are to drink,' said some one to a man who was then drunk, 'wine causes you to be as stupid as I am.' 'It is not so,' answered the drunkard, 'I do not drink in drinking, but in attempting to walk when I am drunk.'

'They visit me in my dreams,' as the man said of the bed-bugs.

Have you ever tried it?

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, May 18, 1843.

Divorce case.—Hearing before the Supreme Court in Boston—Great interest excited—Mr. and Mrs. Dunham—Dr. Bowen—Eloquence of the Counsel—Rumors of political changes in offices under the United States Government—Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr.—Collectorship—President Tyler—Brief notice of his life and character.

The divorce case before the Supreme Court has excited an unusual degree of interest the past three days. The parties are Thomas H. Dunham, libellant, ex Elizabeth Dunham, libellee. Both parties resided at South Boston, and owing to some unhappy differences in the matrimonial state, separated. The action was brought by Mr. Dunham against his wife on the ground of infidelity, implicating in the transaction a Doct. Bowen of South Boston. The testimony, to say the least, was dubious for veracity, and the opinion with very many here is, that the lady is innocent of the charges brought against her. Legal talent of a high order was manifested on this occasion. Bradford Sumner, Esq. for the libellee, spoke three hours, with much force, feeling and animation granting a decree of divorce. He was followed by Hon. Rufus Choate of the United States Senate, in a speech of nearly six hours, being one of the most powerful and eloquent forensic displays ever listened to in a court of justice. I perceived that Mrs. Dunham often shed tears, and the husband himself was by no means unaffected. Mrs. Dunham was richly attired, to perfect neatness. She appears about twenty five years of age, and is regarded by many as beautiful in form and features. She may be safely set down as a handsome woman. The opinion of the Court, to the time of my now writing, is not known, but I opine it will be in favor of the libellee. During the trial of many days, the Court-room was crowded to its utmost capacity, such is the public curiosity in cases of this delicate nature touching domestic matters. I observed many ladies there.

Rumors have been rife for some days past of expected removals in certain offices of the United States Government in Massachusetts, with how much foundation for truth, I do not know. It is said that the Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr. will shortly succeed Ex-Gov. Lincoln in the Collectorship. Should it be the case, the appointment with the democratic party of our State will be a highly popular one. Mr. Rantoul stands deservedly high in their affections and esteem. Skilled in legal science—of business habits—remarkably rapid and clear in his perceptive powers—Mr. Rantoul would fill any public office, I care not how high or responsible, with honor and ability.

With the democratic party, President Tyler is gaining daily, and he deserves the support of all true patriots to their country. His name will go to the Democratic National Convention in May, 1844, and if nominated, he will be triumphantly elected. His friends rest his claims to the decision of that Convention, and by its results, if fairly matured, they will abide.

I perceive with great gratification that a work has been recently issued in New York, devoted to a brief outline of the life and character of President Tyler. In his whole political course he is successfully vindicated from the calumnies heaped upon him by political foes. The Boston Times (May 18th), with its usual ability, thus briefly and graphically compresses the matter of this little work, as follows, viz:

"John Tyler, President of the United States, was born in the County of Charles City, (Va.) March 29, 1790; was educated at William and Mary College, and completed his legal studies under the direction of the celebrated Edmund Randolph. In 1809, he was admitted to the bar, and two years afterwards chosen to the legislature, as a member for his native county, by a very large vote, having just attained his twenty-first year. He continued a member till 1816, when he was chosen a member of the Privy Council of State. In the fall of 1816 he was chosen to represent Richmond County in the House of Representatives of the United States, of which he continued a member till 1821, when, in consequence of ill health, he declined a re-election. In 1823 he was again chosen a member of the Legislature of Virginia, and continued one till 1825, when he was chosen Governor of Virginia, and was unanimously re-elected in the ensuing year. In 1827, he was chosen a Senator in Congress, which office he held till 1833, during which time he was elected President pro tem. of the Senate, when, in consequence of his inability to reconcile certain instructions of the Legislature with his sense of constitutional obligation, he went into retirement, in which he remained until elected Vice President of the United States in 1840, with the exception of a service of one session in the Legislature, in 1838, from the County of James City.

On the 4th of April, 1841, he succeeded to the Presidency on the death of Gen. William H. Harrison. He had thus filled every political office in the gift of the people of Virginia, before his elevation to the highest office in the nation, yet it is a remarkable fact that he never sought any station, and that all his offices have been conferred by the direct action of the people. An examination of his political course shows him to have been always of the democratic school, and always firm in pursuing the dictates of reason and conscience. The following remarkable passage is from an Anti-bank speech delivered by him in the House of Representatives so far back as 1818:

"My own personal popularity can have no influence over me when the dictates of my best judgment and the obligations of an oath, require of me a particular course. Under such circumstances, whether I sink or swim on the tide of popular favor, is to me a matter of inferior consideration."

The pamphlet enters into an analysis of the President's principles and policy, and successfully vindicates him from the attacks of his opponents. It is worthy of a most extensive circulation."

The number of crimes committed in Russia is, in the proportion of them to the population, the smallest of any on the face of the earth; and so true is this, that during the whole of the reign of Alexander, there was not a single instance in which capital punishment was inflicted.

The celebrated traveller, Stephens, in his late researches in Yucatan, visited the ruins of forty four distinct cities, once the abodes of a race which has perished from the earth. These ruins are covered with dense forests, which our countryman has been the first civilized man to penetrate.

LADIES' FAIR. It gives us pleasure to speak of all efforts undertaken for such a praise-worthy purpose as the Fair contemplated to be holden next Tuesday, at the Vestry of Christ Church, in this place; and especially when the ever-spirited ladies who have taken an interest in this affair are endeavoring to render their exertions creditable to themselves, and every way worthy of the commendable object they have in view. Refreshments, suited to the occasion, will be provided; and our word for it, all, who attend, and we hope the public will generally make a call and manifest their liberality, will be highly pleased with the arrangements and gratified with their visit.

BOY DROWNED. George L., a son of Mr. Nathan Ames of this town, six years of age, was drowned on Tuesday last, in a pool of water about five feet deep. He was sent to school, but met another boy of about the same age as he was going, when they both strayed away, and got engaged in play on the brink of this body of water, caused by digging out muck to enrich the soil, when he accidentally slipped into it, and his companion being quite small was unable to rescue him. Assistance soon came, but the vital spark had fled.

BUNKER HILL MONUMENT. We have received a copy of a work entitled "Plans and Sections of the Obelisk on Bunker's Hill, with the details of Experiments made in Quarrying the Granite, by Solomon Willard, Architect and Superintendent of the Work," to which we shall hereafter more particularly allude, and endeavor to render justice to whom it rightfully belongs. True merit and persevering industry, though deprived for a time of its honor and reward, will receive its laurels when those who have unjustly worn them shall have been unmasked.

MASSACHUSETTS HISTORICAL SOCIETY. This venerable association will celebrate the second centennial anniversary of the confederation of the New England Colonies, on the 20th of May inst. at Boston, when a discourse will be delivered by the Hon. John Quincy Adams.

FOURTH OF JULY. The Common Council of Boston have adopted the report of a joint committee recommending that the fourth of July next be celebrated by a procession of the city authorities and citizens, and a public oration, and by music and fireworks on the Common in the evening. The sum of two thousand five hundred dollars has been appropriated for defraying the expense.

Charles F. Adams, Esq. has been selected by the municipal authorities to deliver the oration.

MILITARY. At a recent meeting of the field officers of the First Brigade, First Division, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, held in Boston, John S. Tyler, Esq. of that city, was unanimously elected Brigadier General of the First Brigade. Col George Tyler Bigelow of the Suffolk Regiment was elected, but declined promotion.

ESSEX CABINET. Rev. John Prince has started a paper in the village of Essex, in this State, called the "Essex Cabinet," which in reading matter and mechanical execution, promises to be a journal worthy the most liberal support. May fortune smile upon the enterprise of our reverend brother of the quill.

THE PRESIDENCY. Several of the individuals, who have been mentioned as candidates by the democratic party for the Presidency, have replied to the resolutions adopted in Indiana, in reference to this subject, stating that they were willing to leave the matter to a National Convention and abide by its selection. Ex-President Van Buren has frankly answered the questions propounded, and "defines his position" as to all the leading topics of the day. He states that he is opposed to a National Bank in any form, or under any disguise; and also to the Distribution of the Public Lands. He is also opposed to laying duties expressly for protection, although he does not object to incidental protection. He is satisfied with the Veto power as it exists, and will abide by the decision of a National Convention.

REMARKABLE. The death of a Mrs. Vose of Stoughton, is recorded in the papers, at the advanced age of ninety one years. She has had fourteen children, eleven of whom are now living; ninety grandchildren, seventy three of whom are now alive; and one hundred and two great grandchildren, eighty one of whom now live; and one of the fifth generation is now living in Stoughton.

BANKRUPTCY IN MASSACHUSETTS. The whole number of petitions filed in bankruptcy, in this State, is 3255. The whole number of bankrupts is about 2800. The whole amount paid into Court by assignees, already collected from the estates of bankrupts, is $472,738. 43. The amount already distributed among the creditors, $305,561.58. The largest dividend paid to any one creditor, is $10,000. The smallest, is one cent. The largest amount distributed, in any one case, is $202,400. The smallest is eleven cents. In the latter case, there were three creditors, whose aggregate debts amount to $488.80.

INTOXICATION. To what an awful extent must the rage for ardent spirits have prevailed at one time in England, when the Parliament was obliged to prohibit for twelve months the distillation of gin! Smollet informs us that there were at that time signs or show-boards to the tipping houses, with this tariff of prices: "drunk for a penny—dead drunk for two pence—straws for nothing."

ADAMS ENGINE. Through the polite invitation of the committee of this engine company, we joined with them in their annual visit to the sea shore the present week, and partook of the delicacies offered on the occasion. The afternoon was exceedingly propitious, and all apparently enjoyed the recreation. The recollection of such excursions are always treasured up in memory until their return, when we meet again to renew and to enjoy them.

WHIG CAUCUS. A meeting of the Whig citizens of this town will be held at the Town Hall, this evening, at seven o'clock, to choose Delegates to attend the State Convention at Worcester, 7th of June next.

SOUTHERN MINSTRELS. This entertainment last Wednesday evening was well attended, and all appeared highly gratified with the performances.

A most brutal assault was made upon a young woman in the streets of East Boston, on Monday night last, by one William G. Glover, a son of the worthy constable of that name. The villain struck her and otherwise injured her severely, but did not accomplish his hellish purpose, owing to the timely interference of some persons who were attracted by the young woman's cries. He has been arrested and bound over to answer to the charge.

The Earl of Witten, as he is called, recently received from the British Government, for conveying the Order of the Garter to the King of Saxony, nearly fifty thousand dollars! No wonder that so many human beings writhe and groan under the pangs of hunger and starvation in Great Britain!

The consumption of milk in Boston, annually, is set down at 2,000,000 gallons; and in London, with an annual population fifteen times larger, the estimated annual consumption is only 2,500,000 gallons. One man brings into Boston, over the Worcester Railroad, about 200,000 gallons yearly.

Five hundred ladies of Mobile have petitioned the authorities of that city to levy a separate and fixed tax upon all unmarried men there. There seems to be a fixed determination on their part to drive the bachelors there to commit either matrimony or suicide.

The Pennsylvania Senate adopted a resolution just before the late adjournment, with but one dissenting voice, recommending that the Governor of that State set apart by proclamation a day for Thanksgiving every year.

The Mormons are about building a new city three miles below Burlington, (Iowa,) on the Mississippi.

The democratic legislative convention, in Pennsylvania, has expressed itself in favor of Hon. James Buchanan, now a United States Senator from that State, as the candidate for the next Presidency. Their address calls for a harmonious action of the democracy, and recommends a national convention in May, 1844.

It is stated that only seven lives were lost in the Thames Tunnel, (Eng.) during the progress of that great work, and that nearly forty men were killed when the new London Bridge was built.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophulous, Syphilitic, Rheumatic, Gout, Obstructed Catarrhus, Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impurities in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee Nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in asserting the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said than the truth; for thus its virtues fully warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States, J. K. FERNANDS, Medical Physician, JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enacting upon me, the worst of all human diseases, which mortals are heir to. Consumption, I have vainly tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not experienced any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

W. MAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum. I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wymon Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to give a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint, which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, &c. I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident, that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT, Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernands' Arcanum: Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of slow fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernands' Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

DR. FERNANDS'

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophulous Eruptions, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Breasts, and Diseases arising from an impure and vitiated blood. The consumption is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who is a small child, without any aid or assistance, has cured many of the above diseases, and he is confident that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, and feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this medicine, and have given the highest testimonials in its favor. To prevent imposition, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.

JOSEPH J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enacting upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Abraham Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully avow that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health, as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have at from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times very distressing, great fatigues, with a cold headache, and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dizziness of sight, palpitation of the heart, &c.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

ABRAHAM BARTLETT.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

SONG.

Thou art a potent spell, thou spirit of love,
To the gay, to the artless and free;
Thou charrest the soul with a sense of joy,
And fillest the sad heart with glee;
Thou art no rover in lordly domes alone,
No sojourner in monarch's hall,
But aboon thou art, in the humblest cot,
And a celestial star to all.

Be the peasant in gloom, in visions of night;
The young warrior wearied with wars alarm,
That the clarion's sound rouse him not to the fight,
A gleam of thee will dispel the charm;
When clouds of sadness dim the mirthful heart
Of youth, in mountain, plain or dell,
At thy thrilling light, their benighted hope Smiles in the ray of thy bright spell!

For thou art ever beaming with radiance mild,
That gleams o'er the young and the fair;
And where thy ray creeps in friendship's arcades
A flame of joy it kindleth there;
Yet love, unrequited, droops low in despair,
Like a plant in a lady's bower,
For love withers the heart, as the bees stings the rose
When the sweets have gone from the flower.

And many a heart has felt that beat high with glee,
And basked in thy brightening beams;
For the staid pride of many could not bow to thee,
And thou fliest like morning dreams,
Thou fliest—but like the fabled snake of old,
That around man's heart had entwined—
With the peerless treasure of his secret mines, Leaving naught but thy sting behind.

GEORGIUS.

ON SLANDER.

'Tis wondrous strange, and yet 'tis true,
That some folks take delight
The deeds of other men to view,
As if their own were right.
And if a piece of news come out,
They'll eagerly pursue it;
Then hand the charming dish about,
And add a little to it.
Each fault they'll try to magnify;
Yet seeming to bemoan
The most within a brother's eye,
Are blinded to their own.

And if a brother chance to stray,
Or fortune on him frown,
Though humbled in the dust he lay,
The text is, "Keep him down."
They'll preach up penance, with a sigh,
To cure, or nothing can—Sufferers are good, I'll not deny,
But not when sent by man.

Each worthy deed is now forgot,
As if not worth retaining;
But O! let failings fill the pot,
And slander seek the draining.
Unto the dregs she draws it out,
Delighted with her labor,
Then bears the charming evil about,
To treat her thirsty neighbors.

'Neath friendship's mask she sometimes lurks,
And smiling fawns around you;
Concealed she more securely works,
And kisses but to wound you.
Detested pest of social joy,
Thou spoiler of life's pleasures;
Like Sampson's foxes wouldst destroy
What's more than all our treasures.

ANECDOTES.

A poor country hawker, being detected in the act of shooting a butcher bird, was taken before a justice. "So, fellow," cried the justice, "you think fit to shoot without a license, do you?" "Oh, no, your honor," cried the offender, "I have a license for hawking"; so saying, he handed him his pedlar's license, and the bird shot being proved a hawk, the man was discharged.

"Jonathan, where were you going when I saw you going to mill?"
"Why, I was going to mill to be sure."
"Well, I wish I'd seen you, I'd get you to carry a grist for me."
"Why did you see me, didn't you?"
"Yes, but not until you had got clean out of sight."

A spendthrift, who had nearly wasted all his patrimony, seeing an acquaintance in a coat not of the newest cut, told him he thought it had been his great-grandfather's coat. "So it was," said the gentleman, "and I have also my great-grandfather's land, which is more than you can say."

An elderly Quaker some years ago, conversing with a neighbor of rather a miserly character on the immortality of the soul, was met with the remark, "I do not know as I have a soul," and immediately replied, "I always thought thee had a very little soul, but I did not know but thee thought thee had a soul."

"Well, Joe, are you making money these days," said Bill the other day, to an active business man. "Oh, no," was the reply, "I tried hard to make money, until I sunk several thousand dollars, and now I am trying to make a living. If I do that honestly, I shall be satisfied."

"What can a man do?" asked a green one yesterday, when the sheriff is sent coming up to him with a writ in his hand.
"Apply the remedy," said another one, gruffly.
"Remedy? What kind of a remedy?"
"Healing remedy, you goose—run like the devil."

A forgetful man, carrying a load, by accident brushed against a doctor. The doctor was very angry, and was going to beat him with his fist. "Pray don't use your precious hand, good sir—kick me in welcome." The bystanders asked what he meant. Says the "wood-man," "if he kicks me with his foot, I shall recover; but if I once come under his hands, it is all over with me."

"Pa, what is the sheriff always saying he'll knock down horses for when he is selling them?"
"Oh, my son, that is merely for the purpose of creating a bustle in the congregation."
"Why, pa, I thought the water created bustles out of meal bran. Take Richard to bed."

Have you ever tried it?

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, May 25, 1843.

FRIEND GREEN—"Wars and rumors of war," "fun and frolic," "humbly," and "deaths and marriages," are "the order of the day," for the present, in the "Tri-Mountain" city. Such a quantity and variety of intelligence, as has been received, during the past week, in this "notional city," has not been surpassed since the knowledge of our "oldest inhabitant." Boston is animated with a motley group of strangers, who visit our city for various purposes—some to buy goods, some to sell, and others "to see what they can see." Business was never in a better condition than at present— all appear to be doing a safe and healthy trade, on the cash principle, which is fast gaining favor with those who were extensively interested in business founded, and founded on the Credit System. Goods are cheap, having been purchased by shrewd and experienced merchants; and money is plenty, hence the "healthy trade." We have had delightful weather here the past week, and our principal streets have been crowded with the fashion and beauty of New England. The common is a second Eden; and these fine afternoons, after the cares and business of the day have been cast into oblivion, there is "a something" which so inspires one, visiting the common, that he imagines every lovely female, who may be promading through the "green arcades," an Eve. It is, indeed, a most refreshing—may I say, delightful, to escape from the confinement of a counting house, and roam over that almost enchanting spot; but thrice more delightful is it, when it is graced with the presence of Boston's most beautiful daughters.

I have so much to communicate to you that I scarcely know which to select; however, "here goes for a venture," as a cune yankee has it. Young Glover, who was charged with the dreadful assault on Miss Austin, in East Boston, on the right of the 15th, was brought in for examination; but Miss Austin's physician testified that she would not be able to be brought to Court for several days; consequently, on motion of E. G. Austin, City Attorney, the defendant's bonds were raised from one thousand dollars to three thousand dollars; and for want thereof, the defendant was remanded to jail. It may be appropriate here to state that the defendant is not of a demonic appearance; some people are too apt to imagine a person, who has been accused of atrocious deeds, to "look the villain." His appearance is respectable, his bearing becoming, and his countenance prepossessing, beyond the average of young men. The examination will be continued Tuesday next.

Another young lady preferred a complaint against a young gentleman, for insulting her in the street. Many noticed the rash fellow following the girl, making love to her, by the way, and continually importuning her for the honor of her company. He escaped with a fine. These are every day occurrences. They look bad. "Coming events cast their shadows before them."

On Saturday evening last, Mr. James Stark, the young gentleman who spoke before the Quincy Lyceum, a short time since—when our respected self delivered the Lecture—gave an Elocutionary Olio at the Melodeon. He was assisted by Mrs. Crammer and Mr. W. H. Smith, of the Tremont Theatre, Mr. Murdock, Professor of Elocution, Mr. W. P. Johnson the Comedian, and Mr. J. B. Woodbury, Professor of Music. He had not a large, but a very intelligent and fashionable audience, and the entertainment, being of the highest order, gave universal satisfaction.

Mr. Murdock gave a Musical and Elocutionary Olio on Wednesday evening, assisted by the same talent, with the exception of Mrs. Crammer and Mr. Smith, whose vacancy was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Meader.

The "fat boy" has returned to the Museum, and Gen. Tom Thumb, Jr., who is represented as but twenty five inches high, and weighs only fifteen pounds, is daily expected.

Professor Mullin's Lecture on "Boz" was a great affair. On Wednesday evening, he delivered a Lecture on the Crusades, which is very highly spoken of.

A bold attempt was made to escape from the Massachusetts State Prison, in Charlestown, by one of the convicts, which for ingenuity puts Murdock Edwards completely in the shade. He concealed himself in the yard from Thursday morning till Friday night, when he concluded all search was over, and attempted to scale the wall; but the guard were on the look out, and before he could reach the top, he was secured. He has been in prison six years; and has five more to stay and "do the state some service."

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in East Cambridge, in a carpenter's shop situated on the Main street in Lechmere Point, a few buildings above the large Hotel, known for many years, as the "Lechmere Point House," which was burnt. It spread with great rapidity, destroying several buildings.

Sir Charles Bagot, late Governor General of Canada, is dead. He died at his residence, at Kingston, on Friday morning last, the 14th inst.

Peter Lorillard, Esq., one of the wealthiest citizens of the Empire State, and extensively known as a manufacturer of snuff, died at his residence, Winchester, (N. Y.) Tuesday, 22d, aged eighty year. And it is feared that the death of John Jacob Astor will soon have to be recorded.

The news by the royal steamer, Caledonia, which arrived at this port Friday morning, is of no great importance. She brings out a very little news from the continent. Business continues dull.

The Queen was doing well. The infant princess is a remarkably fine child, not so delicately formed as her sister, the princess royal, and in features more resembling the Prince of Wales. She has large light blue eyes, and hair which promises to be flaxen.

We learn by papers received by the Steamer, that the Governor of the Marquesas Islands and suit were massacred by the natives. It appears that the French governor of the Marquesas, with fourteen attendants, had been on a visit to the native king, Nibehera, where they had been hospitably entertained, and, suspecting no danger, they left his residence to return to the French station, without, probably taking proper precaution against the treachery of the natives. They were attacked on the way, and the governor and fourteen persons were killed. This unfortunate event proves the unfriendly disposition of the natives; but what will it avail them? The French government will instantly send out a sufficient force to crush all opposition.

Daniel Webster has not yet arrived in Boston. He will stay in New York the remainder of the week.

Great preparations are being made for the celebration of the Battle of Bunker Hill, and completion of the monument. Maj. General Appleton Howe will command the military on that occasion. I must close, in order to despatch this which I have already hastily written, by mail.

Respectfully, yours,
GEORGE H. FRENCH.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

THE MINISTERIAL TOMB.

We understand that the remains of Mrs. Jane Whitney, were removed, on Friday of last week, from the tomb where, at first they were deposited, and placed in the old ministerial tomb, with those of her husband, the late Rev. Peter Whitney. This tomb, originally in the possession of Rev. Mr. Fiske, the third Pastor of the First Congregational Society in this town, has been recently rebuilt by the ladies of Quincy, and now presents a very beautiful appearance. The mausoleum is of an oblong shape, having a granite base and ends, with marble slabs on the sides, and the whole surmounted by the old original top of red free stone, projecting over. On this is a long inscription, which has been recently re-engraved, to the memory of Rev. Mr. Fiske. He died August 10th, 1708, in the sixty-sixth year of his age, and the 34th of his ministry. The upper stone bears also this inscription: Mrs. Ann Marsh, died May 27th, 1773, aged ninety four. She was the sixth daughter of Rev. Mr. Fiske, and wife of his successor, Rev. Joseph Marsh.

On one of the marble slabs are inscribed the names of Rev. Joseph Marsh, Rev. John Hancock, and Rev. Anthony Wibird, the fourth, fifth, and seventh ministers of the First Congregational church, whose remains lie beneath, together with the dates of their ordination, birth, death, &c. The remains of Rev. Mr. Whitney, the eighth minister, were laid with those of his predecessors, and now those of his wife are gathered to the same resting place. Mrs. Whitney died Nov. 11th, 1832, aged fifty seven years.

Too much praise can hardly be bestowed upon the ladies for the commendable spirit in which, with such excellent taste, they have caused this ancient tomb of the Prophets to be rebuilt. Their original design, which they are now carrying out, is to beautify this whole place of the dead; and we earnestly hope that they may be prospered in their noble enterprise, and thus make the Cemetery, what it should be, an inviting spot for meditation and for communion with the departed.

PROSPECTS OF BUSINESS.

The papers in the different parts of the country, are beginning to assume a more cheerful tone, and speak encouragingly of the business prospects of the future. There can be but little doubt that we have got to the bottom of the wheel, and which ever way it revolves, must look upward. The darkness of a long and dismal night is now yielding its gloomy dominion to the first rays of a rising sun. The indications of this auspicious event can no longer be mistaken. Confidence between man and man is returning to bless society with its cheering influence. Six per cent. Government stocks that went for months a begging in the streets, are now thirteen per cent. above par. The Bonds of every State, untainted with the grand larceny of repudiation, have experienced a like advance. Our commerce with other nations is on the increase, and instead of showing a balance against us, it exhibits the gratifying fact that our exports exceed our imports, and many millions of specie are coming in from abroad, to remain and form the substantial basis of a circulating medium adequate to the growing wants of the country. As a nation, long and severely have we been chastised for our wickedness, our folly, and our extravagance; and fortunate shall we be, if we remember and profit as we ought by the lessons so eloquently taught by sad and painful experience.

The aspect of business for four or five years past has indeed been gloomy, nevertheless worse times have been witnessed. The Philadelphia Chronicle says it is an historical fact that in the year 1799, there were ten thousand able bodied men in New York daily seeking employment, or, adding the women, twenty thousand persons who desired something to do. In Philadelphia, twenty thousand persons were in the like condition, and in Baltimore, ten thousand were in unsteady employment. Let it be remembered too, that the cities were not at that time half as populous as they are now, so that for the present distress to equal the past, it must yet increase considerably. Neither is the fall of prices now near as great as it was then, nor has the value of real estate depreciated to any thing like the same extent.

SECOND CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT. At the recent democratic convention in this District, Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr., of Beverly, was unanimously nominated as a candidate for Congress, but in a speech to the members declined the honor thus conferred, when Jeremiah C. Stickney, Esq., of Lynn, was selected as the candidate. A resolve was passed, inviting the whig candidate to meet their nominee, for the purpose of discussing political questions and principles, before the assembled people, at such times and places, as may best meet their convenience, previously to the next election.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

The most extensive conflagration which ever occurred in this town, although not in the amount of property destroyed, took place on Wednesday last, at about eleven o'clock in the forenoon. It originated in the "Faxon House," so called, on Hancock street, doubtless by sparks from a chimney on a portion that was somewhat lower than the main building, and which lodged upon that part and thus communicated the fire. This dwelling-house, occupied in part by the widow of Benjamin Faxon, deceased, and several Irish families, was very soon reduced to ashes.

Some of the burning embers were carried by the wind, while the fire was at its height, and lodged in the yard of Henry G. Pratt, in which was situated his carpenter's shop, and set fire to the shavings around it. In a few minutes, his shop and dwelling-house was on fire and burnt to the ground. The fire from these buildings communicated to the house of Captain Peter Brackett, which was also destroyed. In the meantime, the new stable of Clift Rodgers, nearly opposite the original fire, notwithstanding the great efforts made to save it, fell a prey to the devouring element.

The occupants of these several dwellings had but little time to save a few articles of furniture and clothing, so furiously did the flames spread.

The amount of property destroyed, will not vary much from three thousand dollars, and there was an insurance of five hundred and fifty dollars on Pratt's house and shop, and one hundred and seventy five dollars on the "Faxon house." This was all the insurance.

Several dwelling-houses in the vicinity, and which were momentarily expected to be on fire, were divested of every moveable article by the energy and exertions of the citizens, and in particular by the ladies who deserve great praise for their zeal and activity. Fears were entertained for a time that the new Episcopal Parsonage House would be destroyed, for which the ladies were holding a Fair in the neighborhood to furnish the same. George Newcomb, Esq., who was engaged in removing articles from the fire, was knocked down by a horse attached to a loaded wagon which was driven furiously through the street, and one of the wheels passed over his foot, causing a severe injury. Engines were present from Braintree, Weymouth and Dorchester. Though they did not arrive in time to render essential service, yet their good intentions are appreciated by the public.

LADIES' FAIR. On account of the late fire, this fair has been adjourned to a week from Tuesday ensuing, (June 6th,) when we trust the public will attend, and by their generosity not only enable the ladies to consummate their praiseworthy intentions, but have the satisfaction of aiding a worthy object.

BENEFIT HILL CELEBRATION. The President of the United States, Hon. John C. Spencer, Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. Charles A. Wickliffe, Post Master General, and Hon. J. M. Porter, have signified their acceptance of the invitation to attend the celebration on the 17th of June. CYRUS GOSS.

DR. FERNANDS' Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impotence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in asserting the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, on his own hand writing, and sealed by his only authorized agent for the New-England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New-England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine: Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fastening upon me the most of all human diseases, which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 23, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark: Sir—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum. I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health, as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 23, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernands' Arcanum: Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Sore Throat from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernands' Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

MARRIED LIFE.

"The treasures of the deep are not so precious as are the concealed comforts of man. Look'd up in woman's love. I scent the air Of blessings, when I come but near the house. What a delicious breath marriage sends forth! The violet bed's not sweeter."

I have often had occasion to remark the fortitude with which woman sustains the most overwhelming reverses of fortune. Those disasters which break down the spirit of a man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the softer sex, and give such intrepid elevation to their character, that at times it approaches almost to sublimity. Nothing can be more touching than to behold a soft and tender female, who had been all weakness and dependance, and alive to every trial of roughness, while treading the prosperous paths of life, suddenly rising in mental force, to be the comforter of her husband under misfortune, and abiding with unshrinking firmness, the bitterest of adversity.

I was once congratulating a friend who had around him a blooming family, knit together in the strongest affection. "I can wish you no better lot," said he, with enthusiasm, "than to have a wife and children." If you are prosperous, they are there to share your prosperity; if otherwise, they are there to comfort you. And, indeed, I have often observed that a married man, falling into misfortune, is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one; partly because he is more stimulated to exertion by the necessities of the helpless and beloved beings who depend upon him for subsistence, but chiefly because his spirits are soothed and relieved by domestic endearments. These observations call to mind a little domestic story, of which I was once a witness. My intimate friend, Leslie, had married a beautiful and accomplished girl, who had been brought up in the midst of fashionable life. She had, it is true, no fortune, but that of my friend was ample; and he delighted in the anticipation of indulging her in every elegant pursuit; and administering to those delicate tastes and fancies that spread a kind of witchery about the sex. "Her life," said he, "shall be like a fairy tale."

The very difference in their characters produced a harmonious combination. He was of a romantic and somewhat serious cast—she was all life and gladness. I have often noticed the mute rapture with which he would gaze upon her in company, of which her sprightly powers made her the delight; and how, in the midst of applause, her eye would still turn to him, as if there alone she sought favor and acceptance.

It was the mishap of my friend, however, to have embarked his fortune in a large speculation; and he had not been married many months, when, by a succession of sudden disasters, it was swept from him, and he was reduced to almost penury. For a time he kept his situation to himself, and went about with a haggard countenance and a breaking heart. His life was but a protracted agony, and what rendered it more insupportable, was the necessity of keeping up a smile in the presence of his wife, for he could not bring himself to overwhelm her with the news. She saw, however, with the quick eye of affection, that all was not well with him. She marked his altered looks and stifled sighs, and was not to be deceived by his sickly and rapid attempts at cheerfulness. She tasked all her sprightly powers and tender blandishments to bring him back to happiness, but she only drove the arrow deeper into his soul.

At length he came to me one day and related his whole situation in a tone of the deepest despair. When I had heard him through, I inquired, "Does your wife know all this?" At the question he burst into an agony of tears. "For God's sake!" cried he, "if you have any pity on me, don't mention my wife; it is the thought of her that drives me almost to madness!"

"And why not?" said I. "She must know it sooner or later. You cannot keep it long from her, and the intelligence may break upon her in a more startling manner than if imparted by yourself. She will soon perceive that something is secretly preying upon your mind, and true love will not brook reserve; it feels undervalued and outraged, when even the sorrows of those it loves are concealed from it."

"O, my friend, but to think what a blow I am to give all her future prospects—how am I to strike her very soul to the earth, by telling her that her husband is a beggar; that she is to forego all the elegancies of life—all the pleasures of her society—to sink with me into indigence and obscurity?"

I saw grief was eloquent, and I let it have its flow, for sorrow relieves itself by words. When his paroxysm had subsided, and he relapsed again into moody silence, I resumed the subject gently, and I urged him to break his situation at once to his wife. He shook his head mournfully but positively.

"But how are you to keep it from her. It is necessary to the alteration of living—nay," observing a pang to pass across his countenance, "don't let that afflict you. I am sure you have never placed your happiness in outward show—you have yet friends, who will not think the worse of you for being less splendidly lodged; and surely it does not require a palace to be happy with Mary."

"I could be happy with her," cried he convulsively, "in a hovel! I could go down with her into poverty and the dust—I could—I could—God bless her! God bless!" cried he, bursting into a transport of grief and tenderness.

"And believe me, my friend," said I stepping up and grasping him warmly by the hand, "believe me, she can be the same with you. Aye, more; it will be a source of pride and triumph to her; it will call forth all the latent energies and fervent sympathies of her nature; for she will rejoice to prove that she loves you for yourself. There is in every true woman's heart a spark of heavenly fire, which lies dormant in the broad daylight of prosperity, but which kindles up and seems a blaze in the dark hour of adversity. No man knows what the wife of his bosom is; no man knows what a ministering angel she is, until he has gone through the fiery trials of this world."

There was something in the earnestness of my language, that caught the excited imagination of Leslie. I knew the auditor I had to deal with; and following up the impression I had made, I finished up by persuading him to go home and unburden his sad heart to his wife. I must confess, notwithstanding all I had said, I felt a little solicitude for the result. I could not meet Leslie the next morning without trepidation. He had made the disclosure.

"And how did she bear it?"
"Like an angel. It seemed rather to be a relief to her mind; for she threw her arms around my neck, and asked me if that was all that had made me unhappy. But poor girl," added he, "she cannot realize the change we must undergo. She has no idea of poverty but in the abstract; she has only read of it in poetry, where it is allied to love. She feels as if no privation—she suffers no loss of accustomed conveniences nor elegancies. When we come particularly to experience its sordid cares, its paltry wants, its petty humiliations, then will be the trial!"

"But," said I, "now that you have got over the severest task, that of breaking it to her, the sooner you let the world into the secret the better. Have the courage to appear poor, and you disarm poverty of its sharpest sting." On this point I found Leslie perfectly prepared. He had no false pride himself, and as to his wife she was only anxious to conform to their altered fortunes.

Some days afterwards he called upon me in the evening. He had disposed of his dwelling house and taken a small cottage in the country, a few miles from town. He had busied himself all day in sending out furniture. The new establishment required but a few articles of the simplest kind. All the splendid furniture had been sold, except his wife's piano. That, he said, was too closely associated with himself—it belonged to the little story of their loves—for some of the sweetest moments of their courtship were those when he had leaned over that instrument and listened to the melting tones of her voice. I could not but smile at this instance of romantic gallantry in a doating husband.

He was now going to the cottage, where his wife had been all day superintending its arrangement. My feelings had been strongly interested in the progress of this family story, and as it was a fine evening I offered to accompany him home.

He was wearied with the fatigues of the day and as he walked out, fell into a fit of gloomy musing.
"Poor Mary!" at length broke with a heavy sigh from his lips.

"And what of her?" asked I, "has she repined at the exchange?"
"Repined! she has been nothing but sweetness and good humor! Indeed, she seems in better spirits than I have ever seen her; she has been to me all love, and tenderness, and comfort."

"Admirable girl!" exclaimed I. "You call yourself poor, my friend; you never were rich

—you never knew the boundless treasures of excellence you possessed in that woman."

"Oh, but my friend, if this first meeting at the cottage were over, I think I could be comfortable. But this is her first day of real experience. She has been introduced into a humble dwelling; she has been employed all day in arranging its miserable equipments—she has for the first time known the fatigues of domestic employment—she has for the first time looked around her on a home destitute of every thing elegant—almost of every thing convenient, and may now be sitting down exhausted and spiritless, brooding over a prospect of future poverty."

There was a probability in this picture that I could not gainsay; so we walked on in silence.

After turning from the main road up a narrow lane so thickly shaded by forest trees as to give it a complete air of seclusion, we came in sight of the cottage. It was humble enough in its appearance for the most pastoral poet; and yet it had a pleasing rural look. A wild vine overran one end with a profusion of foliage; and a few trees threw their branches gracefully over it, and I observed several pots of flowers tastefully disposed about the door, on the grass plat in front.

A small wicket gate opened upon a foot path that wound through some shrubbery at the door. Just as we approached we heard the sound of music. Leslie grasped my arm. We paused and listened. It was Mary's voice singing, in the style of most touching simplicity, a little air of which her husband was peculiarly fond.

I felt Leslie's hand tremble on my arm. He stepped forward to hear more distinctly. His steps made a noise on the gravelled walk. A bright, beautiful face glanced out of the window and vanished; a light footstep was heard, and Mary came tripping forth to meet us; she was in a pretty rural dress of white. A few wild flowers were twisted in her fine hair. A fresh bloom was on her cheek. Her whole countenance beamed with smiles. I had never seen her look so lovely.

"My dear George," cried she, "I am so glad you are come! I have been watching and watching for you, and running down the lane and looking out for you. I have set out a table under a tree behind the cottage, and I have been gathering some of the most delicious strawberries, for I know you are fond of them, and we have such excellent cream—and every thing is so sweet and still there. Oh!" said she, putting her arm within his, and looking up brightly in his face, "Oh! we shall be so happy."

Poor Leslie was overcome. He caught her to his bosom—he folded his arms around her—he kissed her again and again—he could not speak, but the tears gushed into his eyes. He has often assured me that though the world has since gone prosperously with him, and his life has indeed been a happy one, yet never has he experienced a moment of such unutterable felicity.

CAST OUT THE BALLAST.

I saw a balloon slowly rise as they cut the last cord. It made a splendid appearance, as it passed into the air, above the tops of the trees and houses. But it soon began to descend, and there was the greatest danger that the voyager would be dashed in pieces by the striking of the car against various objects in its way. While gazing in much anxiety upon the scene, I saw one white object after another, thrown from the car to the earth. They were bags of sand. The balloon thus relieved, by casting out the ballast, responded to this new movement, and speedily rising, floated majestically away.

I saw a rich disciple. When he came into the kingdom, all appeared well. The balloon seemed well prepared for a prosperous voyage. It rose, but did not rise high; and sailed, but kept dangerously near the ground. It seemed unable to rise. Men sneered about a disciple that promised at first so well, but who gave them not the instructive spectacle of one sailing on toward heaven, free from the clogs and incumbrances of earth. But one form and another of the Spirit's teaching led him to see where the evil lay. His wealth made too much ballast. It dragged down a heaven born spirit from his home. He saw and felt it, and applied the remedy. He opened wide the hand of charity, and he caused silver and gold to be transmuted into the prayers and grateful praises of relieved multitudes, and into the thanksgivings of pagans, receiving at his hand the bread of life. The castout ballast relieved the ailing ship. She pitches and drags no longer, in dangerous proximity to the earth—she sails well, and is making a noble voyage.

There is a poor man. He, too, is a follower of the Lamb; but he has caught the sad temper of looking enviously around him. He sees others in better worldly circumstances than himself. He wonders why he should be condemned to the paths of poverty. He is discontented. He is covetous of what Providence has denied him. This drags him down. He is neither the happy nor the useful man he might be. He is the overloaded balloon. He must cast out the ballast. If he would pitch his pride overboard, and send his envy and discontent after it, he would rise and soar away into regions of spiritual joy he never visited, and present to the beholder a more lovely spectacle than he has ever yet done.

Here is a low spirited disciple. Some dark cloud or other, is continually sailing over his horizon; you cannot catch him in a sunny, pleasant mood. He is forever drooping. People have seen him so long with a visage which was a map of the frozen zone, that if he were to be overtaken with a smile, it would be ominous and create general alarm. He is a balloon, that creeps along over morasses and bogs, instead of soaring up as it ought, into the sky. His ballast is the trouble, and he has too much. He had better cast it out. He nourishes the habit of looking on the dark side of things. He had better lighten the ship of that article. If he would tumble his Jonah into the sea, he would be in a fair way of having fine weather for the rest of his voyage.

This casting out the ballast, has done wonders in regard to Christian character. Matthew did this when, as Christ called, he rose up, left all and followed him. And Peter cast out his, about the time he went out and wept bitterly. And Paul his, by "counting all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus his Lord." And every disciple has done the same ever since those days, who has "forsaken father, mother, house and lands, and counted not his life dear to him for Christ's sake." Earthly incumbrances being thrown off, Christian character has risen. The soul, no longer clogged, has lifted up itself and sailed joyously on its Christian course.

What scenes we might now witness, were we to see Christians on all sides, casting out the ballast. What an increase of faith! What hatred of sin! What love and zeal for the glory of God! What a heavenly mind, as the rising soul ascended heavenward! What a happy deliverance from the mist and darkness that now dims the eye of faith, and fills the soul with gloom! What clear and delightful walking with God! What triumph of faith and love!

ALWAYS TOO LATE.

I had an appointment one morning with a Mr. Benj Hind, who always signs his letters "B. Hind," and certainly a more appropriate signature was never known. I waited from twelve o'clock, the hour mentioned, until near two, before he came. I gently hinted to Mr. B. Hind, how much he was behind his time.

"My dear sir," said he, "you may think it very strange, but I had the misfortune to be born half an hour too late, and though I've been in a bustle ever since, I have never, with all my industry, been able to bring up the lost time."

"Indeed! how so?"
"Why listen, and I'll convince you that in my appointment with you, I have only been keeping up the part allotted me by fate, before I was born."

"My grandfather had two daughters who were both married on the same day. He had made his will, and read it to them. By it he bequeathed the whole of his property, twenty thousand dollars, to that daughter who was first blessed with a son. With such a sum in perspective, who would not wish for a child? And my mother no sooner found that such a result was probable, than my delighted father engaged the doctor and nurse, and baby linen was immediately prepared: there was however, one drawback to his joy—my mother's sister had similar expectations."

"The momentous hour at length arrived, 'big with the fate of' twenty thousand dollars. At eight o'clock in the morning I came into 'this breathing world,' but my fortunate rival at half past seven—and thus I was too late, because he was before me."

"My parents disappointed in their expectations of wealth, cared little about me, and I was suffered to run wild till eleven years of age, when they sent me to school. The young urchins laughed to see a great boy, or booby, as they called me, spelling his a-b-a-b, and so teased me during the few months I stayed, that a dunce I remained—a sad proof that I had gone to school too late."

"At length my father procured me a birth on board an Indianan. I was rigged out—my stores sent to the vessel—I parted with my parents without regret, for they loved me too late—passed two days in London—left in the evening—travelled all night to Portsmouth, and to my consternation found the ship had sailed the day before—of course I was too late."

"My father thought the best plan to settle me would be by matrimony, and I was introduced to a young lady who possessed beauty and money, but she had another suitor. However, her father and mine agreed upon the wedding day—the ring was bought and every thing arranged. To keep the matter private, I was to meet her at the church. Unluckily, I overslept myself by the fatal half hour—I arrived at the church doors just in time to see my intended bride walking out as the wife of my rival! I was too late, and remained B. Hind solus."

"In short, I was born too late, educated too late—I can't say I was settled too late, because I have never been settled at all—I can't keep a lodging, for my landlords say I come home too late—then I am unfit for business, because I get up too late—if I go to the play I'm too late—whether I have to buy or sell, I'm always too late—and I verily believe, that if I was going to be hanged, I should come to the scaffold half an hour too late. I am called the late Mr. B. Hind, and true to the cognomen, I am always behind."

BACK-BITERS AND SLANDERERS.

Slander is petty murder; and that man who wantonly assails the good name of his neighbor, lacks only the opportunity and the disposition to spill his heart's warm blood. How revolting is it, that a living man, soon to die and stand before Christ's judgment seat, should, with mock solemnity, whisper in another's ear tales concerning a third person, which he knows or has reason to suspect to be false. Wretched mortal! If Satan's image is specially to be found on earth, where should we find it but in such an one! The rattlesnake were as trusty a bosom friend as he!

He dares not put his hand in his neighbor's pocket, because the bolts, and bars, and chains of a prison would reward his presumption; but he secretly sets in motion a report, which like the rolling ball of snow, small in its progress, until it is sufficient to overwhelm the guiltless sufferer upon whom it is directed.

Innocence is no protection—virtue is no safeguard. The injured man unconscious of the gathering shade which threatens to bedim the brightness of his heart's best jewel, meets a friend with lightsome spirit; but ah! the wanted friendly pressure replies not to his hearty grasp. No word is needed to tell him there is something wrong—the spirit needs not audible words—she has a keenness of apprehension which is not always dependent on sound phrases; a silent language is hers. Distress and anxiety come upon him; but his endeavors to discover wherein he has offended are only so many convincing proofs of his guilt. 'And is it true?' one of his acquaintances inquires of another who is equally a stranger to the truth of the report. 'They say so,' is the reply; and thus their belief in its verity is mutually strengthened; and they separate to scatter with new zeal the seeds of defamation.

Poor slandered victim! God help him! Ruined, not by himself, blasted by a foreign wind; degraded not by his own vices; his name cast out as an evil unadvisedly; is he not to be pitied? Can the slanderer find a balm of healing virtue sufficient to cure and mend the heart he has rent and wounded! The heart, bound by the Good Physician shall find peace and rest in a land where no slanderer can approach to defile it!

Can he be a child of God who delights in whispering about the faults of his brother! Is a sanctimonious back-biter fit company for saints and angels in heaven! Could he prosecute his employment there, how long before heaven would be filled with wrangling? Would any heaven be left?

Is not the propagator equally guilty with the originator of the slander! Is it said, that he does not know it to be true. And where is the necessity for circulating a dubious aspersion? Does he wish to degrade a fellow worm? Wherefore? The poor brother has already his share of sorrow and sins. Why crush him with a burden not his own?

But suppose the charge mainly true. Who authorized the slanderer to sit in judgment on his fellows? Has he not private sins which he would shrink from laying bare to the public eye? Let him look within, his heart has a dark catalogue, hidden indeed, but of deep enough a dye to cover with shame. Perhaps he has never felt this; he has never learned "the plague of his own heart." May God enlighten his eyes. It may be that his offences are tenfold greater than those of other victims whom he holds up to the scorn of the world.

I, myself, know that I am an unworthy sinner; but still I pray. The Lord defend me from the tooth of a back-biter and the fang of the slanderer.

THE VOICE WITHIN.

How pleasant the reflection, how cheering the thought, that beyond this mortal state there is a house for the weary, a rest for the heavy laden, a haven of repose, of quiet, of peace, a mansion from whence temptation, and trial, and affliction are forever banished, where every crushed hope shall be raised, every blighted affection renewed, and every murmuring thought be hushed, every unhalloved soul be purified, and every bleeding heart receive for mourning the oil of joy, and for the spirit of heaviness the garment of praise.

There are moments when the sorrows of earth, the deceitfulness of sin, and the frailty of humanity, press so heavily on the weary spirit, that it longs for angels' wings that it may fly away and be at rest. There are times when life would become a burden, and existence a curse, were it not for the promise that mortality shall be swallowed up of life, and the mysterious whisperings of the soul, "the deity which stirs within us," that we shall live, and love, and adore, when the stream of life shall have been swallowed up in the ocean of eternity. Nature with all its life, its loveliness, its charms, and its never varying laws, would never teach us that there is life to come. Nature may aid our meditations, strengthen our convictions, and lead us to hope, but she can never answer the question, "if man die shall he live again?" "Dust to dust" is indelibly stamped on frail mortality. From this chilling sentence there is no release, and every child of earth must bow to the unyielding mandate.

But there comes up from the deep fountains of the soul a voice which speaks in thrilling tones, "I am immortal—I shall be redeemed from sin, from sorrow, from suffering, and rest my wearied spirit in the paradise of God." That voice shall guide through the valley of the shadow of death; its echoes shall cheer in darkness and gloom; its sweet and tender tones shall speak peace to the troubled heart, and give healing to the wounded spirit. This voice has supported the weak, sustained the faithless, brought life from the dead. It is this which should teach us to bear "the ills which flesh is heir to," with patience and submission, to be resigned to crosses and afflictions, and to yield ourselves servants to him whom it is our duty to obey—rejoicing in the hope so abundantly confirmed by the power of the resurrection, that we shall change this earthly abode, this scene of mourning, for a house not made with hands, in that better land where "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

For the Quincy Patriot.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, June 1, 1843.
FRIEND GREEN—This has been an interesting week, thus far, to Bostonians; it being "conference week," and yesterday being the day for the grand May parade of the military. "Bung dum dardy" has been heard in every quarter of our city; the shrill fife and animating drum have roused many a drooping spirit, and stimulated many a dilatory limb to quicker action. Leaders have adjusted their "shocking" hats, and neatly arranged their "old sedgy coats"; and rowdies have put an extra kick in their hair, placed a broader knot in their neckerchief, and "shook a double reef" out of their broad bottom pants; and little urchins and "wanton school boys" have bedaubed themselves with that "staple article" on such days—candy—apparently for the occasion; and every thing accordingly appears to have done its utmost to welcome back and commemorate the "good old nigger" election. Every company belonging to our city turned out; and never did they make a more magnificent and imposing appearance. The ranks of each company were full, and every soldier well drilled. Each company was on its "own hook," yesterday; but place them in the "line" and they will surpass any regiment in regard to discipline, neatness and elegance of uniform and soldierlike deportment, in the State, perhaps the Union. Massachusetts should be, as I doubt not she really is, proud of such an able regiment of citizen soldiers, and she ought to support and cherish them, as her intelligent and worthy citizens in peace, and talented and brave soldiers in war.

The Reverend Gentlemen have turned out en masse, and put the shoulder to the wheel with much energy; they have commenced the work in good earnest, with the determination that more shall be done this year for enlightening the benighted minds of the people in the Valley of the Mississippi, than in any other previous year. They begin to open their eyes in regard to this subject. They find that unless the Protestants use all their exertions and every means in their power to educate and instruct the present and rising generation in the far west, the Catholics, who are pouring in by "thousands and tens of thousands" will do it for them; thereby deprive them (the Protestants) of many a numerous flock, the people of intelligence, and cursing the nation with a multitude of citizens unworthy of enjoying the liberties and privileges which our fathers so dearly bought. The Report of the Massachusetts Missionary Society refers to the extraordinary efforts making by the Roman Catholics, for the diffusion of their faith in this country, and states that the society for the propagation of the Catholic faith have expended during the year, on the Home Mission field, forty-five thousand dollars more than the American Home Mission Society. While the latter were affording ninety-two thousand dollars, the Roman Catholic Association were disbursing upon the same field one hundred and seventy eight thousand, one hundred and seventy dollars.

The Massachusetts Temperance Union held its annual meeting in the Marlboro' Chapel, on Tuesday evening; the Rev. G. B. Perry, President of the Union, in the chair. The meeting was eloquently addressed by a number of reverend gentlemen, and Col. Lemmonski, a brave old soldier, who has seen twenty-three years service in the armies of Napoleon, and was at one time Aid to Marshall Ney. He now wages a spiritual warfare under the banner of the cross, as a Lutheran missionary in the State of Illinois. The veteran is seventy years old; he has fought two hundred battles; had fourteen wounds on his body, and lived thirty days on horse flesh, with the bark of trees for his bread, snow and ice for his drink, and the canopy of heaven for his covering. He has marched in the deserts of Egypt, in scorching sands, and with a thirst so great, that he has torn his veins to suck his blood! He says that he owes his preservation through these terrible scenes, and his present health and vigor to the fact that he never drank a drop of spirituous liquor in his life!

The Unitarians of this City gave an elegant collation on Tuesday, to the clergymen of their denomination, who are now assembled here, in the great hall over the Western Railroad Depot. The hall was handsomely decorated with flowers and evergreens, for the occasion; and at three o'clock nearly one thousand ladies and gentlemen sat down to the well furnished tables. After the repast, many brief and appropriate addresses were made by a goodly number of eloquent clergymen; and three original odes written for the occasion (one by Rev. Mr. Pierpont) were sung. The company were highly delighted, and separated at an early hour. But it would require much time and too much space, I fear, for your paper, to give you even the "briefs" of the movements of one half of the Societies now convened in Boston, therefore I must make the above suffice for the present.

On Tuesday, the case of W. G. Glover was again brought up. Miss Austin—who is a young lady of exemplary character, high moral and religious feeling, and of great personal attraction—was led in, or rather, brought into court, she being still so feeble as to require support of her father and physician. She identified Glover as the person who committed the assault upon her. Mr. Austin, City Attorney, conceived that her testimony was sufficiently conclusive for the purpose of holding the prisoner to answer at the Municipal Court; and, in default of bail in three thousand dollars, the prisoner was again remanded to jail.

Intelligence was received by Tuesday's mail of the death of Noah Webster, compiler of the new and complete "Dictionary of the English Language." He died at New Haven, at eight o'clock Sunday evening last, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. The New York Commercial briefly remarks that the patriot, whose pen has been employed in the cause of sound politics and sound morals for full sixty years—the scholar, who has done more for the advancement of letters, and the cause of elementary instruction, than any other man of his age, and the exemplary citizen, whose life has afforded a beautiful illustration of the religion he professed—now sleeps with the dead.

From the Herald, which contains a lengthy biographical sketch, we extract the following:

"Dr. Webster was born in West Hartford, Connecticut, Oct. 16th, 1758. He was a descendant of John Webster, one of the first settlers of Hartford, who was a member of the colonial council from its first formation, and subsequently Governor of Connecticut.

Noah Webster entered Yale College in 1774. In his junior year, in the time of Burgoyne's expedition from Canada, he volunteered his services under the command of his father, who was captain in the army. In that campaign all the rules of the family four in number, were in the army at the same time. Notwithstanding this interruption to his studies, Mr. Webster graduated with high reputation in 1778.

A postscript received at the Bulletin office contains the following in regard to John Jacob Astor, the wealthiest citizen in New York:

"From the last information we could obtain, the agent of Mr. Astor arrived at the City Hall, and reported that he died this morning at five o'clock. He is known to have been ill for some weeks past, and his friends will not be surprised therefore to hear of his death."

The Hon. Daniel Webster arrived here yesterday, but where "he is to go" is not ascertained. We presume he will go to Faneuil Hall for a dinner—to Bunker Hill to deliver an oration; but "where am I to go?" then, he may ask; to New Hampshire, we answer, birding and ruralizing—thence to Marshfield "to go a fishing." After he gets there, he must take care of himself, for he cannot expect that "I always can be with him," as the old lady said to her son.

Business continues "good" and fair prospects of its continuing so for a short time at least.

Respectfully, yours, GEORGIUS.

For the Quincy Patriot.

John A. Green, Editor.

EX-PRESIDENT ADAMS' ADDRESS. We extract, in part, from the Boston Times the sentiments of the editor of that paper in a notice which he gave of the address that Mr. Adams delivered before the Massachusetts Historical Society, in Boston, on Monday last. The address is pronounced one of the most powerful efforts of its distinguished author, presenting interesting matter for the student, philosopher, and general reader. The views contained in it are eminently original, and characterized by deep, extensive, philosophical research; and they are put forth with uncommon power of argument, evincing the keenest penetration, and embellished with historical allusions.

The principal topics of the address were in brief—a preliminary history of the Confederation; Declaration of Independence; settlement of the country; variety of people and nations; New England; primary causes of settlement; Indian title to land; the whites; philosophic views; treatment of Indians; Confederation formed; Catholics; charter governments; Roger Williams—his wife—church—banishment; Preamble of Articles of Confederation; United States Union; the Union and Confederacy; Loss of the New England distinctive character; our Country's Destiny, etc.

BAY STATE DEMOCRAT. This ably edited daily journal has been enlarged by the addition of four columns, which makes it the largest daily evening paper now published in Boston. We are rejoiced at the success which this improvement clearly indicates has attended friend Wright's labors.

LARGE FIRE IN TAUNTON. A very destructive conflagration befel Taunton on Wednesday evening last. Ten or more buildings were either burnt or pulled down to stay the progress of the fire. The amount of property destroyed will exceed thirty thousand dollars upon which the insurance exceeds twenty thousand dollars. The reflection of this fire in the horizon was distinctly visible in this town.

ACCIDENT. We regret to learn that Mr. Edward Eaton, formerly of this town, had his leg badly broken at Thomas Hollis, Jr.'s Quarry, on Saturday last. The accident was caused in attempting to raise, by machinery, some heavy stone. Prompt surgical aid was afforded, and Mr. Eaton is now doing well.

LADIES' FAIR. The sale at the Fair in this town, which was interrupted by the late fire, will be opened again on Monday evening ensuing, and continue on Tuesday and Wednesday. The proceeds are to be appropriated to defray the expense of building the Parsonage, and not to the object as stated by us last week. The laudable intentions of the ladies connected with this movement should be encouraged and liberally sustained by the public.

ANNUAL INSPECTION. The Quincy Light Infantry, Capt. Henry Souther, paraded on Wednesday last, it being the day appointed for the annual inspection of all the volunteer corps within the State. The Infantry manoeuvred well in military tactics, but we regret that there is a lack of public spirit towards the increase of their numbers.

WHIG STATE CONVENTION. The following gentlemen have been chosen Delegates from Randolph to the State Convention at Worcester, viz:—Messrs. Henry B. Alden, Samuel L. Bass, James Maguire, John Belcher, Jr., John King, Ephraim Lincoln, Jr., George W. French, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.

AN INTERESTING WORK. We have received from the publishers 'Marco Paul's Travels and Adventures in the City of Boston,' which, like its predecessors in the series of entertaining papers published under that name, is full of instruction and peculiarly adapted not only to excite an interest in the simple events detailed in the volume, but to inculcate upon the juvenile mind, principles of virtue and morality. For sale at the Quincy Bookstore.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE. Peter Parley has become a Washingtonian—at a late meeting of the Washingtonians, at Jamaica Plain, he signed the pledge and made an eloquent speech. The country round about Charleston, (S. C.) is suffering a protracted drought. The cisterns in the city are most of them dry, and the cotton planters have few of them more than half of their cotton up, and that in many places perishing of thirst. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States recently decided at St. Louis, in favor of the Constitutionality of the Bankrupt Law, thus reversing the decision of the District Judge, and allowing those who had entered their cases in Missouri to receive the benefits of the law.

The New York American states that at two of the largest banks in New York, with a united capital of over three millions, on the last discount day, the offerings were under seven thousand dollars.

That beautiful flower, the Dahlia, was a few years ago comparatively unknown in this country. It is indigenous in Mexico, but our climate is peculiarly fitted for its cultivation. It was discovered by Dahl, a German, from whom it derives its name.

The new Charter of Mexico, recently reported by the Commission, contains some two hundred articles. To be a citizen, a person must possess an annual income of two hundred dollars. The ratio of representation in Congress is to be about the same as in the United States. The Catholic religion is protected by the new charter.

A monument has recently been erected over the remains of Com. O. H. Perry, the hero of Lake Erie, by order of the Rhode Island legislature. It is a granite obelisk, twenty-five feet high.

As life is a day's journey, and we are all travelers, it would be well for us to examine whether we have made any endeavors to secure a comfortable lodging at night.

A late number of the National Intelligencer contained advertisements for ninety-six runaway slaves, offering in the aggregate thirty-five hundred dollars for their apprehension.

A minister recently preached in Baltimore with a pair of hand-cuffs in his pocket, which, immediately after the sermon, he put upon a female slave on shipboard, to be transported to the south.

The Philadelphia police authorities killed in one week, about one hundred and fifty dogs. They captured a much larger number, but their owners in mercy purchased their lives.

A gentleman residing in Baltimore, has invented a self-winding clock, which is said to approach to perpetual motion as nearly as any thing yet discovered.

The distance between Buffalo and New York city, but little less than five hundred miles, is now travelled in thirty-four hours, by the ordinary conveyances.

Some of the bachelors in the Ohio Legislature are for a tax on bachelors! We never knew a bachelor yet that hadn't something to say against the ladies behind his back.

A gentleman, member of a mercantile house in Charlestown, (Mass.) has gone out to London to establish an agency in that city for the sale of Fresh Pond ice. A cargo has been recently shipped to that port. Verily, nothing can equal Yankee enterprise.

France has had twenty-two administrations since 1830.

An individual has invented an additional rein for horses, connected with a spring trap, which, by a single action of the hand, is drawn so close over the nostrils and the mouth as to stop breathing, and thereby bring the most restive animal to his senses.

At an Anti-Slavery Convention held in Boston, the present week, it was voted to appoint a Committee to wait on President Tyler, during his visit to Boston, and request him to emancipate his slaves; and the Committee was also further instructed to prepare an Address, to be signed by the members of the Convention, to be delivered to the President on the same occasion.

One of the Judges of a high court, in Missouri, has decided that the word "citizen," in the Constitution of the United States includes all persons who were born in the United States; in other words, that a negro born free in any State was a citizen of that State, and therefore the law of that State prohibiting free blacks from becoming residents (or coming into a State) null and void.

The most capacious ice-house in Philadelphia, is situated near the river Schuylkill. The enormous quantity it will hold may be judged of from the fact that it now contains five thousand cart loads, (about a thousand loads more than any other about the city) and will hold full three thousand cart loads more.

Never condemn your neighbor unheard, however many the accusations which may be preferred against him. Every story has two sides to it.

Mr. Benjamin Webber of Roxbury, who was supposed to have committed suicide last winter, and whose body so mysteriously disappeared after the Coroners had sat upon it, returned most unexpectedly to his friends the other day, alive and well. He has been to New Orleans, and went away so suddenly that he was unable to give notice of his departure.

A Massachusetts delegate, who attended the great Harrison Convention, in Baltimore, on the 4th of May, 1840, lost his trunk, on his journey thither. A few days ago, the identical trunk, with not an article disturbed, was left at his store. It had been lying for more than three years in the depot of the Baltimore and Philadelphia railroad, at Philadelphia.

The commission of Emory Washburn, Esq., of Worcester, as Master in Chancery for that County, having expired, the Governor has appointed the Hon. Isaac Davis, a citizen of the same town, in his place.

The Baltimore Sun mentions the case of a little girl, aged eleven years, who for the last four months has labored with fits, and who for fifty-three days has not been able to take the slightest food or nourishment of any kind. She is said to be a living skeleton, and a physician says she is suffering from a spinal affection.

Part of the hull of the ill-fated steamer Lexington has recently been recovered by the use of a diving bell. Dr. John C. Warren of Boston, states, that the temperature cause has added, the past year, one sixth to the moral-power and wealth of Massachusetts.

Isaac Leavitt of Scituate, arraigned before the Supreme Judicial Court, in Plymouth, for the murder of Mary Knap, replied to the reading of the indictment, that "he supposed he was guilty." The Court, impressed upon him the meaning and consequences of this plea, and counsel were assigned him, and time allowed in which he might consider his plea, and perhaps retract it. In being arraigned the second time, he adhered to his plea of guilty, on the ground that he was too conscientious to tell a lie.

A farmer of Newburyport, has now growing in his garden, string beans, abundantly large for the table, tender and good. They were planted in pots in the house, and have been placed out of doors every day since the first of May.

It is estimated that one third of the people in America have, for the last twenty years, lived in idleness on the labor of the other two thirds. Do something! Be something. Any thing but a gentleman loafer.

In Randolph, 25th ult., by the Rev. Mr. Clark, Mr. Samuel Vezie of Braintree, to Mrs. Mary Ann Thayer of the former place.

In Dorchester, by Rev. Dr. Codman, Mr. Charles P. Ripley, merchant of South Scituate, (Vt.) to Miss Ann K. daughter of Maj. Samuel Payson of the former place.

The following lines, written by a scholar of one of the parties, were sung at the wedding.

Now the solemn words are spoken,
Now the marriage vow is made;
And the tie of death unbroken
Binds the kindred spirits wed.
Sacred season, sacred season
O'er it hope, thy radiance shed.

Lo, the future brightly beaming
Dawns upon the straining view
For the past while tears are streaming Mingling joy and sorrow too;
Deep emotion, deep emotion
Thrills the trembling spirit through.

Thou, who standest at the altar
Claiming now thy chosen bride,
In thy duty never falter,
O'er life's stormy sea to guide,
Ever faithful, ever faithful
Let what'er of change betide.

Fondly guard the priceless treasure
Woman's love, which thou hast won,
So thy cup of bliss shall measure,
Ever full and ever run,
Till a purer, till a purer
Heaven shall fill when life is done.

Thou, from childhood's home departing
And the loved of many years,
O'er this hour's bright sunshine darting
Cometh grief and falling tears,
Doubly precious, doubly precious
Every face and scene appears.

Oh! when far from these connections,
From this dear, this hallowed spot,
In thy spirit's warm affections,
Cherished one! I forget us not.
Thou shalt never, thou shalt never
By us changeless be forgot.

Go, we will not here detain thee,
Duty calls thee hence away,
By our words we will not pain thee,
Tempt thee in our midst to stay.
Go, we give thee, go, we give thee
All the tribute love can pay.

Fare ye well, may God's rich blessing,
On ye both rest sweetly now,
'Neath his smiles all bliss possessing Earth on mortals can bestow,
Till ye enter, till ye enter
Worlds where binds no marriage vow.

POETRY.

SONG OF THE TEETOTALLERS.

BY REV. GEORGE W. BETHUNE.

Let others praise the ruby bright
In the red wine's sparkling glow,
Dearest to me is the diamond light
Of the fountain's clearest flow;
The feet of earthly men have trod
The juice from the bleeding vine,
But the stream comes pure from the hand of God
To fill this cup of mine.

Then give me the cup of cold water!
The clear, sweet cup of cold water;
For his arm is strong, though his toil be long,
Who drinks but the clear cold water.

The dew-drop lies in the flower's cup,
How rich is its perfume now!
And the fainting earth with joy look up,
When Heaven sends rain on her brow;
The brook goes forth with a pleasant voice
To gladden the vale along,
And the bending trees on her banks rejoice
To bear her quiet song:

Then give me the cup of cold water!
The clear, sweet cup of cold water;
For bright is his eye, and his spirit high,
Who drinks but the clear cold water.

The lark soars up with a lighter strain
When the wave has washed her wing,
And the steed flings back his "thundering mane"
In might of the crystal spring:
This was the drink of Paradise,
Ere blight on her beauty fell,
And the buried streams of her gladness rise
In every moss-grown well:

Then here's to the cup of cold water!
The pure, sweet cup of cold water;
For Nature gives to all that lives
But a drink of the clear cold water.

LOSS IN DELAYS.

Shun delays, they breed remorse,
Take thy time while time is lent thee;
Creeping snails have weakest force,
Fly their fault lest thou repent thee;
Good is best when good is wrought,
Lingering labors come to naught.

Hoist up sail while gale doth last,
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure;
Seek not time when time is past,
Sober speed is wisdom's leisure.

After wits are dearly bought,
Let thy fore-wit guide thy thought.

Time wears all his locks before,
Take thou hold upon his forehead;
When he flies he turns no more,
And behind his scalp is naked,
Works adjoined have many stays,
Long demurs breed new delays.

NO CONCEALMENT.

Think'st thou to be conceal'd, thou little thought
That in the curtain'd chamber of the soul
Dost warp thyself so close, and dream to do
A secret work? Look to the hues that roll
O'er the changed brow—the moving lip behold—
Linking thee unto speech—the feet that run Upon thy errands, and the deeds that stamp
Thy lineage plain before the noontide sun;
Look to the pen that writes thy history down
In those tremendous books that ne'er enclose Until the Day of Doom, and blush to see How vain thy trust in darkness to repose,
Where all things tend to judgment. So, beware,
Oh, erring human heart! what thoughts thou lodgest there.

CHINESE PROVERBS.

When swords are rusty, spades are bright;
When prison doors admit the light,
When granaries are full of corn,
The temple's threshold soiled and worn,
When butchers ride and doctors walk—
Then there are many young and old,
And statesmen well the States uphold.

ANECDOTES.

I am glad, said a minister to the Chief of the Ottawas, that you do not drink whiskey; but it grieved me to find that your people use so much of it. "Ay, yes!" replied the chief, and he fixed an impressive eye upon the reverend doctor, which communicated the reproval before he uttered it, "we Indians use a great deal of whiskey but we do not make it."

An honest Jonathan from the interior, on his visit to the metropolis, was awakened one night by hearing the cry of "Oyst, buy any Oysters!" in the mellifluous tones of the luscious shell fish, who was passing under the windows of the hotel. A noise so new to his ear startled him, and he asked his room mate what it meant. "It is only oysters," replied his fellow lodger pettishly. "Oysters!" exclaimed Jonathan in astonishment, "and do oysters hollow as loud as that?"

On the day of his death, in his eightieth year, Elliot, "the apostle of the Indians," was found teaching the alphabet to an Indian child at his bedside. "Why not rest from your labors now?" said a friend. "Because," said the venerable man, "I have prayed to God to render me useful in my sphere; and he has heard my prayer; for now that I can no longer preach he leaves me strength enough to teach this poor child his alphabet."

Have you ever tried it?

DR. FERNAND'S Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Disorders arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand in his travels, consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine:

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enstailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times very distressing, great flatulency, with a heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

ABRAHAM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Slow Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At the advice of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

"THE PRESENT." Such is the name given to a periodical to be published in New York City the first of July ensuing. It is to be edited by William H. Channing, a nephew of the late Rev. Dr. Channing of Boston, and each monthly part will contain thirty-two large octavo pages, the subscription price to which is two dollars per year.

"Its aim will be, to aid all movements which seem fitted to produce union and growth in religion, science, and society. It will seek to reconcile faith and free inquiry, law and liberty, order and progress; to harmonize sectarian and party differences by statements of universal principles; and to animate hopeful efforts on all sides to advance the reign of heaven on earth. It will endeavor to discuss the various questions which are now interesting our communities, such as theological and church reforms, social reorganization and association, universal liberty, human rights, capital punishment, peace, purity, health, etc., with sincerity and candor; to encourage and note the progress of spiritual and humane enterprises to remove ignorance, vice, and suffering; to record discoveries and inventions which promise to elevate man's condition; and by notices of native and foreign books, with extracts and translations, by descriptions and criticisms of artistic creations, as well as by tales and poems from our own authors, to unite beauty with truth and love. Its pages are open to all who can express their convictions with good sense and feeling." Such a publication is greatly needed; and we have no doubt, from the talents and abilities of its editor, that the promises made in the prospectus will be abundantly fulfilled. Success to an undertaking which has such good objects in view.

HUNT'S MERCHANT'S MAGAZINE. The June number of this deservedly popular periodical fully sustains the reputation it acquired from its commencement in 1830. The present number closes the eighth half-yearly volume, (the fourth year of its existence,) and we are pleased to learn that its circulation is extending all over the commercial world. It has attracted the attention of the French Commissioners of Commerce—sent to China, Germany, and taken by some of the leading business men of England, such as Baring & Brothers, etc. The number now before us contains seven papers of varied length, besides a vast amount of statistical and other matters connected with the trade and navigation of the country. The original papers of the number, which we annex, will give some idea of the scope of the work, and is after all the best index of its character, viz:—The Causes and the Cure of Hard Times—Progress of Wealth and Population in the United States in fifty years, as exhibited by the decennial census taken in that period, by Professor Tucker of the University of Virginia—The Protective System, its character and constitutionality, by Hon. Charles Hudson, Member of Congress from Massachusetts—Canal Commerce of New York, by Freeman Hunt, the editor—Missouri and its Resources, by C. C. Whittelsey of Missouri—Coal Trade of Pennsylvania, by the editor—and a Memoir of Samuel Ward, by Charles King, Esq., the editor of the New York American. The remainder of the number is occupied with the usual variety of important statistical matter, together with a valuable Commercial Chronicle, embracing a financial and commercial view of the United States, illustrated with tables that must prove "valuable for present and future reference." Saxton & Pierce, Boston, agents for New England States. Subscriptions also received at this office.

They have in New York white slate pencils, made from a soft white stone quarried at Castleton, (Vt.) They are said to be altogether preferable to the blue slate pencils.

MISCELLANY.

THE VALIANT SUITOR.

"For a laggard in love, and a dastard in war,
Was to wed the fair Ellen of brave Lochinvar."

"My dear father, you cannot, you surely will not, sacrifice me to this man, whom I can never love—who is not worthy of my love! Oh! ere it be too late, let my entreaties move you from this unhappy purpose."

This was the anxious prayer of a daughter to her father, on the morning which was destined to see her finally connected to a man whom she disliked and despised. But she spoke to obstinate ears. General Veltin had been accustomed for many years to receive unlimited obedience from those placed under him in the Austrian military service, and though not a harsh parent, could not bear to have his wishes thwarted even by an only daughter.—"Do not provoke me, Aurelia," said he; "ought I not to be the best judge of what is for your real interest and happiness? And can I have any other objects at heart in this match? Besides, I will not take your opinion of Baron Manthein as the correct one. He was a soldier, and circumstances permitted him to see little actual service; I am sure, he is brave, and merits none of the foolish reflections which you are prejudiced enough to throw out against him. He is wealthy, too, and can place you in a situation befitting your birth and family. Finally, Aurelia, my word has been passed to him, and so there need be no more said on the subject."

The young lady was silent a moment, and the general rose to leave the room. "Oh, dear father," said Aurelia, anxiously, as she started to his side, and laid her hand on his shoulder; "if I can expose this man's real character to you—if I can prove to you his utter want of spirit, his absolute poltroonery, will you not spare me this detestable union?" "Ay, girl, if indeed you could do this," returned the General, "matters would certainly be somewhat changed. A coward were no fit husband for a daughter of mine. But you speak of things absurd—impossible; so, no more of this. Prepare yourself; Manthein will soon be here. And fear not, my love, continued the General more affectionately, but you will be happy. I have no wish but to see you so;—and I act as I do, because I believe that object can only be brought about by crossing your own foolish desires at this moment." Kissing her brow with paternal fondness, the General then left his daughter's apartment.

For a short time afterwards, Aurelia sat absorbed in thought, her fair countenance indicating many anxious emotions. At length she rose from her seat, with the air of one who has formed some decisive resolution, and rang for her waiting maid. The latter came at the summons. As she entered the room, Aurelia started somewhat hastily and discomposedly, and turned the key of a little closet door in her apartment. She then assumed a calm manner, seemingly regretting the hurried action into which she had been led. "Get me the necklace which I wore yesterday, Bertha," said she to the girl. "It is in your dressing closet, madam," answered Bertha, and she advanced with great alacrity to the door of the closet, which her mistress had aroused her curiosity by locking so hastily. But Aurelia interposed herself between the girl and the closet, with sufficient quickness to prevent the other from entering. "You need not trouble yourself to seek it, Bertha," cried she, "I will get it myself. Go you down stairs, and learn when Baron Manthein arrives. Inform him that I wish to speak with him immediately, and bring him hither. Go, and remember this." Bertha could not avoid obeying the command thus given to her, but she could as little refrain from betraying by her glances that the conduct of her young mistress had awakened in her both curiosity and suspicion. To say the truth, the girl and her lady were not upon these terms, on which young heroines and their personal attendants are usually found, at least in stories and romances. Bertha had been induced, by pretty liberal douceurs, to take the side of the father, and of the lover favored by him, in the matrimonial matters agitated in the old General's family, and as a natural consequence, had lost the confidence of the opposite party, her own mistress.

When left by Bertha, Aurelia did not remain long alone, for the waiting-maid soon returned, bringing with her the suitor countenanced by the General. As regarded mere looks, the Baron Manthein could not have been much complained of, or objected to, by Aurelia. He was young, and at least tolerably well favored. In attire and appearance, moreover, he was very bold and martial, his moustache being of even more than national prominence. After he had seated himself, and requested to know what peculiar commands the lady had at that moment to honor him with, Aurelia addressed him somewhat abruptly. "You are aware, sir, that my addresses have been always distasteful to me, and that I have endured them only in obedience to my father's commands. They are now more displeasing than ever." The suitor seemed but little discomposed by this salutation, which indeed, communicated nothing new to him. "Let me hope, madam," said he, in reply, "that time, and my anxious attentions, will remove this unfavorable feeling." "Time can do much, sir," returned the lady, "but time can make no alteration in my sentiments towards you. I assure you of this, and hope that the assurance will make you forbear, even yet, from pressing your suit on one who can neither be happy with you, nor make you happy." "Pardon me, lady," replied the gentleman, assuming the appearance of great devotion, "it does rest with you, and you alone, to make me happy; and you will excuse me if I cannot consent to forego the prospects which your father's kindness and his promise hold out to me."

Aurelia looked down, and, after a pause, answered, with a slight apparent degree of confusion: "Then, sir, I must beg to inform you—since you show so little generosity of forbearance—that there may be others who consider themselves entitled to a voice in this matter." "Others?" cried the lover, startled into perceptible loss of color; "what others can there be entitled to interfere in the matter? Come, madam, you jest." "I do not jest," answered Aurelia, with a tone of gravity which made an obvious impression on the Baron, in spite of his attempts to assume a look of ease; "I do not jest, sir. There are other parties—there is one other party at all events—who may feel called upon to question the right of your perseverance in this suit against my fixed inclination."

"Madam, what other party can this be?" exclaimed the Baron; "you must allude to a lover; and who can be he? What will your father say to this, madam? But, pshaw! there is no such person," continued the doughty suitor, resuming in part his confidence; "there is no such person. You but jest, madam." "I do not," said Aurelia quietly but firmly; "there is such a person, and at this moment he is not far distant from us." "Not far distant?" cried the alarmed Baron, "what do you mean, lady?" "I say that the person to whom I allude is not far distant," repeated the young lady, "and that before you leave this room an explanation must take place between you."

The General's daughter then arose, and advanced to the closet formerly mentioned. She turned the key in the door, and opening it slightly, exclaimed, "Albert! Albert! Inhoff!" "Stop! stop! madam, for heaven's sake!" cried the Baron, of whose qualities the lady had expressed no incorrect opinion to her father; "stop, madam! I am not deaf to reason. If you are really attached to another, I should be sorry to persist. What would you have me do? Resign my hand freely and voluntarily," answered the lady; "here are my writing materials. Write me such a resignation briefly and quickly." "What! resign your hand of my own accord?" cried the Baron; "oh! madam, what will your father say to me?" "Albert! Albert!" exclaimed Aurelia, re-opening the closet door, and again speaking into the interior. "Stop, madam, for mercy's sake!" again cried the Baron, "close the door, pray. I have but my sword; he may have pistols, and might shoot me dead before I could move from the spot. I will write the resignation." "Do so without delay, then," answered the lady. The Baron answered hurriedly, "Yes, yes, without delay."

"Accordingly, the alarmed suitor took his seat at the table, and began to write in terms which the lady, at his own request, dictated to him. The resignation which she demanded was so full and unequivocal, that the Baron's repugnance twice got the better of his fears, and induced him to lay down his pen. But the magical whisper of "Albert! Albert!" brought him instantly to his senses, and he was glad to complete the paper and place it in the lady's hands. It may be guessed that it was with no very dignified look or step that, at the close of the operation, he quitted the apartment of the General's daughter.

Left alone, Aurelia did not enter the important closet, but sat down on a sofa, waiting quietly for the results of what had passed. She was not mistaken in her calculation that Manthein would fly without delay to the General, and relate, in his own way, all that had happened. Within a quarter of an hour after the Baron had quitted her, Aurelia was visited by her father, and at a short distance behind him came the Baron. They were fully armed. The General was in a state of fearful excitement and rage. "Girl!" cried he, "shameless, wretched girl, it would be charity to thee to take thy life on the spot; but first let me punish your betrayer! Where is he?" "Father!" answered Aurelia, quietly, "for whom do you ask?" "For your minion, miserable girl!" answered the General; "show me instantly where he is!" "There is no one here, father, to my knowledge," said Aurelia; "search, and you will find it so." "What! think you this trick will serve you? was not your base accomplice shut up here, to extort a resignation of your hand from the Baron?" answered the angry father; "and was not a pistol held to his head till your object was attained?" "The young lady knows too well that such was the case, and that her accomplice is shut up at this moment in the closet," exclaimed the Baron. "Indeed!" said Aurelia, with a look of ineffable scorn; "has such been your pitiful tale? Father, look here. If there has been any one but myself in this closet to day, banish me from your house and love forever!"

Aurelia then led the way into the closet. Neither there, nor about the apartments, did the General see any one. "He has escaped," cried the Baron, "No! he has not escaped," said Aurelia, disdainfully. "Father, ask Baron Manthein the name of this accomplice—this holder of pistols to men's heads!" "His name is Albert—Albert Inhoff," answered the Baron without questioning. "Albert Inhoff!" exclaimed the General; "impossible! he died some months since on the field of battle; he was once my aid-de-camp." "Yes, father, it was impossible that he should be here," said Aurelia, "but his name was enough. The very name of a brave man was enough to extort from Baron Manthein's fears a resignation of my hand!" "But Bertha, daughter,—Pardon me dear father," continued Aurelia, "If I used artifice to gain my purpose, and to show you how unworthy of the hand of a brave man's child was he on whom you were about to bestow it. No one was even in my chamber. This resignation was extorted not by pistols, but by the mere whisper of a name." Why, Baron—said the amazed General, turning round. But the Baron had slipped quietly away, nor did he ever reappear to claim the annulment of the "resignation."

General Veltin was taught by the preceding circumstances, that it would be much safer to allow Aurelia to choose her own partner for life. She soon found one who never gave her father cause to repent of his having indulged her with her own choice in the matter.

TO THE FRIENDS OF TEMPERANCE.

The late festival, at Dedham, was announced as a celebration of the Washingtonians of Norfolk County. It was believed that the stand taken by Mr. Clark in opening the Phoenix Hotel as a strictly temperance house in the shire-town of the County, merited a public expression of congratulation from the friends of total abstinence in old Norfolk, and untiring efforts were made not only to secure a substantial testimonial of encouragement for Mr. Clark, but also to strike a blow for the Washingtonian cause which should be felt throughout the county.

The gentlemen invited to lead in the devotional exercises of the day and the speakers also were not only well known as active friends of temperance, but they had also given in their adherence to the total abstinence movement by attending to the town and county meetings and by signing the Washingtonian pledge.

The pledge of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks, is emphatically the ark of safety to a large portion of the Washingtonians. It is "the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night" to hundreds of thousands of men in our land; it is the strong arm which is leading them on to faithful fellowship with good men on earth, and it is hoped, to their rightful inheritance with good men in Heaven. A profound sentiment of respect has become associated with the pledge, which thus acquires the binding force of a sacred obligation. It is a pledge given by man to his fellow man, a violation of which involves the sacrifice of mutual confidence, of honor and of truth. Struck with astonishment at the results which have been produced by this Washingtonian pledge, many of the pioneers in the temperance cause, in every part of the country and in every condition in life, have given the sanction of their names and their active efforts to the total abstinence cause; and wherever such men have joined the ranks of the Washingtonians the reform has received a powerful influence. Nowhere has this result been more obvious than in some of the towns in Norfolk County, as has been more particularly noticed in the annual county report.

We are aware that many individuals, distinguished in public and private life for unquestioned excellence of character, have not yet felt it to be their duty to add their names to the pledge of total abstinence. Their language is—"such a pledge may be necessary for the drunkard, but it is not so for us," and thus they cut themselves off, it is believed, from all influence on this subject over those in the highest as well as humblest circles in life, who are with various degrees of speed travelling heedlessly on to a drunkard's grave.

The Committee of Arrangements of the late celebration in Dedham, were of opinion that those persons, however eminent for public and private worth in other respects, who had not exhibited their interest in the Washingtonian movement by signing the total abstinence pledge—who had not manifested their disapprobation of the use of alcohol in all its forms,—ought not to be invited to lead in the devotional services or to participate as speakers at public meetings called for the joyful purpose of congratulation on the progress and triumph of total abstinence principles. It was the object of the committee thus to manifest their respect for the pledge. No other consideration was deemed of sufficient weight to take precedence of the great principle involved in the pledge of total abstinence.

The Committee felt desirous that the old as well as new friends of temperance should be present at the celebration, and accordingly letters were addressed to the President of every Washington Total Abstinence Society in the County requesting them to invite all the clergymen in their respective towns to attend the celebration; and the clergy of Dedham were particularly requested to favor the meeting with their presence, in a note specially addressed to them by the chairman of the committee. Similar invitations were also given to numerous other public men in and out of the County, one of the answers to which only was read at the celebration for want of time. These letters speak a language of deep interest in the cause, and it is most ardently hoped that they are only the forerunners of more active services.

The temperance reform has in the eyes of the world taken in these days strong and resolute ground. The wonderful results which have been achieved within the last three years have (and we repeat the fact) been produced by the influence of the total abstinence pledge. It is this pledge which is uniting the human fam-

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Aracum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Catarrhus Vesicæ, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impediment in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above-mentioned, of effecting a speedy and efficient cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable persons have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, "Weymouth."

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fasten- ing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Aracum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Aracum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health, as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House,

Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernands' Aracum:

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Slow Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which I obtained from you, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernands Indian Aracum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Aracum.

ily in one common bond to overthrow the giant sin of the world. Commencing with the fallen and despised, the working-man and the philanthropist have next given their names to the pledge, and are now laboring with all their might to save their fallen fellow-men from destruction. The rich, the fashionable and the learned, with few exceptions, stand afar off, uninterested or perplexed observers of the reform, and we are yet to learn from them the reasons which justify them in withholding their names from the list. Are these classes free from the sin of intemperance? The answer comes to us from the elegant mansions of our cities and villages, from our counting-houses and colleges, from our halls of legislation, and from the highest and holiest places in the land. And it will still continue to come to us in the wailings of broken-hearted mothers and orphan children so long as wine drinking gentlemen are considered by our public speakers and teachers as exempt from the soul-saving law of the Washingtonian pledge. We trust that the day is near at hand when the rallying cry of the millions who have already congregated together in safety, may be heard by those who still slumber in insecurity, and that the unwillingness of every rank in life may soon overcome false pride with principle, and with the courage of men and of christians plant their feet securely on the rock of total abstinence.

E. K. WHITAKER, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, June 6, 1843.

FRIEND GREEN—I suppose, in these days of railroads, balloons and magic, you have enough to write without any of my scribbling, but be that as it may, I shall drop you the following:

About these times, we are usually pretty dull here, as the greater part, or at least many, are gone into the country. But it is not so now. The cold and unpleasant weather has operated to keep the people at home, so that we have about as much amusement as is found in the winter. All kinds of meetings abound, and unless I am much mistaken, you can see as much human nature here as any where.

A day or two since, I attended a meeting where the right to hold property was discussed. There was quite a large number of speakers present, and the subject came up in all its various forms. Some thought that one man had quite as good a right to a hat which I had appropriated to myself as I had, or rather, to use a common expression, "the one who could secure it first was the best fellow." Abby Folsom thought there would be no difficulty about property, or the right of speech, or the liberty of the press, if people would only consent to let others own things and speak and publish for them. One of the Balauns (I know not which) argued strenuously against the community of property. It was really a ludicrous conceit, and it seemed not a very easy task, to determine who was the most degraded, Abigail or her colleagues.

It was my privilege also, recently, to attend a discussion of the Anti-Slavery Society (old organization). It was held in the great Millerite Tabernacle; (by the way, not so inconvenient or unsuitable a place for a large assembly as might be conceived.) Resolutions were read and adopted, and a Committee chosen to present them to President Tyler, when he may honor our city with his presence, asking him to liberate the men, women and children which he now holds as chattel.

Here, also, as in the No Propertyists, there did not seem to prevail that entire harmony and unanimity which should characterize brethren. Some were for relinquishing their old trade against the church and the clergy. They thought it better, as the state of things is—the prejudices of the community people being in favor of their craft—to let the ordinary ministers of the gospel and the D. D.'s alone—neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all. Others maintained that as the church and the ministry stood directly in the way of the emancipation of the slaves, the friends of universal liberty and equality must first cut their way through this unholy phalanx before they could possibly benefit the oppressed African. The contest on these points, and for liberty to discuss them, was so sharp that the President or presiding officer, Edmund Quincy, Esq., left the chair because he could not maintain order. There was, however, a calm after one or two of the most violent against church and clergy had taken themselves away; I mean, withdrawing fellowship forever from the fraternity.

It was also my lot, not long since, to attend a meeting of the prophets of '43, where it was distinctly stated by one of them—a Mr. Starkweather—that the longest end of the present world could possibly be put off, by the last and most correct calculations, was the third day of June, inst. (I name this thing now, though it might have been considered impious to have said any thing about it before the day had given the prophecy the go by.) I have generally found in the meetings of the prophets that when the women prophesy, expound or interpret, it comes with more power or gusto, and is received with a far better zest than when the prophet is a man.

It is said there has been some discrepancy of opinion between Starkweather and Himes, and as Himes is Pontifex maximus, or the seignior prophet, Starkweather with a few chosen ones had to flee and leave the great Tabernacle; wherefore, it is reported that the said S. has not been allowed since to prophesy there. It must have been a heinous offence for one prophet thus to prophesy against another; especially one of the minor prophets to lift up his voice against the grand seignior; wherefore, it cometh to pass, that such an offence must be sharply rebuked, as is meet for such transgressions. Yet as all evil is overruled for good, so in this case, the separation of Mr. S. from the Himesites has resulted in the rearing up of another Tabernacle in the centre of the city, between Winter Street and Temple Place, entrance from Winter Street through Jackson Place. This new Tabernacle is now nearly completed, and it is understood that Elder S. will officiate therein.

We have had all kinds of preaching recently, but enough has been said about preachers and prophets and prophetesses, and I will now advert to another subject, say politics.

own in which he could possibly locate himself. My own opinion is, that Daniel will keep still about political matters at present. It would be his wisdom now to bury himself in Marshfield as long as Harrison did himself at North Bend. He might then be dug up to advantage.

The general voice seems to be in favor of President Tyler's Administration. There seems not to be any feature of what he has done on which his enemies can lay their hands and say that was wrong, and in the absence of every real cause of complaint they have been constantly busy in conjuring up mischief, 'as spirits from the vasty deep.' They have vilified and maligned his deeds of purity and righteousness as those of darkness and treachery. The man who ought to be admired for his consistency, and whose praise should be on the lips of all the people for his open, honest, straight forward course is vilified as a traitor. Yes, traitor; and pray whom has he betrayed? The whigs? Them he betrayed many years before they sung

"Tippecanoe And Tyler too."

They knew his political views then, as well as they do now. But I forbear. A fallen enemy should always be spared.

A great cry is raised at present about removals, but when have we had an administration which was not thus assailed? How many neglect to fill the offices which they hold acceptably or faithfully? In such circumstances what can they expect but to be removed. Besides, who has not a right and would not prefer to have an office under their entire control, filled with a friend rather than an enemy. It would be contrary to human nature. It would be what never was or will be. So far as President Tyler is democratic every democrat is bound to sustain him, and it is not doubted but that he will do it. It is rumored that there are more removals soon to take place.

Was shall have a glorious time on the 17th, if Daniel does not spoil it by some of his old shifts. We shall see how the old Bay State will encircle in her embrace the man whom the nation delights to honor.

A word as to business and I close. It is good. Every one says so, and what every body says must be true. JUNIUS.

WHIG STATE CONVENTION. This body assembled at Worcester, on Wednesday last. It appeared that 905 delegates were elected, and 784 were present. Hon. Stephen C. Phillips of Salem, was appointed President, and there were several Vice Presidents and Secretaries. On the first ballot for Governor, the whole number was 784, of which 707 were for the Hon. John Davis, and the rest were divided among a number of candidates. The nomination was then confirmed by a unanimous vote, and a Committee of seven was appointed to notify Governor Davis of his nomination, and request his acceptance.

After a recess, the Convention re-assembled, when the Committee appointed to wait on Gov. Davis reported that he declined the nomination. He declared that from considerations of a private nature, and the obligations which he owed to his family, he did not feel at liberty to accept it.

On balloting a second time, it was found that the whole number 760, of which 682 were for the Hon. George N. Briggs of Pittsfield, late a Member of Congress, and the rest were divided between a number of gentlemen. This nomination was confirmed by a unanimous vote, and a committee was appointed to inform the nominee and request his acceptance.

The Convention then proceeded to ballot for a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The whole number of votes was 760, of which 700 were for the Hon. John Reed of Yarmouth, for many years a Member of Congress, and the rest were divided between several candidates. A committee was appointed to notify the candidate of his nomination, and he being in town, the committee subsequently reported that he accepted the nomination.

THE UNITED STATES ALMANAC. The publisher of this highly valuable work, says the New York Courier and Enquirer, is preparing to add greatly to its value this year, and to bring out the next number under auspices that cannot fail to give it a vastly extended circulation. John Downe, Esq., of the Northern Boundary Survey, will have charge of the astronomical department, and the publisher has been fortunate enough to obtain the aid of Freeman Hunt, Esq., Editor of the Merchant's Magazine and Corresponding Member of the American Statistical Society, who will edit the statistical department of the "United States Almanac." There is probably no man in the country whose habits, pursuits, and peculiar cast of mind better qualify him for such a duty; and good judgment has been displayed in making such a selection.

GEN. JACKSON'S FINE. At the last session of the Louisiana Legislature, consisting in each branch of a majority of Gen. Jackson's political opponents, it will be remembered that resolutions were passed declaring the intention of that body to refund the New Orleans fine, in case Congress should fail to do it. These resolutions have been beautifully transcribed in parchment, in French and English, with the seal of the State affixed, enclosed in a handsome gilt frame, and forwarded to the General, at the Hermitage, by the Governor of the State.

RENEWAL OF THE BLUE LAWS. The municipal Councils of Wilmington, (Del.) have passed an ordinance "to prevent the landing of passengers from steamboats at their wharves on the Sabbath, and also to prevent all steamboats, except they should happen to contain the United States Mail, from touching at their place." However desirable it may be to enforce a proper observance of the Sabbath, and no one will deny the duty of doing so, we do not believe in the efficacy of such an ordinance as this, or in the possibility of carrying it into effect.

BARGAINS!! BARGAINS!! We readily embrace the opportunity to express our gratification at the success which has attended in business our esteemed friend Maj. B. H. Norton, who is connected in partnership with a gentleman equally worthy of our regards. They have been so successful in the auction and commission business, that they have found it necessary to enlarge their store and extend the means of supplying their numerous and constantly increasing customers. The establishment of Messrs. Norton & Luther, No. 7 State street, Boston, is one of the most central and inviting in the city, where a man may purchase almost any thing to supply his reasonable wants, for a mere song. Their sales are continued day and evening.

OREGON CONVENTION. The Oregon General Committee of Ohio, have given notice that a Convention will be held at Cincinnati, on the fourth and fifth of July next, to urge upon Congress the immediate occupation of the Oregon Territory, by the arms and laws of the republic, and to adopt such measures as may seem most conducive to its immediate and effectual occupation, whether the Government acts or not in the matter.

DEATH BY SUICIDE. Orin Hildreth, known to many of the citizens of this town and vicinity as a merchant trader a few years since at Neponset Village (Dorchester), where he has resided to the day of his death, and more recently connected in the shoe business at Boston, cut his throat last Monday forenoon, with a penknife. He had been depressed in mind for some months past, and had at times shown signs of insanity. His wife and family endeavored to watch him, but unfortunately he unobserved got a penknife which his wife had been using in the room where he was present. She soon missed the knife and also her husband. Fearing something wrong, she hastened out of the house and met him returning from an out-building with his throat cut on the right side, disclosing a deep gash about three inches long. He requested her not to be alarmed. Medical assistance was forthwith called, and Dr. West examined the wound, and found that the jugular had been cut nearly three quarters off. Dr. West with the advice of Drs. Thaxter and Spooner, proceeded at once to take up the severed parts, and to unite them.

Mr. Hildreth lingered until Thursday morning, when he expired. He was about forty-five years of age.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS. Hon. Daniel P. King of Danvers, Speaker of the House of Representatives of this State, and the whig candidate for Congress, has been elected in the Second District by fifty or more votes majority at the late trial. J. C. Stickney, Esq., was the democratic candidate in place of Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr., who declined. There was a great falling off in the number of votes polled.

In the third, sixth and seventh districts, from the returns already received, there appears to have been no choice. There has been about an equal decrease of votes with the three parties since the last trial.

THE BARQUE CREOLE CASE. At the present term of the Court of Common Pleas, in Boston, this case was decided. Messrs. P. & S. Sprague & Co. were the plaintiffs, and Messrs. Simon Gillett, Isaiah G. Whiton, Daniel Baxter, Ebenezer Woodard, Thomas Nickerson, Pliny Nickerson and D. Nickerson, owners of the vessel, defendants.

This was an action for a quantity of whale warp furnished to the barque Creole, by the plaintiffs, in 1840. It appeared that the warp was sold to one Charles A. Brown, who has since died, for which he paid in part cash, and gave a note for the balance, signed by himself as agent of three eighths of the barque.

The present action was brought against all of the owners. The defendants contended, that the plaintiffs could recover if at all only upon the note, because that was received by them in payment of the debt; and that they could not recover on that, because Brown had no authority to purchase goods on credit. At most, the plaintiffs could only recover against those of the owners who owned the three eighths of the barque referred to in the note.

The plaintiffs admitted that the note was prima facie payment of the debt, but if the defendants denied Brown's authority, then the note was not payment, and they might recover against all the owners.

Chief Justice Williams instructed the jury, that a negotiable note was ordinarily considered in law a payment of the debt, but this presumption might be rebutted by evidence, showing a contrary intention between the parties. If the note was not payment of this debt, then the plaintiffs might recover on the account; but they could only recover against those of the owners for whom Brown had authority to act, either expressed or implied. Moreover, if the jury thought that any of the defendants were not liable, they must find a general verdict for the defendants; and the plaintiffs, if they chose, might bring another suit against the owners who were really liable.

The jury found a verdict for the defendants. William Gray, Esq., managed the case for the plaintiffs.

Col. George T. Bigelow for the four first named owners, and P. W. Chandler for the remainder.

THE SYMBOL AND ODD FELLOW'S MAGAZINE. We are much gratified with the character and appearance of this publication from what we can gather on a hasty perusal of the eighth number, the only one which we have received. It is published by T. Prince, 32 Congress Street, Boston, and is devoted to the cause of Odd Fellowship and general literature. The publication deserves a generous support.

"SOMETHING NEW." The reader's attention is directed to the advertisement of Mr. Porter, in another column, who proposes to give a free lecture at the Town Hall, this evening, on his new system of Arithmetic and Mathematics. On an examination of his work, which gives explanations and demonstrations, we have been led to form a very favorable opinion of the system. The public should certainly attend his lecture, because a plan that is so apparently simple in solving arithmetical questions, which require by our present method so many figures and also appears so complicated to the minds of many persons, should be brought into common practice and introduced into every school.

TEMPERANCE TALE. William S. Damrell of Boston, has recently published another temperance tale, being the twenty-first number of the valuable series of works on rum-selling and rum-drinking, by L. M. Sargeant, Esq., the well known author of "Groggry Harbor," etc. The "Temperance Meeting in the Village of Tattertown," is the name given to the volume under consideration. It vividly pictures the disgusting scenes caused by the beastly habit of swallowing intoxicating liquors, and it is written in that style which has given so much celebrity to the author's other efforts to promote this great and christian cause.

POETRY.

INFINITE WISDOM.

BY JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Whoever studies the historic page,
And reads the record of departed time,
Shall find in every realm, in every age,
The same return of error, vice and crime—
The same dramatic persons of the stage;
Or varied only by the name or clime!
Shall still behold the fair and candid face,
Dupes of the artful, victims of the base.

And yet, man, coming from his Maker's hand, Cannot exchange his nature if he would;
The dark and cunning thus must ever stand;
Prone to all evil, and averse to good.
The villain's heart can never lose its brand;
The honest heart can never take a hood;
Oh! must it prove until the judgment day,
That half mankind was born the other's prey?

Yet, let not hence, presumption dare to scan
The scope and compass of Almighty mind:
Or scrutinize with impious doubt the plan
Of wisdom and of goodness still combined;
Born from the clod of earth, immortal man
To this poor wretched world is not confined;
Tho' but in part this system bounds his view,
There is an eye that looks creation thro'.

And if there be a Ruler of the skies,
Justice, eternal justice is his law—
And what's of justice earth denies,
Angelic hands in heaven shall mend the flaw.
Rise then, on hope's seraphic pinions rise!
From worlds beyond the grave thy comfort draw;
And deem the wrongs that virtue here sustains,
Proofs that on high a God of justice reigns.

TIME.

Time speeds away—away—away—
Another hour, another day,
Another month, another year,
Drops from us like a leafless tree;
The rose-bloom from the cheek departs;
The life blood curdles in our hearts;
The tresses from the temple fall;
The eye grows dim and strange to all.

Time speeds away—away—away,
Like torrents in a stormy day;
He undermines the stately tower,
Uproots the tree and snaps the flower,
And sweeps from our distracted breast,
The friends that love, the friends that blest,
And leaves us weeping on the shore,
To which they can return no more.

Time speeds away—away—away—
No eagle through the skies of day,
No wind along the hills can flee
So swiftly or so smooth as he.
Like fiery steed, from stage to stage
He bears us on—from youth to age—
Then plunges in the fearful sea
Of fathomless eternity.

THE MIGHTY DOLLAR.

The universal idol, gold, in homage each unit;
Without a temple 'tis adored, and has no hypocrites;
Nay, more, gold's warmest devotees strive most to hide their zeal,
And he that loves this idol most, would most that love conceal.

This idol has prerogatives peculiar and its own;
Unlike its brother idols, 'tis not block, nor wood, nor stone;
Yet it gives eyes unto the blind, and tongues unto the dumb.
And more; it makes the lynx a mole, and elocution
—mum!

ANECDOTES.

An old sow once became so drunk, by eating rum cherries, that she tumbled into the gutter. She had a large litter of pigs, and they ran around her, seeming in very great distress and squeaking most violently.
A little girl, who was looking through a window, witnessed the whole scene, and she was affected to tears by it. "Why, what's the matter my child?" asked her mother, seeing the tears trickling down the lovely cheeks of her daughter. "Why, I was crying to think how shamed them poor little pigs must be to have a drunken mother," was the reply.

"My son," said a pious old lady to her son, after she had read to him a chapter in the Bible relating to Jonah, "how must Jonah feel when the whale swalloved him?"
"Sort o' daren in the mouth, I s'pose," replied the little joker.

A young gentleman meeting a handsome milkmaid said, "what will you take for yourself and your milk my dear?" The girl instantly replied, "Yourself and a gold ring, sir."

"I say, Jim, are you going to see the man hung?"
"Hung for vot?" "Vy, for 'orse stealing." "For stealing a 'orse? vat a fool! Vy didn't he buy one on trust, and never pay for him?"

A young man married a wife whose only claim upon his regard was her personal beauty. She said to him, at the end of one of their quarrels—"Oh, that you love me; you cannot look me in the face and say you love me."
"You mistake me, my dear," cried he, "for it is only when I look you in the face that I can say that I love you."

"Why will you persist in giving my brother liquor?"
said one rumrunner, who had a drunken brother, to another, who furnished him with rum. "Don't you sell to any body's brother?" was the cool reply.

A long gentleman on the back seat of a stage coach, after the second day's ride, yawning, cried "Oh, that I could take mine ease at mine inn." "Oh, that you could take your knees in," responded a luckless sojourner of the middle seat before him.

"I suppose your brother is quite in a transport at returning home," said one to another, whose brother had been long absent. "No," returned the latter, "he came home in a steamer."

"Have you dined?" said a loungee to his friend, "I have, upon my honor," replied he. "Then," rejoined the first, "if you have dined upon your honor, I fear you have made a scanty meal."

"Do you suppose a person can see better by the aid of glasses?" said a man in company. "I know he can," answered a toper; "for after I have taken half a dozen glasses I can see double."

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous
Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Imprudences in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an impure blood.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own handwriting, and by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine:

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast entailing upon me the prospect of all human diseases, which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief.
About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr.
Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.
Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy
Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DR. SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline, but he has by frequent use of this medicine, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.
Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House,
Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Stomach Fever, from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief from the use of this medicine, I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

THE IMPRUDENT STEP.
The flower when crushed will send perfume,
The risen tree may sprout again,
And spring will raise to life and bloom,
Bleak autumn's melancholy train;
But human hearts when'er they feel
The frost of unrequited love,
No earthly power the wound can heal,
Till death the malady remove.

Harry Heywood! how I loved him when we were boys together—sporting over the fields and hills—chasing the bee and butterfly, or culling the new blown flowers! Then he was happy. The future was pictured bright before his young imagination. He saw no cloudy sky—no chilling storm—no winter of gloom;
but a bright sun and a pure heaven were ever above him. The green earth, sprinkled with ten thousand flowers, smiled before him. A kind father and an indulgent mother doted on an only son. Nothing was denied to him that would gratify his desires. In a round of pleasure the years flew by and Harry was on the verge of manhood. Genteel and accomplished, and possessing a good disposition and a fine mind, he won the respect and love of all who knew him—particularly the affection of the kind and gentle Louisa. Miss Mentor was the daughter of a neighbor in comfortable circumstances, where Henry had been a constant visitor from his childhood. Now that he had grown to manhood, his feelings had changed somewhat in regard to Louisa. His regard to her had ripened into an attachment. And throughout the village it was understood that young Heywood and Louisa were destined for each other. "It will be a fine match," was the common remark—"their dispositions are so nearly alike, they cannot fail of being happy."
The young lady was not handsome; but she was good. Possessing a generous heart and an agreeable disposition she was calculated to make any one happy who should cultivate her acquaintance.

About this time the father of Louisa sickened and died. The faithful daughter watched beside the bed of her parent day and night, administering to his wants and smoothing his dying pillow. A short time before the fatal termination of Mr. Mentor's illness, a day had been appointed by Henry for an excursion of pleasure.
Presuming that her father would be better in a few days, Louisa gave her consent to accompany her friend; but when the time arrived she told Heywood that she must be excused on account of the illness of her father. "When I made the promise I thought he would be better by today, but he has been growing worse, and now it is not prudent for me to leave him in his present critical situation."

The color rushed to Henry's cheeks, as he said—"I have made all the arrangements and you must go; you will not be missed one day, and certainly your father will be no worse."
"I cannot leave him. I could not enjoy myself when father is so feeble, and then if he should be worse I should have to reflect upon through life. Can't you put off going to some future day?"

"No—I cannot put it off. Come, get ready and go; it is getting late."
"I must decline, unwilling as I am, for I cannot leave my father."

"Then you will not go, I am to understand?"
said Henry, manifesting a little displeasure.
"With all my heart I would go if it were not my duty to take care of father. It will not do to leave him, and sorry as I am to do it, I must decline;" and a tear was in her eye as she spoke.

"Very well—you will be sorry for it."
"Now don't censure me, Henry, because I do what I believe to be my bounden duty."
"You could go as well as not if you were so disposed—but I shan't ask you again," and so saying the young man left the house, leaving the dutiful girl in tears.

Henry went directly to Mr. Howell's and invited his daughter Jane to accompany him, who readily accepted.

The Howells were noted for their pride and poverty, and Jane was disliked among her acquaintances on account of her foolish airs and envious disposition. She had more than once circulated a story, which among those who were not acquainted with both parties, would reflect on the character of Louisa Mentor.
These two young ladies spoke when they met, but were not on the best of terms. Louisa had often condemned her deceitful, tattling disposition, and Henry had always coincided with her. Perhaps it was for this reason that he now had invited her to accompany him. He knew the feeling it would produce in the breast of the sensitive girl, and he thus cruelly revenged her.
When it was known throughout the village that Heywood had gone in company with Miss Howell, it opened the door for a good deal of gossip. A few who were envious of those whose characters stood higher than their own, were much delighted, and hoped it would tend to break up the match between the young man and Louisa, and these encouraged Henry. "I approve of your choice," said one. "She is much more accomplished than Miss Mentor," said another. "It is the best step you have taken for many a day," continued a third. These individuals were all of a meddlesome disposition, and the more unhappiness and misery they could produce, the better they enjoyed it.
Henry was unwise enough to consider them his friends and listen to what they said. He ceased to call on Louisa and was a constant visitor at Miss Howell's. When he heard of the death of her father, he was on the point of calling at the house—for he really loved the dutiful girl, and felt sensibly for her situation, being deprived of a kind parent—but self will predominated over his better nature and he yielded to his bad disposition.

The parents of Miss Howell did their utmost to please Henry, so that he might be induced to continue his visits and finally take their daughter for his companion. When he was present all was love, there was no unpleasant look or word
—every wish of his was gratified.

In the mean time Louisa looked on calmly and listened not a word against his love. The loss of a tender parent had filled her heart with grief, and the thought that her attention to his sick chamber had driven her friend away, gave her pain and sorrow indescribable. But she could not see that she had erred. She had but done her duty and so every one thought who knew the circumstances of the case.

A month or two passed by, and Henry was as attentive as ever to Jane, and it was settled in the minds of the neighbors that he was engaged to the naughty girl. The thought preyed deeply in the breast of the dutiful Louisa, but she suffered it not to interfere with duty. She bore it like a philosopher, and was determined whatever the result should be to submit without a murmuring word. There were peace and happiness in her cot. The thought of a devoted father and excellent husband who had been removed by death, would sometimes cause a feeling of sadness—but the mother and daughter looked to Him who gave and took away, and felt it was for the best. But when Louisa thought of the past—when she was happy in the society of Henry, and of his present alienated feelings, it made her sorrowful indeed. Save these hours of sadness none were happier than they—none had a better circle of friends—none lived more peacefully with their neighbors.
There were two or three young men in the village who would have esteemed it an honor to win the love and approbation of Miss Mentor, but she would encourage the visits of none, save those who called upon her as neighbors.

Heywood would often pass the home of Louisa,
with the vain Miss Howell hanging on his arm, while their conversation appeared to be deep and earnest. It was evident that Henry wished to be seen by Louisa, and make her feel regret for once refusing to accompany him on an excursion of pleasure. But she witnessed the young man's conduct without manifesting the least displeasure. She never moved aside to be unnoticed, or to make him feel that she was angry or regretted the step he had taken. She thought such a course would be for the best in the end whatever might be the consequences.
Miss Mentor continued her duties—slept as soundly as ever, and gave no one occasion to say, that the conduct of Henry had worn upon her spirits, or broken her heart.

One evening, Louisa attended a social party where Henry and Jane were present. They both took particular care to let her see their affection for each other; just as the reader has often seen two simpletons conduct when they thought they were made for each other, and had sworn eternal love. When the party broke up, in going home Louisa happened to be but a short distance behind the lovers. They were talking very earnestly, and did not seem to care if they were overheard.

"I wonder how Miss Louisa enjoyed herself to-night?" inquired Jane.
"I don't know, I'm sure," said Henry "she tried to appear cheerful, but I saw that she was not very pleasant."

"Perhaps she regrets her past course."
"She is a foolish girl, and I always knew it."
"It is certain she don't study her interest."
She will never get a husband; she was cut out for an old maid. No young man who thinks any thing of himself ever goes with her. She has been trying a long while to get one of the Goodings, or Charles Hamilton, to gallant her,

but they know better."

This was all the conversation Louisa heard;
it was enough to convince her, that she had lost nothing, when Heywood left her society for the society of another. It was so untrue that it pained her to the heart. But it did not trouble her long. She did not look alone to earth for perfect happiness.

The day was appointed for the union of Henry and Jane, and it was understood to be their intention to have a splendid wedding. A week previous to the celebration of the nuptials, a young man made his appearance in the neighborhood. He was dressed in the extreme of fashion and appeared to be in independent circumstances by the manner he expended money.
He had lately graduated from one of those prolific sources of dandyism, impudence and pauperism—a lawyer's office—and had come to the village to commence practice. He hired a room, and put up his sign, which was very neatly printed in gold letters. In looking round for a boarding house, he was introduced to Mr.
Howell, who took him into his family. It was said that the landlord's head was more erect than ever; he was honored by having a lawyer board at his house, and he mentioned the circumstance so often that the whole village was made acquainted with the fact in less than a week.

Mr. Edwards, the lawyer, had not been in Mr. Howell's house more than two days, before he was quite intimate with Jane, and when Henry called he was treated with a great deal of coolness.

"Father," said Jane one day in private,
"what must I do? I am engaged to Heywood, but have no affection for him, and Mr. Edwards, whom none could help loving, has offered me his hand. What shall I do?"

"By all means tell Henry your feelings towards him, and as he is a reasonable fellow, he will not censure you. Of course you need not mention the honor you have received from our distinguished boarder, the lawyer."

After thinking over the matter and conversing with Edwards, they concluded to drop a line to Henry. It was written by the lawyer and copied by Jane and sent forthwith.

Poor Heywood was thunderstruck. Though not accustomed to use harsh words he could not refrain, declaring at first that he would sue the girl for a breach of promise. But when cooled down a little he declared she was not worthy his attention—that he did not care a fig for her, and would return to his old friend Louisa—not doubting but that she would gladly accept of him—for notwithstanding his strange conduct he had really loved her.

The young men of the neighborhood laughed heartily at the affair, and said it was just right, as he had long before been so unkind to Miss Mentor, one of the best girls that lived in the village. No one sympathized with him, except his own relations, and even they declared it was a just punishment.

Few thought much of the lawyer. He was genteel, dressed well, talked loud, and knew a little more than everything. He was married to Jane in the course of a few months after his arrival in the village. Having no property, and business being dull, he was obliged to sponge his living out of the old gentleman. Howell was tired to death of supporting him, and he finally removed to another place with his wife.
They did not live very happy together, as the disposition of each were any thing but agreeable. The last heard from him was that he just made enough by his profession to keep his family from starving, and was disliked by every body on account of his biggishly behavior.

Full of hope Heywood went to the house of Mrs. Mentor; and was cordially received by Louisa. She was a young woman who never retaliated—and you could not tell by her conduct that she had ever been wronged by another.
After conversing on various topics for nearly an hour, Henry introduced the one that lay near his heart.

"I have thought a great deal of late, said he,
of the course I pursued towards you last summer. That I did wrong—was altogether too hasty I am free to confess."

"I always thought you were too hasty in the step you took, for my poor father was so unwell that I could not have a heart to leave him."

"Although we have hardly seen each other for many months past, for one I should be pleased to have that friendship renewed."

"I have never been otherwise than friendly to you; if you thought otherwise you have been mistaken."

"But I should be pleased to be on the same terms of intimacy."

"Henry, there is a serious objection to that;
I am now engaged to another."

"Is it possible?"

"It is so—and I expect shortly to be married to one who I have reason to believe loves me—who will never forsake me—will never prove treacherous."

Henry's heart was too full for utterance. He left the house after being kindly invited to call again, by Louisa and her mother, who, if they remembered the past, did not have any feelings of unkindness towards Heywood, nor did they wish to reproach him.

During the year there was a wedding at Mrs. Mentor's—Louisa, the sweet-tempered, amiable and lovely girl was united to James Eldwell, the village pastor—a young man of fine talents and consistent piety. A better match was never formed. A happier couple never lived. Poor Heywood was invited to the wedding, but he could not go. His imprudent step had sealed his fate and made him miserable.

From the day that Louisa was married Henry was an altered man—he was seldom seen in company, and always preferred to be alone. It was his practice to walk in retired places, where the voices and the footsteps of men were seldom heard. He had no associates, and said but little.
Apparently worn down by sorrow, he lived but a few years, and found that repose in the grave, which had been denied him on earth.

BURYING ALIVE.

During the session of the Royal Academy of Medicine, M. Chantournelle read a paper on the danger of hasty inhumations. This led to a discussion, in which M. Desguettes stated that he had heard from M. Thoreau, who had superintended the removal of the human remains of the cemetery and the charnel house Des Innocents, that many skeletons had been found in positions showing that the individuals had moved after their inhumation. M. Thoreau had been so much struck with this, that he had inserted in his will an article relating to his own interment. Many other cases were stated.

A woman in Paris was thought to be dead, and the body was put on some straw, with a taper at the feet. Some young men who sat up round the corpse, in a frolic overturned the taper, which sat the straw on fire. The deceased, whose body the flames now reached, uttered a piercing shriek. Timely assistance was rendered, and she so well recovered, that after her resurrection she became the mother of several children.

A surgeon of St. Come Hospital, in Paris, had a maid servant, who had three times been carried to burial. She did not recover her senses the last time until they were lowering the casket into the grave. That woman having died anew, she was kept six days, lest they should have to bring her back a fourth time.

An individual of Rouen, had married a young lady of fourteen, whom he left in perfect health at his starting on a short journey. After a few days he heard that unless he returned immediately, he would find his wife buried. On reaching home he found the funeral ready. In an agony of grief he had the coffin removed to his room and unscrewed. He placed the body upon the bed, and ordered twenty-five incisions to be made on it. At the twenty-sixth, probably deeper than the others, the deceased exclaimed, "How severely you hurt me!" Medical assistance was immediately given. The lady had afterwards twenty-six children.

The wife of a celebrated lawyer, having been supposed dead for twenty-four hours, the body was placed on a table, for the purpose of preparing it for burial. Her husband strongly opposed it, not believing her dead. To ascertain it, and knowing she was fond of the cymbal, and the tunes which cymbal players sing, he had one called. Upon hearing the instrument and the voice, the deceased recovered motion and speech. She survived her apparent death forty years.

The physician to the Grand Duke Nicholas, brother to the Emperor of Russia, relates that a young girl in the service of the Princess of —, who had for some time kept her bed with a nervous affection, at length, to all appearance was deprived of life. Her face had all the character of death—her body was perfectly cold and every other symptom of death was manifested. She was removed into another room and placed in a coffin. On the day fixed for her funeral, hymns, according to the custom of the country, were sung before the door; but at the very moment when they were going to nail down the coffin, a perspiration was seen upon her skin, and in a few moments it was succeeded by a convulsive motion in the hands and feet. In a few moments she opened her eyes and uttered a piercing scream. The faculty were instantly called in, and in the space of a few days her health was re-established.

The account which she gave of her situation is extremely curious. She said that she appeared to dream that she was dead, but that she was sensible to every thing that was passing around her; and distinctly heard her friends bemoaning her death; she felt them envelope her in the shroud and place her in the coffin.
This sensation gave her extreme agony, and she attempted to speak, but her soul was unable to act upon her body. She described her sensations as very contradictory, as if she was and was not in her body at one and the same instant. She attempted in vain to move her arms, to open her eyes, or to speak. The agony of her mind was at its height, when she heard the funeral hymn, and found that they were about to nail down the lid of the coffin.
The horror of being buried alive gave a new impulse to her mind, which resumed its power over its corporeal organization, and produced the effects which excited the notice of those who were about to convey her to a permanent grave.—European Magazine.

THE DAHLIA FLOWER.

"Paxton, on the culture of the Dahlia," an English work, and one of the best treatises in print on the subject, thus remarks:—"We are informed from indisputable authority, that this plant was first introduced into England from Spain, by the Marchioness of Bute, so early as 1789, but as it was not subsequently heard of it is supposed to have been lost shortly after this introduction. In 1804, accounts are recorded of seeds of this plant having been transmitted by Lady Holland from the Royal Gardens at Madrid to Mr. Buonaruti, then resident in this country."

Mr. Paxton adds, "The botanical name Dahlia, was first given to this genus in honor of Dahl, a Swedish botanist, by Cavanillus, a Spanish botanist, but the propriety of this having been disputed on account of its resemblance to Dalea, a name previously bestowed on a genus of a totally different nature, and more especially as the name of the genus under consideration is frequently but vulgarly pronounced Doglia."

"The Dahlia is a native of the high sandy plains of Mexico, where it was first discovered by that eminent and indefatigable botanist, Humboldt, five thousand feet above the level of the sea, but in what year we have no authentic accounts. There are three distinct species of the genus; D. coccinea, D. cernantesii and D.
variabilis; of which the two former are not now cultivated, as they do not readily sport into varieties and are much less beautiful than D.
variabilis.

Mr. E. Sayers says in his treatises on the culture of the genus—"The Dahlia adapts itself to more variations of soil and location in favorable seasons than any other family of plants that claim so general admiration. As a proof of this, we find it flourish in the impure air of a city equally as well as in the most salubricious air of the country, nor does a different kind of soil act so materially on its well-being as on many kinds of plants which are partial in their nature, and will only flourish in their peculiar soil and location. But should season prove unpropitious, the most unremitted and scientific exertions of the cultivator cannot counteract its effect on the flowering; although in some cases good culture will greatly assist the process. The most unpropitious season to the Dahlia in this climate is a long continuance of drought in the months of July and August."

"The Dahlia flourishes best in an open situation where it is not subject to the shade and drippings of trees or tall shrubs." It delights, says Paxton, in a position where it can constantly receive the vivifying and strengthening rays of the sun, from the time it issues forth in eastern glory, to the period of its setting below the western horizon.

Nothing is more simple than the cultivation of Dahlia roots. In March or April they will, if properly kept through the winter, begin to sprout around the old stem and tubers. To forward these sprouts in growth, the roots should be either buried in light earth, on the top of a moderate hot bed, or else potted and then set in a warm room or greenhouse and watered. As soon as the shoots have grown to the length of two or three inches, the roots may be divided in such a manner as to have a good strong shoot attached to a piece of the tuber or old stem; each of these will, if properly managed, make a plant. Let the ground be well pulverized and enriched with good old manure, before the plants are set out; if the top soil be shallow, and the subsoil inferior, it would be beneficial to the plants, if holes be dug to the depth of from a foot to eighteen inches, and then replenished with good rich compost, consisting of two thirds fresh loam and one third of well rotted manure; plant the roots two inches deep. It is the opinion of many cultivators that the first of June, in the middle and northern States, may be considered a proper time for planting the roots.

The method for dividing the roots is, to take a sharp knife and divide the crown of the roots in such a manner that an eye or two, with the tubers, is preserved with each intended plant.

The principal thing to be considered in preserving the roots of the Dahlia, is, the preparing them in a proper manner in the fall, which is rarely done. In many cases the roots are taken from the ground in a growing state before the tubers are matured, and consequently they are much shrivelled. On the other hand, roots are left in the ground oftentimes too late,
and become frozen; and consequently are partially rotten before being taken into winter quarters.
The object should be to have the roots well matured and ripened previous to taking them from the ground for winter quarters.

A very easy and good method is to take up the roots, cut off the stalks about one foot from the crown and dry them; then dig a pit in a dry sandy situation secure from the frost; the roots may then be carefully placed in the bottom of the pit, some dry sand placed over them.
In this situation the roots may remain to the time of parting for planting, when they may be treated as directed above.

MISCELLANY.

THE SON'S WIFE.

'I know we shan't like her,' said Aunt Sarah, decisively, putting her knitting needle in its sheath; 'her mother was queer before her, and every body knows the Stapletons are an odd set. A mechanic's daughter too!'

'But what have you against them?' asked the brother of the intended bride-groom, standing up against the whole host; 'is she ill-bred, or no housekeeper, or a dunce, or extravagant, or a woman of ill-regulated temper?'

'Well, I don't know, but I've heard she had nothing to boast of in the way of manners,' said Aunt Sarah.

'And I don't believe she's a housekeeper; who ever knew one of your prodigies that was?' said another.

'Then she is a prodigy,' said the brother; but the storm went on regardless of his remark.

'She has no common sense, in spite of her romance,' said one.

'She'll spend twice Tom's income,' said another, raising her voice.

'She's no doubt a scold, for what thin body isn't?' said another, in a voice more shrill.

'And as proud as Lucifer,' chimed in a sixth in a yet higher key.

'And Tom will get enough of love and Mary Stapleton before six months, if she's the coquette I've heard,' said the last, with a shrill intonation, that rose over the din of the battle. Tom's brother smiled, and to avoid the tempest he could not allay he darted out of the room.

Mary Stapleton lived in a country village, but mingled little in its gossiping society, for there were few there with whom she could sympathize. When we say that she was good looking, if not beautiful; of singularly amiable disposition and gentle manners; well informed, graceful, accomplished, and of talents above mediocrity, we have told why she was loved by young Irvine, or as his family familiarly called him—'Our Tom'—the most desirable match in the village. His father, who was now dead, had been a judge, and possessing much property, had been looked up to by the neighborhood as the great man of the county. Most of the females of the family gave themselves airs in consequence, for, by a singular fatality, all the daughters of Judge Irvine partook rather of the mother's vain and shallow character than of the truly estimable disposition of the father—his strong common sense and liberal views having descended to his sons, as if these traits, to use his own expression, 'had been entailed on his heirs male.' The Stapletons were a family of mechanics time out of mind, and therefore beneath the notice of the Irvines, so that when young Irvine began visiting the daughter, a hubbub ensued, the like of which had not been known since Irvineville was built. The young man had an obstinate habit of having his own way, and the sly innuendos of his sisters and aunts, and even one or two attacks from his lady mother, failed to have any effect on him. He still visited Mary Stapleton, and at length announced his approaching marriage with her.

The conclave of aunts and sisters and other relatives, who always constituted a sort of committee of advice on such occasions, was thunderstruck. Marry Mary Stapleton—the thing was preposterous! To visit her was bad enough; but to make her his wife—why, the blood of the Irvines would cry out against it, and it was questionable whether their knightly ancestors could thereafter sleep quietly in their coffins. A grand sabbathday was summoned, to which the offender's brother was invited, and the result we have seen. No one thought of remonstrating with the young man, for all knew the determination which formed the most striking part of his character, and they were, therefore, fain to content themselves with finding fault with the intended bride; and since not one knew anything against her, this was no very difficult task.

They were married. Now, as Mrs. Irvine prided herself on her politeness, she announced that all the outward forms of civility must be bestowed on the bride, though none were required to pay any further attentions, or to throw any real warmth of manner into the courtesies with which they received Tom's wife. The widow's word was law, and accordingly the whole family went in due form to the wedding. It was very generally understood, however, that no one was to like the son's wife if any decent reason to the contrary could be found in her looks, education or deportment.

A round of parties ensued, for the Irvines were determined to outdo the Stapletons, and they resolved, therefore, to give a nightly succession of what they called 'crushers,' before the other side would have a chance to put in their claims. The wedding had been on Thursday, and on Monday the Irvines began. Whenever the Stapletons could be decently omitted, they were not invited, but at Mrs. Irvine's it was impossible not to have the bride's parents and sisters. So, at Mrs. Irvine's a regular attack was to be made on the Stapletons, in order to expose their ignorance and ill-breeding.

'A song from the bride!' said one in the secret, as soon as the piano was opened. Now it was generally understood among the Irvines that the bride could not play, and the best performer of their party was, on the bride declining, to astound the Stapletons. But the bride ignorantly threw consternation among her enemies by quietly sitting down at the instrument and performing in a style which set all competition at defiance.

'How beautiful!' was the involuntary exclamation extorted even from those who envied her most. 'I had no idea she understood music, and so thoroughly,' said one. 'Where could she have learned it?' said another. 'But we will ask her to play on the harp tomorrow evening,' said a third. 'What a pity Mrs. Irvine hasn't the instrument, or we might see the Stapletons discomfited to night!'

To-morrow night came, and with it a party at a sister's of the late Judge Irvine. It was known that Mrs. Seymour had the only harp in the village, consequently it was impossible the bride knew how to play on the instrument.

We shall not attempt to paint the astonishment of the conspirators when she walked composedly to the harp and played a very difficult piece, accompanying it with her voice. An involuntary burst of delight testified the opinions of the company, the male portion of which, not being in the secret of the plot, did not fail to express approbation.

'Where did your sister learn the harp?' asked one of the Irvines.

'She spent two years in Philadelphia,' was the quiet answer.

Every evening during the week some new attempt was made to unmask, as the conspirators said, the want of breeding and accomplishments in the son's wife; but each trial met with signal disappointment; and at the end of the marriage festivities, even the heads of the plot were forced to confess that the bride was a most accomplished lady, and that even her family were wonderfully well informed for the descendants of mechanics.

But prejudice is always stubborn. The little clique which determined to put down the son's wife still insisted that she was extravagant and that, however talented she might be, she needed that practical sense which is most valuable to the ordinary duties of life. Her demeanor in her new capacity of housewife was keenly scrutinized, and the transactions at the son's house became daily the subject of gossip at the elder Mrs. Irvine's. But even envy and prejudice combined could find nothing to blame, and before many weeks the conspirators began to grow heartily ashamed of themselves.

'Well,' at length said Aunt Sarah to the elder Mrs. Irvine, 'I do say, that I never saw a neater house than Mary's is, and from what Tom says they make a little go a great ways. I'm beginning to think there's something in them Stapletons after all.'

Mrs. Irvine was silent for some time, but at length looked up from her work. 'I don't find any fault with her, and I can't say I ever did. I had my suspicions that Tom had been taken in, but I've found that he knew better than we what kind of a wife Mary would make. You know I told you all from the first that she was to be treated with due politeness as my daughter-in-law.'

Notwithstanding this full admission, it had been long before the mother-in-law could be brought to acknowledge her new daughter's merits; but her prejudices had at length given away before the sweetness and many virtues of her son's wife. After this acknowledgment it was wonderful how quickly the rest of the family saw the worth of the young wife; and, indeed, in the short space of a year from this time, she became the oracle, in all matters of taste especially, to the young Irvines.

The son never alluded to the subject but once in their presence, when he said, 'And so, Aunt Sarah, you thought I was throwing myself away when I married; do you think so now?'

Aunt Sarah and the rest of the council looked down and were silent.

"ENCOURAGE YOUR OWN."

We must "live and learn," my dear, said Franklin Q—to his young wife, when he saw her bemoaning a new coffee-pot melted down on the hot stove. She never forgot her impression on seeing the brilliant article leaning first like the tower of Pisa, and then sinking into obscurity, like a rich man retiring from business to become a mere shining lump of ruins; nor did she forget the remark. Neither was she less mindful of another favorite sentiment of her Franklin:—"Economy is so legibly written on all the works of creation, it is a virtue which no one should despise."

Every opportunity that offered for the exercise of this virtue was duly improved. The cellar-door never opened without exhibiting an evidence of it—for behind it hung a huge memento in the shape of a rag bag, of about a bushel capacity—an open receptacle for every little shred of cloth. Now and then it would receive a larger deposit in the shape of an old dress which had undergone the mutations of fashion as well as sundry rents from the door catch—and having become too fragile by frequent ablutions, was in consequence passed to this "last depository of all things"—cotton. These last deposits, however, were not usually made in a moment—nor always without a sigh. The recollections of its good fit—its once bright colors—where it had been worn, &c., all seemed to plead that it might once again renew its age in a bed covering. It is brought to the test—"it won't bear quilting," is the verdict, and is consigned to its resting place.

In the course of a year the ponderous bag gradually fills to overflowing; and as true economy does not consist in hoarding up, but rather in turning every thing to the best account, Lucy is on a look-out for a market for her stock. There is a rap at the door.

'Do you want to buy any tin ware, marm?'

'Believe not to-day—have more now than we like to keep bright.'

'But I have some of the best you ever saw—all made by machinery, and cheap as dirt. Just look at this cake box—all planished tin, "What do you ask for it?'

'Only a dollar, in rags—or cash, seventy-five cents.'

At the sound of the rags, the long collecting stock comes over her mind—and the cake-box being a desirable article, she concludes to take it, and the rag bag is hung in the pedlar's stead-wards.

'Just twenty pounds, marm;—at a cent and half a pound they come to thirty cents. So I want seventy cents to make us square.'

The burden of the rag bag was removed from her mind, and the shining purchase was before her—so the seventy cents were paid without much calculation, and after answering in the negative the inquiry—"Nothing else, marm?" he departed to gather up all the rags in the neighborhood.

Lucy closed the door, placed her purchase in the closet, and hung up the empty rag bag for re-filling.

When Mr. Franklin Q—had seated himself by the fireside that evening, conning over as usual the events of the day, he remarked—

'I think, Lucy, I have received a lesson to-day, which will make me more careful hereafter.'

Well, Frank, you know we must "live and learn," so let me hear what it is.

When I was sitting at my desk to-day making out bills, a Jew travelling merchant came in and offered me "some superior steel pens of his own importation," as he said, at nine shillings a gross. I thought I could not get them cheaper of an importer, and so I took a gross. A few hours after I chanced to step into a store near Market Square, and who should I see but the same Jew merchant packing up a dozen boxes of pens he had just purchased! But what made me feel bad was to learn that the fellow had to pay only seventy-five cents per gross for them.

What! said Lucy, did you pay the Jew double price for importing only from Market square to your shop?'

I did so, indeed, but will never do it again, that's certain; and the only way to be secure from such knaves, is to make a rule, which you may write down and stick up over your mantel-piece:—

Never to purchase an article of a travelling pedlar which can be obtained at a regular store.

There must be one exception to this rule, Frank—I must add—'Except when we pay in old rags.'

Better not add it, Lucy; sooner burn your rags.'

Burn my rags? why where is your economy, Frank? I guess you will think rags are of some value when you see what I have purchased with them to-day.

(The closet now opened and the cake-box makes its appearance.) Do you think now our rags are of no value.

Mr. Q—was a little abashed, and was almost disposed to accede to the exception. How many pounds of rags did you give, my dear for that splendid affair?'

The price was one dollar in rags, or seventy-five cents in cash. As I wanted to trade away the rags I concluded to pay for it in that way. They weighed twenty pounds; not quite so much as I expected, and so I paid him seventy cents to make up the dollar.

And so, Lucy, he has got your rags for less than a quarter of a cent per pound, if his price of the article is right—but its real value at our town shops is only fifty cents. So you see that you have not only given your rags away, but twenty cents beside! Now is it not better to burn your rags than deal with a pedlar?'

You are right, Frank, I will stick up the motto without any exceptions. But I can't consent to burn the rags; I'll tell you what I will do—If you will set down and with one of your Jew pens write a letter to the Printer, warning every body not to deal with travelling pedlars, you may say in it that Mrs. Lucy Q—will send him all her old rags for five years. Tell him to put in great capitals have no dealings with pedlars. Also begin it and end it with saying, what every body should practice—"encourage your own."

GEESSE VS. LAW.

Miser skintint was a shrewd, money lending yankee. He was one of those men who are their own lawyers, and as soon as a debt arrived at maturity, if not paid, he would fill a writ and have it served forthwith, with orders to attach any thing the officer could get hold of. Yet, though bold in his movements, he was by nature timid, and might be readily frightened.

Mr. Williams was one day sitting in his office smoking a cigar, when a client entered, looking like the shadow of starvation.

'Square,' said he, 'I'm a ruined man. Miser Skintint has taken all I'm worth in the world. The darned cut-throat has got all my geese.'

Now the attorney was a fat, jolly sor of mirth, and, with twinkling eye he promised to get the geese back again. He sat down to his desk and wrote the following note:—

'Mr. Skintint, Sir: If you would avoid consequences of the most terrible character, you will call at my office without an hour's delay. Yours, etc, JOHN WILLIAMS.'

The note had not been written but about half an hour, when Mr. Skintint called.

'How d'ye do 'Square?'

'Mr. Skintint, your servant, sir,' responded the attorney, looking very sedate.

'I've just got this letter, 'Square. What's the matter?'

'Matter enough, Mr. Skintint. You have attached Mr. Jones' geese, haven't you?'

'Sartin; but what ain't agin the law, is it?'

'Against the law! Why sir, you have subjected yourself to heavy damages for the false imprisonment of these geese. Are you not aware sir, that they are exempt from attachment?'

'Dew tell! now you're jokin, 'Square. I've read the Statute Book purty snug, and I haint found that 'ere.'

'Statute Book, Mr. Skintint! Why sir, it's common law.'

'Wall, now, you know of course, 'Square, and I'll send the crittur's back. But just tell me how long it's been common law.'

'Why ever since the cackling of geese saved Rome. The Romans then passed an act that they should be sacred from legal process, and they call it common law to distinguish it from their other statutes, which was very uncommon ones.'

'I'm satisfied, 'Square. You'll never catch me in this scrape, again. As I said afore, the critturs shall go back.'

And so they did. This is no fiction, but a fact with the exception of names.

DEBATING SOCIETY.

'I move that the question be read.' Secretary reads—'Which is the truest science, mesmerism or phrenology?'

'Mr. President: The question has neither negative nor affirmative.'

'President—No matter—Dr. Jiggs for mesmerism—Captain Jewkes for phrenology.'

'Mr. Stunder—I would ask, Mr. President, if the question does not entrench itself against the constitution? We are not to discuss religion or politics in this society; now, free knowledge is a sectarian pint, and if we are agoin' to discuss that, I shall withdraw from this society.'

'President—The word has a different meaning in the question, and has allusion to the protuberant developments of the cranium.'

'Stump—All this is outer order, there ain't no question afore the meetin'.'

'President—Dr. Jiggs, will you open?'

'Dr. Jiggs—Mr. President: I have not entered these walls this evening, prepared to speak on this question; I—ur—rah—am ur—rah—in favor of mesmerism, as I understand it. Mesmerism is a kind of somnolence, and is mentioned by Tycho Brahe, when he said, "Blessed be that man who invented sleep."

Under the magnetic influence of mesmeric sleep man has travelled through the abstruse regions of—of—Mr. President—the chimerical atmosphere of the most unbounded metaphysical incongruities; he has analyzed time and space, and soared into the mysteries of ease and existence, like—like—like—anything! My opponent will, no doubt, extend his ferocious month against my argument, but, sir, my argument is based on the experiments of Collyer, and the philosophy of Dods! Sir, I say, sir, mesmerism is the key which oversets the dipnet of time, and discloses to human visiology the intricacies of miraculous interpositions.

But phrenology, sir, what is it? the child of gall and bitterness. It maps out the human skull like a terrestrial globe, and its professors, to keep good the resemblance, have whirled their brains on their axes, and exquaintedly their exuberances on the oxipital and piratical bones. I reserve my remaining remarks for the rejoinder.'

President—'Captain Jewkes.'

'Jewkes—I ain't prepared to say nothin' on this question—at least—no—but then sence I hear the doctor, I would say a few words on the ideas chalked down here on my hat. Phrenology is the science of the knowledge box, and knowledge is free; hence phrenology. But mesmerism is the science of sleep. It says that one man can put another to sleep; so can opium. It deceives man then to the level of a pisonous drug. My antagonist has made use of a great many long words, and his speech would go twice around the world and tie.'

'Stump—I call the cap'n to order for personalities.'

'Jewkes—'Didn't the doctor call my mouth ferocious? Retaliation is the first law of nature. He needn't say nothing about mouth! Jest look at his, Mr. President, it goes clean round, and makes the top of his cranny-um, as he calls it, an island. Mesmerism and its supporters are humbugs, sir—yes, sir, humbugs, sir. They pick out a sleepy-headed fat boy, who drops asleep of himself, and pretend that they willed it, when they couldn't a helped it if they tried. I conclude, sir, by moving the question.'

'President—'Those in favor of mesmerism, hands up—14. Phrenology, hands up—14; a tie. Gentlemen, you have decided that one science is just as true as the other. The society is 'journd.'

PRINTING.

Go into one of our civic Printing Offices, from which is daily leaping forth the bright impress of mind in characters that shall never fade or die. Behold the swift winged Mercuries of the Press visiting every Temple of science, every edifice from which knowledge can impart its stores, gathering it together, and sending it forth anon to the thousands of minds in each one of whom it is immortal. There is more to astonish the mind itself, much more, in one of these printing offices, than in the catacombs of Egypt, the Sable Magi of the East, the Sages of Antiquity, or the hidden oracles of Delphi—these morning and evening sheets, going forth abroad into the world, assimilating mind with mind, in spite of distance, mountains or intervening seas. Here, then, in the "art preservative of all arts," do we find the germ, the elements, the living materials of earthly history, and the triumph of mind over matter.

God was the first Printer! He gave from his awful hand, amid the blackness of Sinai, the Tables of Stone, on which was printed the mind of God! The decalogue of all moral law, the claims of man upon man, and God upon all.

Printing! the art that shall hand down to latest years, to remotest posterity, to innumerable millions yet unborn to God, the thoughts of men who are living now; of men who lived centuries since; they defy time, and the printed transcripts of these men shall live, too full of soul to be put into the same grave with their perishable bodies. It was a bright thought of that author, who in his dying moments, was just able to ask if the proof of his last work was corrected—"all corrected?" "Yes, all." "Then I shall have a complete edition in glory."—J. N. Moffitt.

A GOOD OMEN.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

"No, I'll take him with me," said a second. He was led away by the little boy with the glads, the rest of the children following, happy as could be, in the prospect of redeeming the poor man from the misery of intemperance habits.

I blessed the dear children in my heart, and prayed to God to bless their efforts.

IMPORTANT FOREIGN NEWS. The steamer Columbia arrived at Boston, on Tuesday morning last, bringing intelligence sixteen days later than by previous arrivals.

The names selected for the infant princess, are Alice Maud Mary, names thoroughly English. It has recently been discovered in Liverpool, that the Americans have been attempting to introduce a spurious article under the name of "lard oil," which consists of sixty-six per cent. sperm oil, and only thirty-four of lard oil. The reason is this: the new duty on sperm oil under the tariff is twenty-five per cent; that on lard oil is merely ad valorem.

Ireland absorbs at the present moment, the exclusive attention of the British Ministry and the British people. The Repeal movement continues to make the most gigantic strides, the whole country is in a feverish state of excitement, and O'Connell, after visiting Cork and various parts of Ireland, has returned to Dublin. During his sojourn in the provinces, hundreds of thousands of his countrymen congregated at his beck, and his progress resembled a continuous ovation from his outset until his return.

He addressed them, on every occasion, in the most inflammatory strain, condemnatory of the British connection, while he poured out the most unmeasured vituperation and ridicule against Sir Robert Peel, the Duke of Wellington, and Lord Brougham. The great bulk of the Catholic clergy have thrown themselves heartily into the movement, the rent comes pouring in by thousands of pounds per week, and all classes seem to regard a crisis at hand.

Some Roman Catholic Bishops are about to prepare a prayer for the safety of Daniel O'Connell. The troops stationed in Ireland will amount, in June, to 25,000 men.

Almost every door in the city of Cork has chalked upon it "Repeal or Blood!" O'Connell will not leave Ireland to attend his Parliamentary duties before the 10th of June. Earl de Grey has officially intimated that his lordship has, for the present, abandoned his intention of quitting the seat of government.

All the Irish forts, castles and battlements, have been inspected by a government engineer, and ordered to be repaired and placed in a state of perfect utility. Indeed, the preparations of government are such as would indicate that civil war is not far distant.

At the Dublin Corn Exchange, as a set off against the superabundance issued by the Chancellor, ten barristers headed by Sir Colman O'Leighlin, son of the late master of the rolls, subscribed to the Repeal Association, and were by acclamation admitted as members. This har-motion caused a great sensation.

Scotland, has been the scene of a religious movement, the most important in its consequences, the most extended in its ramifications, which has taken place since the time of the Reformation. Nearly five hundred ministers—the heart's blood of the Church, embracing all that are most distinguished for learning, talent, and energy—have seceded from the Kirk, and thrown themselves upon the voluntary principle, rather than submit to an interference in matters of discipline with the civil power.

China. The death of Commissioner Eleboe was the only news at Canton, but fresh attacks were expected on the factories. On Mayor Malcomb's arrival, Sir H. Pottinger was to go to Canton with the ratification of the Treaty.

The rebuilding of Point Petre, (Gaudaloupe) with iron houses, as affording the best security against earthquakes, is said to be seriously contemplated by the French Government.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1843.

John A. Green, Editor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Boston, June 22d, 1843.

FRIEND GREEN—The patriotic celebration of the battle of Bunker's Hill, fought 17th June, 1775, and completion of the Monument, 17th June, 1843, was consummated most gloriously on Saturday last. At break of day, the roar of cannon from the forts, navy and every hill-top was heard, welcoming the auspicious morn, in remembrance of that day which said, in tones of thunder, "America shall be free!" The morn was serene, the air pure and invigorating, and the bright sun rose in splendor over the tri-mountain city, already animated with thousands of American freemen, who had arrived to participate in the glorious celebration. At an early hour the citizens were roused from their slumbers by the tramp of artillery, infantry and mounted troops, marching in every direction to the inspiring sounds of martial music. Every road, bridge, and avenue, as far as the eye could see, from an elevated spot, were full of crowded vehicles, pouring into Boston. The stars and stripes from every spire on land, and every mast on the water, floated majestically and triumphantly in unison, and tended greatly to enliven the scene, and inspire the bosom of every freeman with lofty reverence for those who fell on that memorable day, and the institutions for which they gave "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors" to perpetuate. Let foreigners talk of the "Gala days of France," and the "Carnivals of Rome"; what are they to be compared with such an occasion as this, when not only every heart is made happy with merriment, but at the same time consecrates to liberty a noble structure that shall stand till every vestige of tyranny and oppression are driven from our soil—may perhaps till the pyramids of Egypt shall be no more!

The day was such an one as every person present desired. On Friday, the 16th, a heavy rain commenced, which lasted till night, laying the dust, cooling the atmosphere, and making every thing agreeable for the successful consummation of the primitive design. The President and his suite were received by the Mayor of our city, Friday morning, at Roxbury line, where brief addresses were interchanged; after which, they were escorted by a splendid regiment of soldiers under Col. Bigelow, through the principal streets, to the President's rooms at the Tremont House.

Should I attempt to give you an outline of the various incidents that occurred during the immortal seventeenth, I fear that your paper would be of little benefit, but to those who are interested in the termination of the celebration, at this late hour; therefore, I will be brief as possible, and give you such information as I am possessed of, in a condensed form.

Every thing being favorable, the military companies and civic associations, were enabled to form in season, without any interruption. Never did Boston Common look more beautiful; and never did the military of any country make a more imposing appearance, or more delightful display of discipline and ingenious manoeuvres than the military escort filling into the line, 17th June, 1843. The variegated colors of their splendid uniforms shone brightly; every sword and bayonet glistened in the brilliant sun; and their glittering banners unfolded and waving gracefully in the morning breeze, and the white spirited chargers of the cavalry, and mounted officers galloping "from camp to camp," gave the "armed host" more of the appearance of being composed of "fairy warriors," than of the hardy sons of New England and New York.

The military and civic column took up their line of march from the Common about ten o'clock, in the same order and through the same route as published in the programme. The military escort, under Major General Howe, was composed of one corps of cavalry, twelve companies of artillery, and forty-six companies of light infantry and riflemen.

The civic portion of the procession embraced the President of the United States and suite, the Governor of the Commonwealth and suite, civil and military, Governor of Rhode Island and suite, judges of the state and national courts, and other officers of the civil law, officers of the army and navy, principal officers of the customs, commander of the revenue cutters, judges of other states, officers of Harvard College, the clergy, both branches of the Legislature, municipal officers of Charlestown and Boston, King Solomon's and other lodges of masons, Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association, New England Society of New York, Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Charitable Irish Society, Benevolent Tailor's Society, Andover Theolog. School, Mechanic Apprentices' Library Association, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Roman Catholic Mutual Relief Society, St. Mary's Catholic Temperance Society, St. Mary's Mutual Benevolent Catholic Total Abstinence Society, Irish Protestant Mutual Relief Society, and members of the Bunker Hill Monument Association.

There were also one hundred and twelve revolutionary soldiers, in carriages, in this portion of the procession.

Among these revered remains of the gallant bands who fought, not for military glory, but for human right and eternal principles of justice, there were twelve who, on the 17th of June, 1775, drove back like chaff before the blast, the stern battalions of Britain's bravest troops, upon the very ground on which they had now met to celebrate the 68th anniversary of the battle. The eldest of these venerable men was Mr. Phineas Johnson, aged 97. There were also present, three who were in the battle of Lexington, viz: Jonathan Harrington, 95; Alpheus Bigelow, 85; and Levi Harrington, 83 years of age.

What with the movements of the military, the galloping from point to point of the well-equipped marshals, the waving of the countless banners of the different societies, and the dense mass of citizens congregated and arranged in the most perfect order, the spectacle on the hill, between the monument and the reception pavilion, was imposing, interesting, and inspiring beyond the power of description. But the most brilliant feature of the whole was presented on the glacis at the base of the monument, on which were seated thousands and thousands of the fair daughters of New England, whose resplendent charms, fanned by the breeze, reflected back upon the bright heavens above the glowing tints, kindled by the genial and tempered rays of the mid-day sun, which seemed to rest suspended over the scene, as if it constituted a part of the glorious pageant.

All the arrangements were carried into effect with admirable regularity; and at twenty minutes before two, the Hon. Daniel Webster, the orator of the day, after prayers had been offered up by the Rev. Mr. Ellis, advanced to the front of the platform, and commenced his oration, which is very highly spoken of by the press, and those who had the pleasure of hearing it delivered.

After the oration, Mr. Webster passed congratulations with the revolutionary soldiers, and other distinguished guests on the platform. The chief marshal ordered the procession to be formed, which was done in good order and returned to the city over Charles River Bridge.

At twenty minutes before seven o'clock, the members of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, the President of the United States and the heads of departments who accompanied him to this city, with about one thousand other gentlemen, sat down to an entertainment got up with much taste and elegance in Faneuil Hall.

J. T. Buckingham, Esq., President of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, presided, at a table erected on the platform at the head of the hall. On his right, the President of the United States was seated, on his left, Daniel Webster, the orator of the day. On the right of the President sat Hon. Henry H. Childs, Lieutenant Governor of the State, Hon. Abel P. Upshur, Secretary of the Navy, Hon. Charles A. Wickliffe, Postmaster General, Hon. Caleb Cushing, Ambassador to China, Commodore Nicholson, Col. Henderson, commander of the marine corps at this station, and Col. Watson. On the left of Mr. Webster, the Mayor of the city, Martin Brimmer, Esq., Rev. George E. Ellis, chaplain of the day, Hon. John C. Spencer, Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. J. M. Porter, Secretary of War, and Governor Fenner of Rhode Island. At a table running parallel with the one which we have been describing, we noticed the French and Spanish consuls, Robert Tyler, Esq., John Tyler, Jr., ex-Governor King of Maine, Hon. Rufus Choate, and other distinguished gentlemen.

At twenty minutes past eight, the cloth was removed, and toasts, songs and speeches became the order of the evening till all became fatigued with the entertainments, and the many interesting exercises in which they had participated, when they closed the great celebration with a patriotic toast.

The whole affair was brilliant throughout and passed off with success to the gratification of over one hundred thousand citizens who were present.

But now I must turn from the bright side of the scene, to record a melancholy event connected in some degree with the seventeenth. "In the midst of life we are in death." The martial music that sounded so delightfully while the procession was marching to Bunker's heights had not ceased; the stars and stripes had not been removed ere the notes of death were sounded on the breeze and the flags placed at half mast, occasioned by the death of one of America's most distinguished sons—I mean the Hon. Hugh S. Legare, Attorney General of the United States, and acting Secretary of State, who died at the residence of a friend in this city, on Tuesday morning at seven o'clock. He was one of the President's suite, but did not accompany him until he reached New York. The President was detained here beyond his intended time, to attend his funeral, which took place Wednesday morning. His remains were placed in the vault of Trinity Church.

The President and suite left Boston Wednesday afternoon, direct for Washington. Respectfully, yours, GEORGE S.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, June 23d, 1843.

Truly, the past seven days have been prolific in events here, joyous and mournful. The celebration of the completion of the monument on Bunker Hill on the memorable seventeenth of June, 1843, will be matter of history and cannot pass into oblivion. It is estimated that 200,000 human beings were in Boston on that day, and that the procession of some 100,000 people was two miles long. The good order and quiet every where exhibited in our streets speak in exalted language of the morals of the people. Thousands of ladies and gentlemen stood on the side walks as the procession passed without the least annoyance, and those who paid fifty cents for the privilege of gazing out of a second story window, discovered when it was too late, that the side walk was the more enviable place of the two. To the temperance cause more than any other, must be attributed the praise for that order, quiet and universal decency that were exhibited among the mighty congregated mass of men, women and children, that pervaded Boston and Charlestown on the memorable day in question. Twenty years and what changes! Then, a public celebration like this would inevitably end with hundreds in beastly drunkenness and crime. Every police officer would be in requisition and our prisons filled to overflowing; now contrast the difference with the morals of the people, and if there is cause for congratulation, give God rather than man the praise. Total abstinence from the use of intoxicating drinks was the talisman of that extraordinary quiet and decorum that reigned in our midst on Saturday last.

The President looked extremely well, and was every where received here with that courtesy and hospitality that distinguish Bostonians. He bore the honors that were heaped upon him with great modesty and good sense, and has left a favorable impression on the public mind. President Tyler is still in the prime of life, being but fifty-three years old in March last, and may well be called from his popularity in his native state for thirty years past, (having commenced his public career at the age of twenty-two), a "noble Virginian." A pleasing incident occurred while the procession moved down State Street. A lady from the balcony of the old State House threw a bouquet of flowers to President Tyler, which with his usual good fortune, he was successful in obtaining; the President received this beautiful emblem of regard with the most lively acknowledgements, as who of our sterner sex would not? In consequence of fatigue and exposure, the President was quite unwell on Monday night last, and did not attend an evening party given by the Hon. David Henshaw, at No 2, Hamilton Place. The heads of department and a large number of distinguished gentlemen were however present. Mr. Henshaw on the occasion did honor to himself and guests. The democracy of our whole country are beginning to appreciate the talents of this gifted son of New England, and if report speaks true he will soon be called to some high station of honor and trust in the service of his country. He is worthy of any office—we have not a better read scholar or writer on political science in Massachusetts than Mr. Henshaw.

The sudden death of the Hon. Hugh S. Legare, Attorney General and acting Secretary of State of the United States, which took place on Tuesday morning last from a brief illness by cholera, produced a deep feeling of melancholy here. Mr. Legare was I believe but little rising forty years, was a resident of Charlestown, (S. C.) and unmarried, leaving, as I learn, a beloved sister his nearest relative. Since your last, there have also deceased Judge William Simmons, of the Boston Police Court, aged 61; C. A. Andrews, Esq., well known as a Representative from Salem, an excellent man; also, Benjamin Lynde Oliver, Esq., a lawyer of handsome talents and an antiquarian in learning. Hon. Barker Burnell, Representative in Congress from the Nantucket District, died at Washington last week, aged 45. All of these were gentlemen of worth and eminence. These are some of death's doings for the week past and are solemn admonitions.

Mr. Burnell was at twenty-two years of age a member of the Legislature: afterwards of the Congress which framed the present Constitution of Massachusetts, and in 1839 an influential Delegate to the Harrisburg Convention. He lived the life and died the triumphant death of a christian. His death makes a fourth vacancy in our Congressional Delegation.

Mr. Webster, the American Demosthenes, was rather unwell on Saturday, but delivered his address on Bunker Hill, fully sustaining his high reputation as a scholar and statesman. The address has been published.

The seventeenth of June passed away, with very few casualties. A boy at the north end lost his eyes by the explosion of an indian cracker in his face. Ten thousand passengers were transported on a section of one hundred miles of the Eastern Railroad by day and night of Saturday, without the slightest accident. One train alone brought one thousand passengers from Lowell at one trip.

The Boston Times of Thursday, in speaking of the President, says:

"The President and suite departed yesterday at four in the afternoon, en route for Washington by the way of the Worcester and Norwich Railroad. There was no parade of escort on the occasion, in accordance with his particular request,—for the decrease of the late and lamented Legare had cast a gloom over the whole party, and rendered any such display unsuited to the afflictive circumstances by which they were surrounded.

For some time previous to the departure of the cars an immense concourse of the friends of the President and his party assembled at the Depot, and took their farewell leave. As the cars started, the enthusiasm of the people could not be repressed, and six tremendous cheers were given in honor of the President of the United States, to which he gracefully returned his acknowledgements.

Thus has he left us, and we cannot refrain from remarking that he, in common with his sons and the members of his Cabinet, has left behind many warm friends, who have become endeared to him by his suavity and amiability of manner, his good heart, and general private and public worth. The impression that the visit of John Tyler has made in this community is one which will outlive all the mutations of politics, and forever abide in the hearts of the people.

SWINDLING. Two collectors of grease and ashes, were arraigned before a Justice of the Peace, at Newton Upper Falls, on Monday last, on charge of cheating certain women, in the weight of soap. It was made to appear, as we learn from the Boston Atlas, that they purchased three bushels of ashes of a lady, for which they were to return a pound of soap for each bushel, but returned only two thirds of the weight due; to some others of whom they purchased, they paid in about the same proportion. They were fined two dollars and costs, from which decision they appealed, and procured bonds to the amount of fifty dollars, for their appearance at the September term, at Cambridge. Look out for these gentlemen, ladies; for to have your ashes pressed down, then heaped up, and not receive but two thirds of your weight in soap, is impoverishing you, and enriching them a little too fast these times.

GRATIFYING FACTS. By the returns received at the late meeting of the State Washingtonian Society, it appears that Brookline is the banner town of the state, having nine hundred and twenty tectotallers out of a population of 1173. Needham ranks next to Brookline. Thus old Norfolk County contains the two strongest tectotal towns in the State. This result is not so surprising however, when it is known that these towns contain two such champions in the cause, as S. A. Walker of Brookline, and E. K. Whitaker of Needham.

PRESERVATION OF FLOWERS, ETC. Whale oil soap, is said to be an excellent article for preserving plants, shrubs, vines, rose bushes, etc. For outdoor, dissolve the soap in the proportion of two pounds to fifteen gallons warm soft water, and when cold, shower the plants thoroughly. One or two applications will generally be found sufficient to destroy these troublesome vermin. For indoor plants, dissolve the soap in the proportion of one pound to nine gallons of soft warm water, and treat the plants as above.

THE WAYS OF TRANSGRESSORS, ETC. The Louisville Journal says, that another drowned man has been taken from the Ohio river, with gold in his pockets to the amount of five hundred dollars. The amount found on the drowned man taken out of the river the day before, was one thousand seven hundred dollars. These two sums make just about the amount stolen from a gentleman on board a steamboat at Louisville, about a week before. The robbers jumped from the after-guards of the boat with the intention of swimming ashore, but it seems that both were drowned.

GREAT REPEAL MEETING IN BOSTON. A tremendous Irish Repeal meeting was held in Boston on Monday evening last, in the Miller Tabernacle, which was filled to its utmost capacity. The meeting was addressed with intense effect by Robert Tyler, Esq., a son of the President of the United States, on the engrossing subject of repeal. In bold and fiery eloquence, he spoke to the heads and hearts of the vast assembly, and traced with indignant severity the history of England's unquenchable hostility to Irish liberty, independence, and moral and religious development. His remarks were received with overwhelming applause, and at the conclusion the meeting gave him three enthusiastic cheers. Eloquent speeches were also made by Z. C. Lee, Esq., of Maryland, Wm. Wallace, Esq., of New York, and I. H. Wright, Esq., editor of the Bay State Democrat. A large sum of money was contributed for the cause.

TRIAL FOR MURDER. Isaac Leavitt of Scituate, who it will be recollected murdered a woman by the name of Mary Knapp, about a year since while in a state of intoxication, has been on trial several days for the murder at the term of the Supreme Court now sitting at Plymouth, and on Wednesday last the jury rendered a verdict of guilty against him.

FOURTH OF JULY. The friends of the slave, in Plymouth County, intend to celebrate the ensuing anniversary of Independence at Hanson. Henry B. Stanton, Esq., of Boston, is to deliver the oration. A good dinner is to be provided, and the services of an excellent band of music secured.

JURYMEN. Messrs. Henry A. Gay and Joseph Burrell were drawn from this town as Grand Jurors and Mr. Joseph Crane as Petit Juror, of the United States District Court, which meets at Boston, on Tuesday next.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. The June number of this excellent juvenile publication, is, as usual, richly stored with reading matter well adapted to amuse, interest and instruct the youthful reader. This work, beautifully embellished with engravings, cannot fail to be a favorite with the class of readers for which it is designed, besides being highly acceptable to parents on account of its moral tendency.

Caleb Gill, Jr., at the Quincy Bookstore, is the publishers' agent for this place and vicinity.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS. The official result of the last trial to elect members of Congress from this State has been published, by which it appears that Hon. Daniel P. King of Danvers, (whig) has been chosen in the Second District by forty votes majority.

In the third, sixth and seventh districts, as before announced, there has been no choice.

DEATH'S DOINGS. References have been made by each of our correspondents to the deaths of several eminent individuals within the last fifteen days, to which we refer the reader's attention.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE

About half-past eleven o'clock in the night, the watchman stationed at the New York Post Office suddenly dropped down on the sidewalk, and, when lifted up, was found to be dead. This is the second watchman who has died under the same circumstances, and on the same spot.

John Slater, the distinguished manufacturer, died last week, in the village of Slatteryville, Rhode Island. He was from England originally, and among the earliest of the pioneers in introducing the manufacture of domestic goods into this country.

An individual, said to be a very respectable citizen of Perry county, (Ala.) has been sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years, for whipping one of his slaves to death.

The prescriptive portion of the Anti-masons in Lancaster county, (Penn.), have had a meeting, and denounced all the Odd Fellows, and appointed a Committee to ascertain and publish the names of such.

At the late democratic State Convention held at Concord, (N. H.) John H. Steele of Peterborough, was nominated for Governor, having received one hundred and fifty votes out of two hundred and twenty, on the first ballot. Hon. Levi Woodbury was President of the Convention.

One of the most humiliating facts elicited at the meeting of the State Washingtonian Society, in Boston, was the statement that one thousand two hundred and forty-one professors of religion in this state have refused to sign the total abstinence pledge!

The Secretary of the United States Treasury has issued proposals for a loan of seven millions of dollars, at five per cent, payable at the pleasure of the United States at any time after ten years.

Horace Greely, editor of the New York Tribune, has been nominated for Vice President of the United States, by the Green Bay Republican.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

NOTICE is hereby given, that, under the Order of the Legislature of 1843, all the Revolutionary Rolls belonging to this State have now been returned, indexed, from Washington, to this office; and that all other evidences of revolutionary service thus far received, have been arranged and indexed, so as to render the search for proof of service comparatively easy and certain. Any person residing in Massachusetts, wishing to obtain proof in support of his claim for a pension, has only to make a direct application in writing to the office, in conformity with the regulations which are given below, and the needful search will be made without any charge or expense whatever, except a fee of twenty-five cents when a certificate, under the seal of the Commonwealth, is furnished. The application should be set forth, as fully as the memory of the claimant will allow, the facts concerning the service. There are supposed to be no honest cases in which some one fact relating to the alleged service cannot be set forth in the application; although there may be many instances in which very little can be remembered. No application, therefore, will be refused; but, in order to guard against an imposition which has been sometimes practised, the rule is established that a fee shall be charged on applicants who do not, in their applications, set forth any fact going to show that their applications are bona fide.

The more full and minute the statement contained in the application, the easier is the search, and the more certain of success is the claimant; for the Pension Commissioner at Washington, in all cases regards an imperfect statement with suspicion.

It is hoped that all persons in Massachusetts entitled to a pension will make immediate application for the needful proof—and make it directly to the Secretary—thus saving to themselves the needless expense of any agent or attorney. Their applications will always be promptly acted upon, and all needful assistance will be cheerfully furnished. Suitable blank forms of application, and of other needful papers, may be obtained, by mail or otherwise, from this office.

As it is supposed that there are many paupers in Massachusetts who are entitled to pensions, such unfortunate persons and the overseers of the poor, in their various towns, are respectfully informed that their applications will, in all cases, when presented conformably to the regulations, be attended to without any charge.

JOHN A. BOLLES, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

PENSION REGULATIONS ABOVE REFERRED TO.

1. Every application requiring search, or certificate, must be made to the Secretary, in writing, by the claimant, or by some person duly authorized by the claimant; and the signature to the application, and to the power of attorney, must be attested by some magistrate.

2. The application must set forth (as fully as the circumstances of the case will allow,) the residence and service of the soldier, and the names of the officers under whom he served; and no search will be made until after the filing of such written application.

3. Where the claimant resides in Massachusetts, and the application contains a full statement of the service, the only fee charged will be twenty-five cents for the certificate and seal. Where the claimant is resident in another State, or where the application is so indefinite as to require a general search of all the rolls, a fee of not less than three dollars will be required to be paid before search is made.

NOTE—These Regulations are predicated upon, and rendered necessary by the Rules of the Pension Office at Washington, of which the following is a copy, viz: "REGULATIONS to be observed in the examination of the Massachusetts Revolutionary Papers in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth."

"The application must be made to the Secretary in writing, by the claimant, or by some person duly authorized by the claimant, by a written power of attorney, attested by a magistrate. The signature of the claimant must in all cases be attested in like manner."

Medical aid in Boston.

DR. BUTLER, NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as prevalent to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the false description of their infallible specific, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

POETRY.

"WHY DON'T HE COME?"
The shadows of the evening stretch
Across the dewy plain,
The brilliant orb of day has sunk
To western worlds again;
The stars are glittering in the sky,
The moon is shining bright,
And as I muse my heart forebodes
He will not come to-night.

I listen to the moaning winds
That round my dwelling sigh,
A shade of sadness o'er me steals,
A tear bedims mine eye;
My sickening heart within me dies,
My tongue for grief is dumb,
Alone I weep the hours away—
Alas! why don't he come?

This foolish heart of mine ne'er dreamed
That he could faithfully prove,
When in his too confiding ear,
He poured his tale of love;
But now I rue his broken vows—
Why does he thus delay?
Why does he leave me thus to mourn?
What keeps my love away?

The clock has told the hour of one,
Still I my vigils keep;
I'll to my couch, but not to rest—
My business is to weep;
My waking dreams of bliss are fled,
My fondest hopes are vain—
Fly, ye bright visions of the past,
He ne'er will come again!

HOPE.
How many there are who sing and dream
Of happier seasons coming,
And ever is fancy, to catch a beam
Of a Golden Era, roaming!
The world may grow old, and young again—
And the hope of a better still remain.

Hope comes with life at its dawning hour;
Hope sports with the infant creeper;
Hope cheers up the youth with her magic power;
And when, too, the gray-haired weeper
Has closed in the grave his weary round,
He plants the tree of Hope on the mound.

It is not an empty, vain deceit,
In the brains of fools created;
It speaks to the soul of a state more meet,
Where its longings shall be stated;
And the promise the indwelling voice thus makes
To the hoping soul—it never breaks.

TWILIGHT HOUR.
How sweet at the close of a summer day,
To hear the murmuring water at play,
To sleep by its side in the cooling shade,
Or rove 'mid flowers in some fairy glade,
How sweet to think on times that are gone,
When echoes answered our merry song,
Yet how mournful to think those days are past,
And that of childhood's hours we've seen our last.

At twilight's hour my thoughts go back,
And trace the scenes in childhood's track;
I think on the friends that I ever loved best,
But they have long since gone to their place of rest;
I think of many a merry ramble,
Through tangled woods and bush and bramble;
I think of the home of my childhood's hours,
Where grew the lovely woodbine's flowers;
I think of my playmates who are all dead,
And the sod now covers each youthful head.

ASSOCIATIONS.
There's not a heart, however rude,
But hath some little flower
To brighten up its solitude,
And scent the evening hour.

There's not a heart, however cast
By grief and sorrow down,
But hath some memory of the past
To love and call its own.

ANECDOTES.

A buffoon at the Court of France complained that a certain great lord had threatened to murder him for cracking a joke. Said Francis—"If he does he shall be hanged in five minutes after." "Please your majesty," says the fool, "I wish you would hang him five minutes before."

A great crowd being gathered round a poor cobbler who had just justified his last, some one asked, "What is here?" "Only a cobbler's end," replied Stephen.

"I shall die happy," said the expiring husband to the wife who was weeping most dutifully by the bedside. "If you will promise not to marry that object of my unceasing jealousy, your cousin John." "Make yourself quite easy, love," said the expectant widow; "I am engaged to his brother."

"Well, you're a bright boy, truly!" said the captain of a merchantman to an Irish sailor who had just come on deck, after a twenty-four hours' nap. "How do you manage to snooze at such an unmerciful rate?" "Captaining, dear," replied Barney, rubbing his eyes, "whenever I do go to sleep, I pay attention to it!"

"Madam," said a druggist the other day to a lady who was examining some Cologne. "I assure you it is an excellent article, and if you will condescend to purchase the extreme extension of your proboscis to the enclosed office of the bottle, you will perceive the truth of my assertion."

A coxcomb, talking of the transmigration of souls, said, "In the time of Moses, I have no doubt I was the golden calf." "Very likely," replied a lady—time has robbed you of nothing but the gilding."

"What are you at now?" asked a mamma of her daughter, who was thrumming on the piano with the windows wide open. "She is beating up for recruits—drumming for a husband," cried an old bachelor who chanced to be passing the house at the moment.

"My dear sir," said an advocate of temperance to a "hard case," "intemperance is the spirit of the present time." "Yes, I know it is," said the lover of juleps, "but I should prefer the spirit of the past to the spirit of the present."

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Breast, and Diseases arising from an indolent use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.
THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.
To prevent imitations, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Savings Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wymann Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.
I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.
I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.
Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum.

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Slow Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who has been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

FLORENCE WHART

The apartment was half darkened by window shutters, so that the tenuous sunlight stole softly and surreptitiously into the room, and falling on the shadowed side of a young girl who lay on a sofa, she looked up at a book on a shelf, and might have seen eighteen summers, or, though still light and graceful, rounded and voluptuous outline of personhood. As she slept there, never a beautiful picture. Her head reclined on her arm, bringing one snowy shoulder to view, and showing the swelling of her breast and the softness of her breathing. On her golden curls fell in masses, flicking, slant sunbeams; while one tress, escaping the rest, stole by her lips, down on where it fluttered in every breath, warm blush suffused her cheek, even in the rose light, enveloping face and neck. One little foot peeped beneath her rumpled dress, over the sofa. The whole was a picture that would have loved to paint.

A light step entered the apartment of the sleeper stood by the door, too, was beautiful, though older, a more intellectual face. Dark curls, a brow revealing in ivory whiteness expression of sweetness almost untutored the attractions of the new, rested by the picture, she stood over gazing admiringly on her. The mouth of the latter parted in a smiling peep at the pearly teeth and putting lips; then she murmured in a dream, the crimson on her cheek, even in the ruby light. The low, were distinguishable by the over whose face came a deadly pallor, seemed to hesitate a moment, whether the room or not; then tenderly shutter still further to keep the face of her sister, she retired slowly door. Just then the sleeper turned her eyes, and with a warmer glow the corner of the sofa, and passed her dreams.

The elder sister, on leaving the room, stood by the door, and when she reached the apartment she could only totter to which throwing herself, she burst into tears, for a time giving utterance to sobs and groans. At length, found words.

"Oh! it is too true—she loves me!—and I must either rival her, or give up the dearest treasure of my only father, as she raised her eyes to heaven, 'guide me in this extreme, teach me how to do aright, for tempted,' and amid her broken sobs, while impossible to distinguish, she said again she resumed.

"Could this blow have been so sainted mother, when you left child to my care, and bid me to let parent to her, little did you dream ever be called on to make this sacrifice what else can I do? It was heart to be disappointed in her childhood her every wish has been but I—I have been used to trials, appointment that would send her grave, will only crush more my heart. It must—it shall be done! I will look up enthusiastically, tending through her heroic eyes, the last offering I have to my sister, oh! dearest mother—wilt thou bless thy child in the struggle that to undertake."
